Walters Railroads In South To Merge, Wall Street Hears

Atlantic Coast Line, Louisville and Nashville and N., C. & St. L. Involved in Combination.

STOCKS' RISE LENDS COLOR TO REPORTS

President Mapother Declines to Comment, While President Cole Is Ignorant of Big Deal.

New York, December 5.—(AP)—Plans for the consolidation of the railroads controlled by Henry Walters and his associates, including the Atlantic Coast Line, the Louisville and Nashville and the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis, were reported under way in Wall street today, although official confirmation was lacking.

Color was given to the rumors by the rise in the stocks of all three companies to new high records.

The Atlantic Coast Line at present controls the Louisville and Nashville, which in turn controls the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis and several smaller lines.

Wall street has known for some time that the Walters interests desired to combine all properties under one system for unified control and operation.

Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis shares today rose 9 points to 179, while Louisville and Nashville jumped 4 points to above 141. Atlantic Coast Line reached a new peak price at 241 3-4.

PRESIDENT MOPATHER DECLINES TO COMMENT

Louisville, December 5.—(AP)—Officials in the office of the general manager of the Louisville and Nashville railroad today said they "know nothing about" the proposed merger of the Walters roads—the Atlantic Coast Line, the Louisville and Nashville, and the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis.

W. L. Mapother, president of the L. & N., declined to comment on the report.

PRESIDENT COLE KNOWS NOTHING OF MERGER.

Nashville, Tenn., December 5.—(AP) With reference to the rumored merger of the Atlantic Coast Line, Louisville & Nashville, and Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis railroad systems, W. R. Cole, president of the last named system, said this afternoon he knew nothing of it.

"If any negotiations have been entered into looking to a merger of these roads, it is news to me. So far as I know, such is not the case."

WEATHER BUREAU EXPECTING FREEZE, THEN MODERATION

Clear, crisp weather with freezing temperature this morning was forecast Saturday by C. F. von Herrmann. The thermometer will rise this afternoon, giving Atlanta a pleasant, agreeable day, he declared.

The freeze is not expected to be severe enough or of sufficient duration to damage water pipes and automobile radiators, Mr. von Herrmann said.

A high pressure area from over Montana and the Dakotas is flowing down the Mississippi valley, bringing with it the cold, Mr. von Herrmann said.

The thermometer registered 40 degrees as a minimum Saturday morning, and will go to between 30 and 32 degrees this morning, it was said.

Conditions are pleasant over the entire country, Mr. von Herrman pointed out Saturday. He expects the weather to be considerably warmer by Monday.

TURN THERE RIGHT NOW

MUCH POLITICAL NOISE EXPECTED IN NEXT CONGRESS

Little Legislation Looked For With All Eyes Turned Toward Congressional Elections Next Fall.

BY THOMAS L. STOKES.

Washington, December 5.—The last few members of congress are parking their baggage here, putting their desks in order, digging out bills which have slept soundly through other days for another trial and otherwise preparing for the coming session—expected to be very noisy politically.

Little legislation is looked for during the session which begins Monday. Eyes are turned toward the congressional elections next fall, and there will be lots of talking for the gallery, especially in the senate.

Plenty on Schedule.

Yet there are plenty of legislative matters upon schedule, and some important legislation will be enacted, chief of which will be the tax reduction bill.

The complete tax bill as drafted by the house ways and means committee came from the printer Friday, and will be taken up by the house almost before the ink is dry. Chairman Green, of the committee, will report the bill Monday, and will move that the house begin its consideration Tuesday. It should finish its journey through the house before the Christmas holidays, whence it will go to a senate committee, where some revision is expected before it goes to the senate for action.

Appropriation Bills.

After it sends the tax bill on to the senate, the house will begin the tedious consideration of appropriation bills, of which there are a dozen important ones. That will take the house well into March, it is figured, leaving the rest of the session for other legislation.

The house will be rather quiet. The whirlwind will begin to rise in the senate about December 17, when the world court protocol comes up for debate. No one has yet predicted how long debate will last. If it drags unnecessarily long, it may be shut off for the tax bill. Other foreign matters upon which the senate, as well as the house, must act are the several debt settlements formulated during the recess.

Western republicans are still demanding farm relief. Railroad legislation, in the form of a consolidation measure and revision of the Esch-Cummins act, may get before congress, but republican leaders, it is learned, will choke it off if it appears that it would raise controversial questions and cause prolonged bickering. Aviation, of course, will be a major subject. The administration's desire for certain centralized control of the shipping board will cause a flare-up, especially from southern democrats.

A number of investigations appear certain. Senator Walsh, of Montana, wants further light on some oil matters. Senator Couzens, of Michigan, would like to see his investigation of the internal revenue bureau continued, and a probe into the conduct of the alien property custodian's office appears probable as a result of the indictment of its former head, Thomas W. Miller.

SOLONS PROTEST MILNER LETTER

Several Representatives Deny They Wrote Opposing Extra Legislature Session.

Although Governor Clifford Walker continued his policy of silence regarding the proposed extra session of the legislature, he gave out Saturday extracts from a number of letters he had received from members of the legislature. These all either announced the writers had changed their views and now are inclined to favor the session or declared they always had approved it and protested against inclusion of their names in the list of alleged opponents, made public several days ago by Representative J. Herman Milner, of Dodge county.

While the governor refused to make any statement regarding his plans for the proposed session, an announcement that he would be in Washington next week and that he had accepted an invitation to speak in Boston on January 18, was construed by observers to indicate that, if the extra session should be called, it would not be in the near future.

Representative Robert H. Humphrey, of Emanuel county, has written Governor Clifford Walker denying published statements that he is opposed to the proposed extra session.

Representative Humphrey, said the governor, wrote that he never has opposed the extra session and never replied to any letter from Representative Milner.

Representative W. R. Jones, of Meriwether, also has written that the

WOODBURY MAN FATALLY SHOT FROM AMBUSH

Death Car Blocks Highway and Body of J. D. Carroll, Prominent Citizen, Found at Wheel.

ALL STORES CLOSE AS NEWS SPREADS

Tragedy Marks Third Death in Woodbury Section in Short Time—No Clues to Carroll Slayers.

Woodbury, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—John D. Carroll, 45, prominent merchant, large land owner and extensive peach grower of this section, was found dead in his automobile tonight at 8 o'clock, about two miles out of town on the road leading to his home, having been shot, presumbaly, from ambush, as he went home to supper.

Death Car Blocks Road.

Automobilists finding the road blocked, stopped and investigated and the slumped form of Mr. Carroll still at the wheel, greeted them. Blood was streaming from two wounds in the head, made by bullets. He died instantly, it was thought.

As soon as the news of the tragedy became known, scenes of wildest excitement prevailed here, practically all stores in town closing, the people gathering to view the body and to visit the scene of the killing. Others formed posses to scour the vicinity of the death spot in an effort to obtain clues to the shooting.

T. J. Marshall, justice of the peace, immediately empaneled a jury and began investigation into the killing. After about two hours of investigation the jury adjourned until Sunday.

The body of Mr. Carroll was carried to his home, about two miles beyond the spot where he was found.

Mr. Carroll was one of the most prominent men in Woodbury and Meriwether county. In addition to his mercantile and peach interests, he was a member of the local school board and took active part in all civic affairs of the community.

He is survived by his widow, three daughters and three sons.

The tragedy tonight follows closely the finding of the body of Chilton Brown in the Flint river near here, Friday a week ago, by Professor Webb Tatum, principal of the Woodbury High school, and Berry Martin, members of a searching party who had looked for Brown since his disappearance the Tuesday before. Just one week ago today, four men were arrested in Woodbury for the death of Brown. They were "Judge" Owen, his son, Walter, and Clifford and Sam Doggett, who were carried to Thomaston jail, charged with the murder of Brown.

Two Deaths Recently.

Tonight's tragedy also recalls the killing here about six weeks ago of Charles Barker, shot, it was claimed, by Chilton Brown, who was freed by a coroner's jury.

As far as known here, neither of these killings had anything to do with the death of Mr. Carroll, it was stated here tonight.

Officers tonight were making a thorough search for clues leading up to Carroll's death in an effort to arrest the slayer.

Legion Lifts A.E.F. Hero From Poverty

Plight of Hero Brings Good Position, Compensation Check and Happiness.

BY H. C. HAMILTON.

So long as human hearts beat with sympathetic understanding there will be a Santa Claus. No matter what someone may tell you, rest assured that Christmas does come with joy for the distressed and love for the lonely.

Walter J. Fillyaw, formerly a private in the A. E. F., who wears the distinguished service cross, awarded by the United States for extreme bravery in action, discovered this fact Saturday after news of his almost destitute plight had been published in The Constitution. Fillyaw, who plunged into the roaring hell of Flanders and dragged to medical attention so many wounded men he could not count them, was found by a Constitution representative selling bananas on the streets of Atlanta for a living with the cross of bravery pinned to his coat lapel.

When Argonne Post No. 1, American Legion, got through reading The Constitution Friday morning its members went into action again. Ready to prove that a buddy still is a buddy, even though the olive drab and helmet are laid away, its members began to hustle for Filliyaw. The veterans' bureau, shocked by news brought to it by a committee from the legion of the plight of this brave soldier who risked his life that others might have a chance for life, also got busy.

The results of this combined effort are that Fillyaw has laid aside his banana basket and has a good job

Sims Warns City Against Increases In Pay of Workers

Wholesale Salary Raises Will Endanger Prospects for Lower Water Rates, Says Mayor.

BOOSTS WILL COST ATLANTA $700,000

City and County Workers Ask Minimum Pay of $100 for "Semi-Skilled" and Clerical Forces.

Mayor Walter A. Sims, back in his offices Saturday after a weeks' absence in Florida, when advised that wholesale salary increases affecting 3,000 city employees which, if put into effect, would involve an annual expenditure of around $700,000, was to be considered by city council Monday, sounded a note of warning.

"If it is the wish of taxpayers that these sweeping increases be put into effect," he said, "it should be remembered that money must be obtained from some source to meet the heavier pay rolls. It also should be remembered that prospects for lower water rates or holding the tax burden to its present basis will be given a severe jolt."

"The initiative was invoked for the first time by the firemen this year," the mayor said. "The city's attorneys ruled that the mayor and council had no discretionary powers but that it was mandatory for them to submit the firemen's petition to the people at the polls."

Ask $100 Pay Minimum.

Resolutions were adopted unanimously by several hundred members, attending the meeting of the City and County Public Service Employees' union at the Labor temple Saturday night, requesting city council to adopt a minimum wage standard of $100 a month for all "semi-skilled" and clerical employees of all city departments; a 15 per cent increase in salaries of all employees now making $1,200 to $3,000 a year; and a 10 per cent increase for all employees making over $3,000 a year. These resolutions were introduced by D. C. Bowles, president of the union and an employee of the city construction department.

Teachers Voted Raises.

Salary increases ranging from 18 to 30 per cent and involving an annual expenditure next year of approximately $50,000, were voted all Fulton county school teachers by the county board of education Saturday morning. Action of the board was final as the county has the right to expend its allocated funds independent of the county commission.

The salary issue will occupy the center of attention on the floor of city council Monday afternoon.

Following the firemen's victory in a public referendum Wednesday for substantial increases for members of the department, and the recommendations drafted by the water committee fixing a monthly minimum wage scale of $100 for all "semi-skilled and clerical employees in that department," council committees governing the city construction department, the parks department and the municipal garage met Saturday and voted increases aggregating $55,000 a year.

Alderman Guy Dobbs, a member of the police committee, has drawn a paper calling for salary increases for policemen in the same amounts voted for the firemen and Councilman W. E. Saunders said he would prepare a Request for Alimony and Counsel Fees Follows Her Victory Against "Blue Blood" Husband.

RHINELANDER WIFE HAVING WON SUIT, ASKS SEPARATION

White Plains, N. Y., December 5. (AP)—Leonard Kip Rhinelander, young member of a socially prominent family, who today lost his suit from annulment of his marriage to Alice Beatrice Jones, mulatto, a former housemaid, now faces a suit for separation by his wife.

Announcement that summons and complaints in the suit for separation have been issued was made by Alice Rhinelander's counsel, Lee Parsons Davis, soon after the jury in the annulment case had returned a verdict favorable to the woman. The papers in the separation action include a request for alimony and counsel fees, but Mr. Davis did not reveal the amount asked.

Mills Will Appeal.

Immediately after announcement of the jury's verdict, Isaac N. Mills, chief counsel for Rhinelander, announced that he would appeal the verdict.

Although the jury was not empowered to pass upon the granting of an annulment, its findings on seven questions propounded to it will serve as a basis for the decision of Justice Morschauser, who presided at the trial.

Davis had said in court during the trial that Alice and her husband never could live together again, regardless of the outcome of that case. This would be impossible, he said, because of the way they "besmirched each other" during the trial.

Never Deceived Husband.

The jury in its decision returned today found that the woman never had deceived her husband as to her negro blood. Answering one of the questions, the jury expressed its opinion that he would have married her, even had he known she was of negro blood.

When the jury's answers had been read, Rhinelander's counsel moved to have the verdict set aside as being contrary to the weight of evidence. Justice Morschauser reserved decision on this motion. He announced that he will render his decision as to the annulment within a few days and requested Rhinelander's attorney to file a brief on his objections to the jury.

Rhinelander Not In Court.

Rhinelander was not in the courtroom when the verdict was returned. He had remained at his room at the Hotel Gramatan, at Bronxville, and the verdict was read over the telephone to him by a private detective, who has been acting as his personal bodyguard.

Alice Rhinelander, surrounded by members of her family, was present when the verdict was read. She received the verdict calmly. Later, when leaving the court room, she said:

"I'm thankful for the verdict. I always loved Leonard. I'm too tired to talk any more at this time."

She added, however, in answer to questions, that she would never again live with her husband.

Rhinelander was less communicative. Through his bodyguard he gave out from the Hotel Gramatan a brief statement, saying that Mr. Mills' announcement of an appeal was concurred in by him.

Answers favorable to Mrs. Rhine-

Final Appeal for Chest Funds As Campaign Comes to Close

For four weeks 400 Atlantans have worked day and night to raise $666,000 for the support of the agencies represented by Atlanta's Community Chest, and today they are nearly $200,000 short of the goal.

Monday night this campaign closes.

Atlanta will then have written her verdict.

That verdict means SUCCESS or FAILURE on the part of our city in the ONE campaign of the year in behalf of the unfortunates.

It means clothes and food and shelter for the babies and children—the sick and the incurable, in the Florence Crittenden home, the Home for the Friendless, the Sheltering Arms, the Old Woman's home, the Home for Incurables, and care and attention for the other 29 of Atlanta's institutions. Or it means disaster and disruption in these agencies and that the unified effort each year must be replaced with 34 separate appeals.

You can make the effort what you want it to be.

The 400 workers have done their part—more can not be asked of them.

But, have you done your part?

If you are financially well-to-do, have you given to 34 agencies in line with your wealth?

If you are a woman, financially independent, have you really given what your heart would this Sunday morning approve?

If you are a wage-earner, have you contributed in proportion to your wage?

If you are a laboring man, have you shown by your gift the sympathy you feel for Atlanta's unfortunates?

If YOU ARE YOU, whoever you are, is your conscience clear that you have done your part?

If your answer is "Yes," Atlanta and the unfortunate are your debtors.

If your answer is "No," you have not fulfilled the call of your citizenship.

AND ATLANTA MUST SUFFER.

Please think this out quietly this Sunday morning—and do your part toward making the verdict one that will bless Atlanta and insure protection for her unfortunates.

We have a feeling that you will respond—and that by 12 o'clock Monday you will send to the Community Chest what you ought to have given if you have already subscribed; or your subscription for what you should give if you have not subscribed.

It will be a great thing for Atlanta if the quiet thought of her people today will make possible on Monday a verdict declaring that she cares for her own.

IMPEACHMENT SESSION FADES IN TEXAS ROW

Attorney General Rules Financing or Underwriting of Expenses Unauthorized, Unwarranted

PETITION SIGNERS WITHDRAW NAMES

Ferguson Scores Moody for Deserting Crowd. Hits Foes Among Texas Millionaires.

Austin, Texas, December 5.—(AP)—Financing or underwriting of the expenses of a special session of the Texas house of representatives for impeachment purposes from private or individual sources is unauthorized and unwarranted as against public policy, Attorney General Dan Moody, of Texas, ruled tonight.

The ruling was made at the request of Lee Satterwhite, speaker of the Texas house of representatives.

This opinion held there would be no authority to issue warrants against exhausted appropriations, made for the contingent expenses of the 39th legislature, to cover compensation of members of the house while attending an impeachment session, should it be called by the speaker.

It states that the attorney general assumed that the speaker in his letter made no reference to deficiency warrants issued against a deficiency granted by the governor.

Special Session Wanes.

Coming at a time when rumors were afloat in the Texas capital that the number of signers on the petition of legislators, asking the speaker to call a special session December 15 for January 4, 1926, in event that the governor does not by December 10, had been reduced to 49 members, support of the special session appeared on the wane.

But as the petition is in the hand of Speaker Satterwhite, the conclusion drawn by numerous special correspondents and dispatched today that only 49 members still had their names on the petition, was denied to The Associated Press by the speaker in Amarillo. He said only one member had withdrawn his name, while more than 60 had sanctioned calling the special session.

Political Rumors Rife.

With the political battle somewhat quieted between the principals, numerous reports are being heard. They ranged today from the intimation that Governor Ferguson would seek re-election, to the expressed opinion of Arthur R. Reidson, of Hamilton, chairman of the democratic state executive committee, that he did not believe that either of the Fergusons would enter the gubernatorial race next year. However, he said, he had not discussed politics with the Fergusons in his conferences here.

Another issue that looms in the political war is the convening of Travis county grand jury, Monday.

Thief Routed Trying To Rob Murphy Home

Mrs. John E. Murphy Surprises Young Man Ransacking Room.

A white burglar, apparently about 21 years old and neatly dressed, was frightened away from the home of Mrs. John E. Murphy, of 979 Peachtree street, Saturday night just after dark when she returned home.

Mrs. Murphy told police that when she returned home from town she noticed a light in an upper window. She investigated and surprised the young robber ransacking the room. She screamed and he ran past her downstairs and out of doors.

Call Officers G. E. Williams and J. H. Cranshaw investigated but were unable to find clues. Nothing was missing from the home so far as could be ascertained.

C. E. Langford, of 54 Spring street, reported to Detective Pate Saturday night that his pocket had been picked of $60 in money, an automobile tag and some papers as he was waiting for a street car at Broad and Marietta streets. He said that he suspected a large, black negro, about 25 years old and wearing a brown suit.

George Smith, of 166 1-2 Auburn avenue, reported the theft of a bay horse and green wagon. The wagon had red wheels, he said.

A sneak thief among a crowd of Christmas shoppers late Saturday made a valuable haul when a platinum wrist watch set with 20 diamonds and sapphires was stolen from Mrs. J. B. Bradley, of 2707 West End avenue, Nashville, Tenn. Three other thefts were reported to police during the day.

Mrs. Bradley told police that she was on her way home from Florida and had stopped in Atlanta to do

Hardman Enters Governor's Race In 1926 Primary

Announcement of Prominent Commerce Citizen Received in Wire to Constitution.

HOKE SMITH URGED TO ENTER PRIMARY

Howard Ennis Formally In Race With Smith, Napier and Neill Probable Entries.

Following the report that ex-United States senator and Governor Hoke Smith had written to friends that he was now considering making the race for governor, to succeed Governor Clifford Walker, Dr. W. G. Hardman, of Commerce, on Saturday, wired The Constitution as follows:

"I hereby announce my candidacy for governor of Georgia subject to primary 1926."

It will be seen that this is a positive announcement, putting Dr. Hardman squarely and finally in the race. This definite announcement undoubtedly is prompted by the certainty that former Senator Smith is seriously contemplating entering the race.

Captain Howard Ennis, of Milledgeville, president of the state senate, has previously announced his candidacy, thus making two positive announcements, with Senator Smith as a probable candidate, as the result of the urging of friends throughout the state that he make the race.

It is also considered possible that W. Cecil Neill, of Columbus, speaker of the house of representatives, will be a candidate. It is known that his many friends throughout the state are expecting his entry into the contest.

Attorney General George M. Napier has let it be known that he also is seriously considering entering the race, and there have been several other prospective candidates mentioned, as likely to enter the primaries.

WRITERS COMBINE TO FORESTALL FOX CORNER ON PLAYS

40 New York Dramatists Consider Applying For Membership in American Labor Federation.

New York, December 5.—(AP)—Forty leading New York dramatists, composing the Dramatists' Guild of the Authors' League of America, Inc., are considering applying for membership in the American Federation of Labor, or taking some drastic action to forestall what they construe as an attempt on the part of William Fox, motion picture producer, to corner the New York play market.

A meeting of the playwrights last night was attended by Arthur Richman, Channing Pollock, Hartley Manners, Owen Davis, George Middleton, Rio Cooper Megrue and other authors of like standing. The writers are much alarmed over the situation and believe some action on their part is imperative.

Admit Approaching Producers.

Maurice Revnes, production manager of the William Fox corporation, admitted today that Fox representatives have approached a number of New York's leading producers, and that "contracts are about to be signed" with them, whereby Fox will finance the producers in the production of plays for the legitimate stage. The names of the producers are not divulged and could not be learned from them. It is reported, however, that the proposed arrangement would form a most powerful combination in the New York theatrical world.

As explained by Mr. Revnes and other Fox officials, the negotiations under consideration have the following features:

Mr. Fox agrees to finance a producer in the production of a play for the legitimate stage. He gets his share of the profit from the production and reserves the right to pass upon the play before it is purchased. He also, of course, has the opportunity to bid against other producers for the motion picture rights. A similar arrangement is under consideration in each instance, officials state.

Reason for Action.

Fox spokesmen insisted that the action is considered because the Fox company finds it impossible to get a sufficient number of stage hits for filming each year, and that, by financing producers of stage plays, Mr. Fox hopes to stimulate production and thus have a greater number of plays from which to choose each year. They declare that no further advantage, save the profits which result while the play is "on the boards," will be enjoyed by the Fox interests.

The dramatists charge that the arrangement would eliminate competition when the motion picture rights to plays were up for sale, in that Fox would be the only bidder. They feel that with five of the leading New York producers working in a combination, the field for marketing their plays would be greatly restricted. A comparatively small number

5 CITY FIREMEN ARE SUSPENDED

Men Charged With Reporting for Duty While Under Influence of Liquor, Say Officials.

Five city firemen have been suspended within the last 36 hours by order of Guy Dobbs, alderman and chairman of the council fire committee, following reports by captains of their respective engine houses that they had reported for duty under influence of intoxicants, Mr. Dobbs said.

Each of the five men is slated for trial before the fire committee at 11 o'clock Monday morning, it was announced.

Alderman Dobbs declined to divulge names of the suspended men

"I want it made very plain," said Mr. Dobbs, "that there was no politics in their suspensions, however. I expect to deal fearlessly and impartially with the men in this department. Any time a superior officer reports to me any similar infraction of the rules by any fireman, I will take the same course of action."

Fire Chief Cody also declined to give the names of the firemen, declaring that the action had been taken by the chairman of the committee and, therefore, any statement should come from the chairman.

The firemen under suspension, it was learned, were Supernumeraries Waggoner, Britt, Cook and Swanson and Fireman Taylor, engineer of No. 6 company.

Al Smith Home Again Invaded By Romance

New York Governor Learns of Son's Marriage After Becoming Grandfather.

New York, December 5.—(AP)—Romance has again invaded the home of Governor Al Smith. A year ago Al Smith, Jr., eloped with Miss Bertha Gott, of Syracuse, when he was just 23. About the same time it is now revealed, his younger brother, Arthur, the governor's second son, then not quite 18, held an elopement of his own.

Arthur was secretly married to Miss Ann Hess, his own age, of Albany, but kept the wedding a secret until a few days ago, when his wife became a mother. Then the governor and Mrs. Smith, for the first time, learned of the romance of their young college son. Details of the marriage have not been revealed.

Miss Hess is a daughter of Joseph M. Hess, engaged in the plumbing business in Albany. She is a friend of Catherine Smith, Arthur's sister, and has frequently been a guest at the executive mansion.

Over the telephone from Albany, the governor confirmed the news of the marriage, and said that Arthur and his bride were away. "I am sort of sorry it happened," he said. "Both of them are very young—about 19—but after all, it's his and her affair, and we are satisfied if they are."

LEADERS PLEDGE AID TO WATSON MEMORIAL

In an enthusiastic meeting of district chairmen of the Thomas E. Watson Memorial association held Saturday at the state headquarters in the Ansley hotel, a substantial sum of money was subscribed voluntarily by chairmen and all pledged themselves to wage intensive campaigns to complete the work by December 10, when the first phase of the work is expected to be completed.

One of the features of the meeting was the appearance of Mrs. Georgia Lee Brown, granddaughter of the late United States Senator Thomas E. Watson, who is to be honored in a monument to be erected by the association on the state capitol grounds. Mrs. Brown expressed the appreciation of the members of the family for the work of the people of Georgia in preparing a memorial in his honor.

Aggressive campaign work will be waged in all parts of the state, according to James H. Boykin, president of the memorial association, who presided at the meeting, and pointed out that people of all political affiliations are aiding in the movement to erect the memorial.

Some of the leading men in Georgia attended the meeting and agreed that the memorial campaign should be waged to a successful conclusion. Among those present were Judge B. F. Walker, Wrens; Judge John P. Knight, Nashville; Chief Justice Richard B. Russell, of the Georgia supreme court; J. O. Wood, representative in the legislature from Fulton county; Paul Brown, Elberton; John I. Kelley, Lawrenceville; Judge R. C. Bell, court of appeals; J. J. Barge, C. W. Foy, Butler; Martin Amorous, Marietta; C. W. McClure, Atlanta; W. L. Denton, Dallis; R. B. Gaston, Americus; J. E. Bodenhamer, Decatur; George W. Burnett, Carrollton; Dr. C. M. Collum, Benjamin Blackburn, J. L. Cone, R. S. Steele, Atlanta; Judge James K. Hines, supreme court; S. Guyt McLendon, secretary of state; Jeff Brooks, Alpharetta; J. L. Cartledge, Augusta; Judge J. Sixth Sentence Of Death Soon For Taylor Boys

Columbus, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—The remittitur in the case of Willie Jones and Gervis Bloodworth, Taylor county youths, held in the Muscogee county jail here awaiting the fixing of the sixth date for their execution for the confessed murder of Howard F. Underwood, near Reynolds, in Taylor county, on December 3, 1923, has not been received here.

It has been expected that the remittitur would likely be received here the latter part of last week or this week and that Judge C. F. McLaughlin, who is disqualified in the case on account of having been connected with the prosecution before becoming judge would ask Judge C. E. Roop, of Carrollton, before whom they were tried here in May, to come to Columbus for the purpose of fixing the sixth execution date in their case.

Eastman Heads Near East Orphanage in Armenia

H. S. Meredith, at left, who has arrived in Atlanta to assume charge of Near East relief work in the southern states, succeeding H. A. Eastman, at right, who has been appointed superintendent of an orphanage of 5,000 Armenian children. Mr. Eastman and his family will sail at an early date for southern Russia, where he will serve for the next two years at least.

H. A. Eastman, regional director of Near East relief work in six southeastern states for the last three years, with headquarters in Atlanta, has been transferred by his organization to work in southern Russia, and, accompanied by his family, will sail from New York, December 28, it was announced Saturday.

His chief duty in Russia will be to superintend the polygon orphanage housing 5,000 motherless and fatherless Armenian children, survivors of the Turkish massacre and the Smyrna disaster and now being trained for a future citizenship through generosity of Americans who have opened wide their purse strings to make this institution possible.

New Director Here.

H. S. Meredith, who has had wide experience in Near East relief work, will succeed Mr. Eastman as regional director here, and already has arrived to familiarize himself with his new duties.

Mr. Eastman will be virtually the "daddy" to these 5,000 children, who, while not only orphans, are without any known living relatives, and who are being taught some practical vocation that will equip them to be self-sustaining when they reach an age when they may be thrown on their own resources.

The orphanage housing the 5,000 Armenian children is located at Alexandropole. The building formerly was the barracks of the Russian guard during the days prior to the world conflict.

In addition to this work in superintending the orphanage, Mr. Eastman will be associate business manager of Near East relief work now being performed for natives of the Armenian republic, Georgia and Persia.

Warm in Praises.

"The people in the southeastern states have been so splendidly responsive and generous in their support of Near East relief work that I have become fondly attached to this part of our country," Mr. Eastman said. "For that reason, I sincerely regret to leave. But I believe my new duties will give me an opportunity to perform a good work. I expect to keep in touch with Georgians and other good people in this region, and will from time to time send back messages to them.

Mr. Eastman, prior to his connection with Near East relief work, was with the Y. M. C. A. forces overseas, and was regional directer of "Y" work in LeMans, France, one of the largest "Y" areas. After the armistice he was sent to Germany, where he was regional director of Y. M. C. A. activities of the American forces in that country. He has been prominently identified in all civic work in Atlanta, and is well known in the south.

Mr. Eastman and his family have made their residence at 750 Ponce de Leon avenue, and have enjoyed a wide circle of friends. Miss Evelyn Virginia Eastman, a student for one year at Agnes Scott college here, now taking her M. A. degree at Columbia university, will accompany her parents to Russia.

Meredith Well Known.

Mr. Meredith, who has been connected with the Near East relief organization for five years, has served as director of the work in Michigan, Ohio and West Virginia, and more recently has been a member of the national staff in New York. He is familiar with conditions in Europe, having traveled on that continent extensively. In 1923 he was a member of the American good will delegation to Greece, composed of laymen and ministers, who surveyed conditions of that country upon invitation of the Greek government.

"I am glad to take up the work here," said Mr. Meredith, "and if the people accord me anything like the support accorded Mr. Eastman, I am sure this regime will continue its reputation as one of the outstanding ones of the country."

He assumes the offices in the Atlanta Trust company building which Mr. Eastman has occupied for many months, and the regular office personnel is being retained by him, it is learned, to carry on the work through the southern states.

MERCER UNIVERSITY SELECTS DEBATERS

Macon, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—Twelve Mercer university students have been chosen to represent the university on intercollegiate debating teams during the coming year at tryouts held in the Ciceronian Literary society hall, Wednesday.

Those selected were R. Archie Chappell, Jeffersonville; Thomas D. Cobb, Tifton; John G. Gilbert, Brunswick; J. G. Gower, Grayson; Robert L. Gunnels, Elberton; Frank J. Jordan, Talbotton; Charles A. Martin, Rex; Adiel Jarrett Moncrief, Jr., Decatur; J. Alton Morris, Hartwell; Hillyer H. Straton, New York city; Frank S. Twitty, Camilla, and Charles W. Walker, Eatonton.

Four students were already on the teams by virtue of having been debaters at the university for two years in succession. They are Kenneth E. Bray, Norwood; Herbert Bradshaw, Fitzgerald; Millard C. Townsend, Ray City, and J. Eugene Cook, Wrightsville.

The debating council of the university is composed of Dr. Rufus C. Harris, of the law school; Dr. Andrew P. Montague, vice president of the university; Kenneth E. Bray, representing the Phi Delta Literary society, and Herbert Bradshaw, from the Ciceronian society.

A tentative schedule for the debaters for this year has been announced by the council. It follows: To be heard in Macon, the University of Florida, Wake Forest and Furman university. The debaters will leave the city to engage with representatives from Georgia Tech, Oglethorpe and Auburn.

Coolidge's Reply To Lewis Letter Is Kept Secret

Washington, December 5.—(AP)—President Coolidge announced in a formal statement today that he replied to the complaint of John L. Lewis regarding bituminous wage scales, but preferred not to disclose the nature of the reply.

The statement said the president was "anxious that there shall be no possible interference with the efforts now being made by Governor Pinchot, and particularly with the conference planned for next Tuesday."

It was for this reason, it was said, that Mr. Coolidge had chosen to withhold his views from the public.

As head of the United Mine Workers, Lewis had asked the president to state the administration's attitude toward the agreement of the Jacksonville wage agreement in the bituminous coal fields.

The efforts of Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania have been directed at a possible solution of the wage dispute between anthracite operators and miners.

The president's reply was formulated after a series of conferences with Secretaries Hoover and Davis, the latter of the labor department, both of whom have kept in close touch with the coal situation.

The efforts of Governor Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, to bring about a resumption of anthracite mining, which has been suspended since September 1, this far have not been looked upon with favor by the operators. The Tuesday conference referred to in the white house statement is one Governor Pinchot has called at Harrisburg with business men from cities in the anthracite field.

Macon Kiwanis Club Plans Minstrel Show For Charitable Bodies

Macon, Ga., December 5.—(Special.) Miss Fredonia Fraser, who made her appearance in leading grand opera roles last season, is to be the leading lady in a musical comedy to be staged as a prelude to the Kiwanis Minstrels, to be put on at the Grand theater here on the nights of December 8-9. Parson Chandler, of Mercer minstrel fame, will be the leading man in the same production.

Rehearsals have been in progress for some time and according to Harry Foote, director, and those who have witnessed other productions, this is to be the best ever given by this club.

The minstrel show is for the benefit of charitable enterprises which it fosters.

ATLANTA DESIGNATED DISTRIBUTING CENTER

Another national organization, the Universal Car Loading and Distributing company, has selected Atlanta for its southern headquarters, it was announced Saturday by Frederick T. Newell, secretary of the Industrial Bureau of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce. While in Chicago recently Mr. Newell met C. S. Ettynge, president of the company, and furnished him with data concerning advantages of Atlanta and of the vast trade area covered from this city.

The company just added to Atlanta's industrial growth has achieved colossal size since its organization and is doing a nation-wide business in the handling of less-than-car-load merchandise, better known in the business of railroad freight handling as L. C. L. The company from a small beginning in 1924, now employes over 3,000 people. Activities in Atlanta will represent an annual payroll of more than $25,000, it is said.

Atlanta will be the center and assembling point for the southern territory of the Universal company and will receive its shipments from the great industrial districts surrounding New York, Detroit, Cleveland, Cincinnati and Chicago. The executive offices for the southern department will be located at 101 Marietta street building in charge of J. B. Johnson, southern manager.

"The development and growth in the south and the large trade area that is to be served from here will make the Atlanta unit one of the largest handlers of tonnage in our entire system," he said.

The first shipment of this company for the Atlanta district will leave New York December 12.

LAKE LURE PLANNERS HOLD FIRST MEETING

Chimney Rock, N. C., December 5. (Special.)—The first field meeting of town-planning experts, architects and landscape engineers, with bankers and executives of the development company backing the construction of the new Mountain Lake model town, to be called Lake Lure, was held near here Saturday afternoon.

Those in attendance were Earl S. Draper, landscape architect, of Charlotte and Atlanta; Robert Rodes McGoodwin, of Philadelphia, building architect; R. L. Bathurst, landscape specialist, from the University of Pennsylvania; G. H. Anderson, hotel builder and vice president of the Continental Hotel company, of New York city, owner of the Shelton chain of stores in New York, Boston, Baltimore and other places; and Charles Moore, engineer and surveyor, with 20 assistants who had staked out the property.

Maps recently prepared were distributed on the grounds, and the surveyors and engineers explained where the various buildings, streets and improvements would actually be located. The circular roadway, starting at the edge of the lake now being created by the construction of a dam 104 feet tall, five miles below the town site, will form a portion of the 27-mile shore line drive possible around Lake Lure when completed next summer.

HUNTSVILLE KIWANIS CLUB ELECTS OFFICERS

Huntsville, Ala., December 5.—(Special.)—The Huntsville Kiwanis club has announced the election of the following officers for the year: Joseph B. Van Valkenburgh, president; W. S. Mims, first vice president; P. W. Peeler, second vice president; Thomas W. McAllister, secretary; C. J. DeMers, treasurer; L. O. Erwin, district trustee; Cary Gamble, parson; C. E. Baxter, J. C. Beene, C. M. Grace and Thomas W. Jones, directors.

Professor S. R. Butler was elected to represent the club at the meeting of the Alabama Educational bureau in Birmingham December 10.

METHODISTS ELECT AT LAWRENCEVILLE

Lawrenceville, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—At a meeting of the board of stewards of the Methodist church Friday night, G. W. Clower was elected chairman; R. L. Robinson, treasurer; Dr. J. W. Nicholson, treasurer of the Sunday school funds, and G. S. Perry, treasurer of the incidental funds. Mrs. C. U. Born was elected pianist, a position she has held for nearly 30 years.

C. R. Ware is superintendent of the Sunday school.

Rev. J. M. Tumlin was returned to this church at the last conference, and he very ably filled the pulpit during last year.

Foot Square Theater Shows

DAVISON-PAXON-STOKES ENTERTAINS CHILDREN

Real People in Pantomime

There is a new theater in town. An impossible theater, yet a delightful one. A theater especially for children, where the admission is free and where children's stories and fairy tales are enacted on the stage.

It is a theater where the stage is only 12 inches across and 12 inches high. Yet the performers are real, grown, living and breathing persons. And you see them walk across the tiny stage, act just like performers in a real theater, and go through the little children's dramas before scenery and everything, just like a big grown-up theater.

Now to explain the impossibility:

The theater is located on the fifth floor of the great Davison-Paxon-Stokes department store on Whitehall street, the company which is affiliated with Macy, in New York, and which is building the great new store at Peachtree and Ellis streets.

All children are invited to attend this theater free. Performances are given all day long and, as soon as one audience has seen the show and the performers have enjoyed it, the theater is emptied and a new audience let in. Then, as soon as the performers have had a minute or two breathing spell, the show is given again.

The secret of the apparent impossibility of full grown people appearing on so small a stage lies in an arrangement of mirrors. The performers really do their work, which is all in pantomime—which means, if children don't know that word yet, that they act their parts but don't talk—behind the scenes. The stage openings, as said, is 12 by 12 inches. And, after being reflected from mirror to mirror, something on the same system as a periscope, and finally from a concave mirror, the scene is so reduced that it exactly fits the tiny stage opening.

On a dias at the back of the audience, a lovely woman, dressed just like a fairy, with a silver crown and silver wand 'n'everything, reads the story just as it is performed. When she reads that Santa Claus puts the little girl on her head, the real Santa Claus on the stage does put the little girl.

All next week the show to be given is about a little girl who wouldn't behave in school. She was kept in by the teacher and fell asleep. Then she dreams about Santa Claus and you seem him come and talk to her and show her all the wonderful things he has in his bag.

The theater is beautifully decorated, with comfortable seats for the little people in the audience. The fairy who reads the stories mounts the big dias just like a throne.

The new children's theater is to be a permanent part of the big store's attractions. Each week the show will be changed. Nursery stories, fairy tales and original plays for little folk will be given.

Every child in Atlanta will want to see it, not once but many times, and it is probable that in a short time it will become a regular institution with the childhood of the city.

Next week, as stated, the show will be about Santa Claus and the little girl. Go and see it and marvel at it.

For it is the first time that real people ever found it possible to perform on a stage only one foot high by one foot wide.

LUKEMAN'S MODEL GIVEN HIGH PRAISE

Augustus Lukeman's design for the central group of the Stone Mountain Confederate memorial is given high praise by Colonel Lucien Whiting Powell, noted painter, a Confederate soldier, and a colonel on the staff of General W. B. Freeman, commander-in-chief of the United Confederate veterans, in a letter made public here today by the Stone Mountain Confederate Monumental association.

The association sent a picture of Mr. Lukeman's model to department commanders, division commanders, brigade commanders and staff officers of the U. C. V., with a request for an expression of their opinions. The association received a most remarkable response praising the design in the highest terms, which letters were published in the form of a symposium some weeks ago, officials said.

Powell Noted Painter.

Colonel Powell was born in Virginia in 1846, was reared in that state, and now lives in Virginia, at Purcellville. For a third of a century he has ranked with the leading American painters. His painting of the grand canyon of the Yellowstone hangs in the National Gallery in Washington. Other paintings from his brush hang in the city library in Washington, the Mount Pleasant library, the Country Congressional club, the City Congressional club, the American university and Georgetown university. He has one hundred pictures in England and 25 or more in Switzerland. In addition to his paintings in America, he has painted in Egypt, Italy and the Holy Land.

One of his paintings, presented to the Atlanta Museum of Art by Mrs. William Bailey Lamar, hangs in the lobby of the Biltmore hotel.

Officials of the association has received hundreds of letters of thanks for the memorial half dollars and the book, "Memorial to the Valor of the Soldier of the South," from prominent business men all over the country to whom coins and booklets were sent.

Many Replies Received.

Replies received to date are from W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania railroad; S. P. Sanger, of Boston; K. G. Matheson, president of Drexel institute, Philadelphia, and former president of Georgia School of Technology; Lucius S. Storrs, managing director of the advisory council of the American Railway association, New York; B. C. Forbes, president and editor of Forbes Magazine, New York; Dr. H. E. Riggs, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor; R. M. Hofer, publisher of the Manufacturer and Industrial News Bureau, Salem Oregon; Otto H. Kahn, capitalist, New York; John A. Beeler, director of the Beeler organizations, New York; Charles T. Ayer, Boston; Samuel T. Bodine, Philadelphia; Carl D. Jackson, New York, and Thomas B. Clarke, New York, and others.

Elks of Atlanta To Pay Tribute To Dead Today

Atlanta Lodge of Elks, No. 78, will pay tribute at 3 o'clock this afternoon in the Forsyth theater to members of the lodge who have died during the past year.

Edgar Watkins, prominent attorney, will deliver the oration in memory of the dead Elks, substituting for Eugene R. Black, who has been called out of the city. Music will be furnished under direction of E. Volpi.

Dr. W. W. Memminger, rector of All Saints Episcopal church, will serve as chaplain. Mrs. Nora Allen-Volpi will sing "There Is No Death." During the roll of departed brothers, a male quartet will sing. The quartet is composed of Floyd Earwood, W. N. Nichols, Frank and Charles McMillan.

John Clotworthy will sing "No Shadows Yonder," and Mrs. Volpi will then render "When They Ring Those Golden Bells For You and Me." There will also be numbers by a mixed quartet and a double quartet.

Members of Atlanta lodge who died during the past year follow: Joseph H. Philips, J. O. Krahenbuhl, Lee Kahnweiler, W. R. Joyner, John L. Tucker, R. L. Shepherd, John B. Withers, Carl Dolvin, W. B. Guimarin, Ben H. Treadwell, Tom H. Pitt, S. V. Upchurch, Arthur Bainbridge, James W. English, Alonzo Richardson, George F. Huber, P. A. Thompson, J. E. Medlock, Charles J. Carroll, Harvey Hill, G. W. COMMITTEE NAMED TO OBTAIN FUNDS FOR POLICE BAND

Seven prominent citizens were named on a committee Saturday by D. F. Cook, promoter for the police band, to devise ways and means for purchasing instruments for the band. They are Garland Cooper, Guy Dobbs, Cecil Allen, E. C. Hudson, W. B. Hartsfield, A. W. Jones and M. P. Tetty. The committee will meet next Tuesday at 3 o'clock to discuss plans. Practice will be started as soon as the instruments have been obtained.

Chinese Brigand Victims To Speak Here Next Week

:: TAYLORS TO TELL STORY OF KIDNAPING ::

DR. AND MRS. F. HOWARD TAYLOR

Dr. and Mrs. F. Howard Taylor, who became figures of world-wide interest about a year ago when they were captured and held by Chinese brigands, will be in Atlanta for four days of next week, during which they will give numerous talks, describing not only their own thrilling adventures in this little known country but telling also of its desperate needs.

Dr. and Mrs. Taylor are both connected with the China Inland Mission, a huge interdenominational missionary movement in China founded 60 years ago by Dr. Taylor's father, J. Hudson Taylor, and which without solicitation or denominational support has grown from the single efforts of Hudson Taylor into an organization which has 1,134 foreign missionaries in active service.

Meetings In Atlanta.

Scheduled meetings of the Taylors in Atlanta, are as follows:

Sunday, December 13; Dr. Taylor at North Avenue Presbyterian church at the 11 o'clock service and at the Druid Hills Methodist church at the 8 o'clock night service. Mrs. Taylor at St. Paul Methodist church at the 11 o'clock morning service and at the Capitol Avenue Baptist church at the 8 o'clock night service.

Monday both at Oglethorpe university in the morning and Mrs. Taylor at the North Avenue Presbyterian church at 8 o'clock that night.

Tuesday, Mrs. Taylor at Agnes Scott college in the morning at 9:55 o'clock and both at North Avenue Presbyterian church at 8 o'clock at night.

Wednesday, both at Emory university in the morning and both at a union meeting to be held that night in the Decatur Presbyterian church.

Captured by Brigands.

Dr. and Mrs. Taylor have represented China in important gatherings on both sides of the Atlantic for years. During their last visit to China they spent three years in investigating the mission work in 15 provinces, especially in Honan province, which is larger than England, containing more than 40,000,000 inhabitants. This work, which took them to the borders of Tiber and Mongolia, had hardly been completed when they were kidnaped by Chinese brigands. Dr. Taylor was held prisoner for weeks, suffering many indignities and privations at the hands of this desperate band, while Mrs. Taylor was compelled to make a dangerous and arduous journey home to carry back to civilization the demands of the brigands for ransom money.

As writers, Dr. and Mrs. Taylor are known all over the world. One of Dr. Taylor's books has been translated into 20 languages. The two are now engaged in a three-months itinerary in which they are giving first-hand information about China, their schedule including important cities from Washington to Atlanta.

No Appeal for Money.

In keeping with the rule of the missions there will be no financial appeal made nor collections taken.

The growth of the China Inland mission, founded in 1865 by the unaided efforts of J. Hudson Taylor has been little short of miraculous. The movement now numbers 100,000 Chinese converts, 3,843 Chinese fellow laborers, 12 hospitals, 93 dispensaries, 16 orphan refuges, 10 orphanages, one school for the blind and 1,134 foreign missionaries in active service.

Hudson Taylor 60 years ago started the work with $50. Since that time $16,000,000 has been received unsolicited and spend in the work.

DRAFT HOKE SMITH FOR GOVERNORSHIP URGES ATLANTAN

Suggestion that Ex-Senator Hoke Smith be drafted for governor of Georgia in the next general state election is made in an editorial in the December issue of the Atlantian, published by E. Walter Tripp.

Entitled "A Little Slant on Georgia's Politics," the editorial asks: "Why have we drifted into the Sargossa sea of second raters?" and answers the question by saying: "The first cause is that men do not think as much or as seriously as they did in 1775; the second is that we have cast sound principles to the four winds, and vote consistently on our prejudices."

In addition to the editorial comment, there are a number of other references contained in the magazine which support Mr. Smith for governor, consisting largely of comment clipped from Georgia papers.

MRS. J. ELLIS GREEN DIES AT TEXAS HOME

Mrs. J. Ellis Green, formerly of Eatonton, died Friday at her home in Houston, Texas, after an operation, according to news received in Atlanta. Mrs. Green is survived by her husband, two children, Ellis, Jr., and Myrtle Moe Green, and a sister, Mrs. S. L. Linch, of Atlanta.

Nurses Will Meet.

Public health nurses of the first district will meet Monday, December 7, at 4 o'clock on the third floor of the city hall. A report of the nurses' state convention will be given. Mrs. John J. Eagan will speak about the inter-racial work being done in the southeastern states.

'THE STUDENT PRINCE' HERE ANOTHER WEEK

One of the most remarkable weeks ever recorded at the Atlanta theater has just closed, with every prospect that the second week will add to the record. "The Student Prince" has played to close to the largest number of people of any attraction to appear at that theater.

The opera is of the type which appeals to all classes of people, which is illustrated daily by the crowds which have filled the theater.

Governor Clifford Walker attended "The Student Prince" twice during the week just ended. He remarked Saturday that he had rarely seen anything which gave him so much pleasure, and added that his second visit to the theater was, if anything, more enjoyable than the first.

"You realize on the second trip just how good the music and singing in this opera are," said the governor. "Of course, you remark the first time on the rarity of finding a modern production so clean and free from offense of any variety throughout."

The decision to keep the company here for a second week was due to the fact that the theater has been full for practically every performance and, on several occasions the house has been sold out.

Unfortunately, previous bookings prevent the company from staying here longer than two weeks, so everyone will have to arrange somehow to see it before next Saturday night.

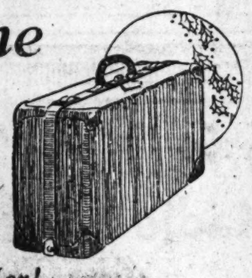

"The Student Prince" is, beyond question, the most beautiful production ever sent her so far as settings and costumes are concerned. It contains a marvelous male chorus of 30 voices and all the principals are fully adequate, both in voice and acting ability.

Much More Than Beauty-- Matchless Performance

If the New Franklin brought nothing more dramatic to the motoring world than its beauty of line, it would still be a real contribution.

But back of its style leadership is a standard of performance that has no counterpart today.

Easy-riding that is perceptibly better than anything you have experienced in the past.

Easy-handling and high power that combine with this to make possible more miles, as well as better miles, per day.

Efficiency and long life that pay dollars-and-cents dividends in lower upkeep cost and higher resale value.

And always, under all conditions, the complete freedom from trouble which only air-cooling can give.

This double leadership—appearance and performance—makes the New Franklin a doubly fine value.

At the new lower prices Franklin Series 11 includes complete equipment, even spare tire, tube, cover and lock. Only tax and freight are extra.

Fulton County Teachers Voted $50,000 Increases By Board of Education

Commission Decides To Borrow Necessary Money and Repay Amount Next Fall.

Salary increases approximating $50,000 and increasing the annual payroll of Fulton county school teachers from about $225,000 to $275,000, were authorized Saturday at a meeting of the county board of education, it was announced by Jere M. Wells, superintendent of county schools.

Under the ruling of the board grammar school teachers will receive from $750 to $1,100 instead of from $585 to $765 under the old schedule; high school teachers will get $1,500 to $2,100 instead of $1,200 to $1,800; heads of departments in the high school will get $2,300; assistant principals who formerly were paid $2,140 will receive $2,300 and principals who drew $3,000 annually will get $3,600.

This means that high school teachers will be raised from 12 to 18 per cent, while negro teachers will get an addition of about 20 per cent.

In addition to regular increases in salary, Mr. Wells said the board voted to give a $50 annual bonus to all teachers in the system who have been connected with it for 10 years or longer. All instructors who hold a life certificate for the subject they have specialized in also will be given a $50 yearly bonus contingent on the promise to attend a summer training school every two years.

All teachers will be required to present a certificate as to their physical fitness at the beginning of every school year in the future, Mr. Wells stated. This rule was adopted Saturday.

Teachers will be paid on the 20th of each month every month in the year with the exception of July and August.

The increases are effective January 1, 1926, thus adding about 30 per cent to the remuneration of educators of Fulton school children. The board of education has worked for three months on a plan to raise the salaries of what is termed "the poorest paid group of persons in Fulton county," and announced Saturday that the board will allow the raises and borrow the money with which to meet the added obligation. The sum will be repaid in the fall of 1926, when tax funds are available.

"Even with the increases, Fulton county teachers will receive about 30 per cent less than the city of Atlanta pays its teachers," Mr. Wells said. "The county system has been working at a great disadvantage for several years because we can not get well qualified teachers to work for the small remuneration we are able to give them. It has been only the loyalty of faithful employees which has kept the Fulton county system up to its high standard. I am glad we can reward them in some small measure for their faith in us."

Fulton county grand jury several months ago recommended general increases in the salaries of Fulton school teachers, and since that time the board has been active in an effort to devise some means by which this could be done. The grand jury proposed to raise salaries of grammar school teachers from $900 to $1,500 annually.

MAYOR SIMS WARNS OF SALARY INCREASES

paper providing a scale of increases for 500 employees of the sanitary department. Both these measures are to be presented at the council session Monday.

Alerman J. L. Carpenter will present a paper at the same meeting providing for an increase of 10 per cent in tax assessments on both realty and personalty. He said he believed this would be the means of raising more than $500,000 a year in tax revenues.

Councilman Harry York will reintroduce his paper killed by the aldermanic board, providing for the adoption of a minimum wage of $100 a month for all "semi-skilled laborers and clerical employees" in all city departments and a 10 per cent raise for all other employees, he announced Saturday.

Alderman Allen Couch will introduce in council Monday an ordinance to carry into effect January 1 the provisions of the firemen's initiative petition as approved at the public referendum last Wednesday. This will entail an additional expenditure annually of $117,000. Placing the police department on the same salary basis as the fire department would cause an added expense of $150,000, it was estimated, by reason of the fact that the police department has a larger personnel.

L. L. Wallis, general manager of parks, in submitting a list of salary schedules affecting all workers in his department, said he had made his recommendations only after due deliberation and that he wanted to see the entire schedule pass.

The streets committee subcommittee included Chief W. A. Hansell in the list of those recommended for increases. The recommendation was that Chief Hansell's salary be increased from $5,000 to $6,000 a year. An increase also was recommended by the parks committee for Manager Wallis. It was recommended his salary be raised from $200 to $250 a month.

Boom for Ragsdale.

A boom for I. N. Ragsdale, former member of city council and now a member of the Fulton county commission, for the mayoralty in the 1926 primary was sounded at the meting of city and county public service employees' union Saturday night by Charlie Martin, one of the leaders of the organization, who introduced Mr. Ragsdale as speaker.

"He does not want the place himself but we want him and we are going to insist that he take it," said Mr. Martin.

Responding, Mr. Ragsdale thanked members of the local for their applause in connection with Mr. Martin's remarks but declared "he was not looking for the job, that he had a man's sized one now."

Mr. Ragsdale emphasized his position as entirely in accord with any plan that would bring a "decent living wage" to the men who labored for the city or county. He declared he was in hearty sympathy with the organization and declared that he believed any man who felt he could be benefited and his family benefited by membership in the order would be an "ingrate" if he did not enroll as a member.

Ford's Position.

Charles M. Ford, alderman from the tenth ward, declared he had opposed the "firemen's petition because, first, he believed it to have been inspired by selfish motives and second, because there are so many city employees making far less than a decent living wage."

"A man cannot live decently on a wage of $2 or $3 a day or on a salary of $60 or $75 a month," said Mr. Ford. "Personally I am not so interested in men making $150 to $175 a month until the men making smaller wages are aided."

C. F. Jackson dwelt upon the idea that there should be equalization of salaries of the men who do identically the same line of work, though in separate city departments. He called attention to the fact that stokers at the crematory were paid $5 a day, while men in the water department doing the same sort of work draw $4.40 a day.

Bruce Baxter, superintendent of the municipal garage and Mr. Ragsdale were elected to honorary membership in the association.

Tire Punctured 857 Times Leaks No Air

A new and amazing scientific puncture proof discovery has been perfected by Mr. O. S. Nelson, T-610 Logan Building, Mitchell, South Dakota, with which an automobile tire was punctured 857 times without loss of air. Makes all old as well as new tires puncture proof. It increases the mileage of tires enormously. Makes ordinary tire troubles go forever. Prevents tire changing. It is inexpensive. FORT GAINES TO ALBANY HIGHWAY IS PLANNED

Fort Gaines, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—Approval of the proposed plan to pave the highway from Fort Gaines to Albany was voted at a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce here last night. The suggested highway would lead through Fort Gaines, crossing the new $200,000 bridge here, and connecting with a graded road now being built from this place to Abbeville, Ala.

The plan to have the highway here will meet with the approval of the people generally, it is believed, as it would be a main artery of travel east and west through Southwest Georgia.

Completion of plans for the bridge opening fete here December 18 were carried out at the Chamber of Commerce meeting. Seven Georgia and Alabama notables, including ex-Governor John M. Slaton, John N. Holder, Governor Brandon of Alabama will be present for speeches. A football game, barbecue dinner, pageant and parade will also feature the occasion.

Clay county is preparing to entertain several thousand people on the bridge opening day. The bridge across the Chattahoochee river is already completed, and everything ready for the formal opening. Southwest Georgia is showing remarkable interest in this program, news having already been received of big crowds coming from various points.

CARUSO'S WIDOW DENIES REPORT OF ENGAGEMENT

Rome, December 5.—"No more wedding bells," is the decision of Enrico Caruso's widow, who was diforced recently from Captain Ingram, an Englishman, and who has been reported engaged to a relative of King Alfonso of Spain.

"I am not only not engaged to a Spanish prince, but I have firmly decided that there shall be no more wedding bells for me," she said today.

Mrs. Caruso, before her marriage, was Miss Dorothy Benjamin, of New York.

MAYOR-ELECT WALKER SAILS FOR NEW YORK

Miami, Fla., December 5.—(AP)—Mayor-elect James J. Walker, of New York city, who has been sojourning in the southland for more than three weeks, bid adieu to Miami late today from the dock of the steamship H. F. Alexander, Gotham-bound. He was accompanied by a coterie of friends and New York newspaper men.

Mayor Walker, in departing, terminated a brief vacation which included Miami and Palm Beach, Fla., Atlanta, Ga., and Havana, Cuba, being the guest of honor at various social functions in each city. He spent the larger part of the time here.

QUITMAN COMMISSION ELECTS DR. J. L. RUBLE

Quitman, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—Dr. J. L. Ruble will succeed Dr. E. L. Jelks as one of three city commissioners January 1. Dr. Jelks has been chairman of the commission since it was first formed and was one of the first commissoners elected. He had also formerly served the city as mayor and as a member of council, his term of service totaling 10 years in these several capacities.

The other two members of the comsion are M. G. Mitchell, who was elected last year, and R. C. McIntosh, Jr. inclusion of his name on the list of those opposing the session, is an error, the governor stated.

The governor said he also had received a letter from Representative W. L. McElmurray, of Burke county, saying he would vote for state bonds both for highways and better schools, in event an extra session was called. Representative McElmurray had previously both wired and written the governor opposing the extra session.

Representative George A. Adams, of Franklin county, has written the governor stating that, while he was originally opposed to the extra session, he will attend if it is called and vote for state highway bonds. Representative Adams states that, because of the sentiment in his own county, and its action in voting county bonds for roads, he has become convinced that the state should provide more money for road building, and now thinks "it might be wise" to call the extra session.

Safety Razor Blades Stolen.

Thieves stole 1,800 packages of safety razor blades from the Southern railway and freight warehouse Saturday. The burglary was reported to Detective Hudson.

M. H. Burson, of 21 Cleveland avenue, reported the theft of a quantity of shoe leather from his automobile, while it was parked on Broad street, between Alabama and Hunter streets.

L. A. Walker, of 280 North Jackson street, told police a black traveling bag containing clothing, a pair of army shoes and puttees, had been stolen from him.

Man Held Up, Robbed.

Two unidentified negro bandits held W. F. Chapman, of 73 Griffin street, at the point of a gun late Saturday night and robbed him of $18 in money and a watch, as he was walking along Davis street at the Georgia Railway and Power company plant. He described one of the negroes as being dark-skinned and wearing a striped pair of overalls and a light cap.

He told Call Officers M. B. Johnson and C. G. Hughes that the negroes walked along side of him and stuck a gun in his face, ordering him to put up his hands. He obeyed, and one of the bandits rifled his pockets.

Miss Rose S. Grant, of Clay, Ky., and Mrs. C. E. Hopgood, also of Clay, reported the theft of two suitcases from their automobile, which was parked at 141 Marietta street. Articles in the two suitcases, including clothing, shoes and other apparel, were valued at $200.

Mrs. W. H. Jacks, of 190 East Eighth street, reported the theft of a wrist watch.

R. M. Milam, of 165 Grant street, told police a spotlight was stolen from his automobile.

Harry R. Segnieun, a reporter for The Milwaukee, Wis., Sentinel, reported the theft of a suitcase containing clothing and an electric lantern from his automobile, parked at 72 North Broad street. Detectives McGee and Satterfield investigated.

IMPEACHMENT SESSION IN TEXAS IS FADING

for the December term of court. Attorney General Dan Moody will continue his investigation in the state highway department. Voluminous testimony obtained by the previous grand jury, which failed to report indictments after investigating state affairs for five weeks, will be turned over to the new.

Ferguson Scores Moody.

When shown the opinion rendered by the attorney general, wherein he ruled that an underwritten or privately financed special session of the legislature would be against public policy, former Governor Ferguson said:

"Mr. Moody is letting his crowd down light. It must be remembered the attorney general had previously ruled that Satterwhite, as speaker, could only call the legislature for impeachment proceedings, which the attorney general ruled is a judicial function, and the members of the legislature who responded to such call would sit as jurors in a criminal proceeding, and if they permitted anybody to give them one nickel for their services, they would be just like any other bribed juror in a criminal case.

"Mr. Satterwhite and his crowd may call it underwriting, but it would be just plain cheap bribery. These big Texas millionaires who are proposing to put this money up under the plea of underwriting something, had just as well be called by their right names and I think the people are on to them already."

SATTERWHITE DECLARES ONLY ONE NAME WITHDRAWN.

Amarillo, Texas, December 5.—(AP) Lee Satterwhite, speaker of the house of representatives, in commenting on the ruling of Attorney General Dan Moody tonight, that a special session of the house was not legal that was underwritten by private funds, said that he had already made it plain that each member of the house was to pay his own expenses to Austin, and that no funds from private or public sources would be accepted.

In reply to a report that several members of the house had withdrawn their names from the list of those favoring the special session, Speaker Satterwhite said that only one representative had requested his name stricken off.

"On the other hand, today I received the addition of another name of a representative who heretofore had declined to support the move," Satterwhite said. "Only one out of 62 representatives withdrew his name, and his place has been taken. Only 50 signatures are required. It takes 100 members to make a quorum before an investigation of impeachment charges can be made," he added.

RHINELANDER WIFE ASKS SEPARATION

lander were returned to all the questions except the first and the seventh. The first, that of whether Mrs. Rhinelander was of colored blood at the time of the marriage, had been conceded as a fact by the defense during the trial. The jury made no answer to the seventh question: "Did plaintiff cohabit with the defendant after he obtained full knowledge that the defendant was of colored blood?"

Answers to Questions.

The seven questions of issue submitted to the jury, and its answers to them, follow:

"At the time of the marriage of the parties was the defendant of colored blood?"

Answer: "Yes." The defense previously had conceded this as fact.

"Did the defendant by silence conceal from the plaintiff that she was of colored blood?"

Answer: "No."

"Did the defendant, before marriage, represent to the plaintiff that she was not of colored blood?"

Answer: "No."

Practiced No Concealment.

"Did the defendant practice such concealment or make said representations with the intent thereby to induce the plaintiff to marry her?"

Answer: "No."

"Was the plaintiff, by such concealment or by such representations, or by both, induced to marry the defendant?"

Answer: "No."

"If the plaintiff had known the defendant was of colored blood would he have married her?"

Answer: "Yes."

"Did the plaintiff cohabit with the defendant after he had obtained full knowledge that the defendant was of colored blood?"

This question was not answered by the jury.

Feared Race Prejudice.

The Rhinelander woman's lawyer had said his greatest fear for his client's case was the danger of race prejudice by the jury.

W. J. Demerest, one of the jurors, said after the verdict had been returned that the question of racial distinction was not discussed by the jury in its deliberations, which lasted almost twelve hours.

The verdict had been returned at midnight last night, but was sealed until opening of court today.

The Rhinelanders were married in White Plains, October 14, 1924, but the news of the marriage did not become public for a month. It then was rumored that Alice's father was part negro, of West Indian descent. These rumors were denied by members of the Jones family in interviews with newspapers.

Suit Filed Last November.

Papers seeking annulment of the marriage were filed in White Plains November 26, 1924, a few days after the news of the marriage had become known. On December 16, attorneys for Alice Rhinelander petitioned the court for $1,000 a month alimony and $110,000 counsel fees from her husband, pending trial of the action. Supreme Court Justice Tompkins awarded alimony of $300 monthly and $3,000 counsel fees.

The case dropped from public mind for a time, but in March of this year, reports were circulated that efforts had been made and failed, to have the case settled out of court, counsel for Rhinelander denied the reports. Rhinelander's wife, it was learned then, had gone to Europe, ostensibly to gather evidence with which to fight the action.

Continued Three Weeks.

After several postponements, the trial began November 9 and continued through three weeks of sensational evidence. Much of this was of an unprintable nature, comprising letters exchanged between Rhinelander and his wife relating to their pre-marital relations.

The letters showed that on two occasions before their marriage, Rhinelander had taken Alice to the Hotel Marie Antoinette, in New York, where they had stayed together. The letters also described an automobile trip they made together through New England as "Mr. and Mrs. Winthrop." They showed that Philip Rhinelander, Leonard's father, upon learning of his relations with Alice, had sent Rhinelander to Bermuda, and later to the west, where Rhinelander remained until he became of age. Rhinelander then returned and married the girl.

of plays now are adapted for the screen, they assert, and such an adjustment would force them to write plays for the legitimate stage, with a view toward their ultimate adoption for the screen, and would not only interfere with the art of playwriting, but would reduce considerably their chances for marketing a legitimate play not adapted for screening later.

Would Cut Stage Run.

In addition, there is the fear that Fox, having bought a play through a producer whom he is financing, would run it on the stage just long enough to fulfill the terms of the standard contract, approximately 50 performances, and then take it off the stage for adaption for the screen. Thus, while the author would receive a lump sum for the motion picture rights, his royalties for the legitimate production would be cut off, when they might continue and the value of the play be enhanced by a large run.

By allying themselves with the American Federation of Labor, many of the playwrights believe this situation could be effectively met. This action would ally them with the Actors' Equity association, a part of the federation.

Thus, the authors feel, if one of their number were unfairly dealt with by a producer working in the Fox agreement, they would be in a strategic position to call a strike against that particular producer, and then enlist the support of "Equity."

Favor Equity Alliance.

Failing favorable action by the Dramatists' guild on the suggestion of entering the American Federation of Labor, a plan is to be advanced by which the guild would make an effective alliance with the Actors' Equity association.

Although various authors discussed the situation today, the Dramatists' Guild as an organization refused to make an official statement "on advice of counsel."

Pointing out that they "had not been consulted in the matter," the authors feel that they do not yet "officially" know enough of the proposed arrangements to declare officially their stand.

JEWISH LEADERS TO CONFER TODAY

The United Jewish campaign, which proposes to raise $15,000,000 for a continuance of the welfare work, American Jews have been conducting among their co-religionists in Europe since the world war began, will hold its Southeastern conference at the Biltmore hotel today.

Beginning at 10 o'clock this morning, the meeting will last until 5 o'clock in the afternoon. A dinner will be given at the Biltmore at 1 o'clock. At 8 o'clock a general meeting will be held at the Temple at South Pryor and Richardson streets, to which the general public is cordially invited.

Several hundred Jewish leaders in Georgia, North and South Carolina, Florida and Tennessee are expected to attend the conference.

Address of Welcome.

Governor Clifford Walker and Mayor Walter A. Sims have accepted invitations to welcome the visitors on behalf of the state and the city.

Among out-of-town notables who will be present are Felix Warburg, chairman of the Joint Distribution committee, and David A. Brown, national chairman of the United Jewish campaign.

Mr. Brown is a resident of Detroit, where he is president of the General Necessities corporation, and one of the outstanding figures in the middle west business world. He also is head of almost a score of other big business enterprises, but has temporarily abandoned his private enterprises in order to devote all of his time for the next 8 or 10 months to the raising of the $15,000,000 relief fund sought in this campaign.

Pleads for Palestine.

Last winter he went to New Zealand, New South Wales and Australia, where again he pleaded for the Palestine Foundation fund with great success. Thence, he went to Palestine for the second time and was present at the opening, in Jerusalem, of the Hebrew university.

From the Holy Land, he went to Russia and spent nearly a month making a personal investigation of the great back-to-the-soil movement of the Jews of that country as a result of which 25,000 are already settled as farmers on the great prairies with the expectation that 100,000 will have been established on the soil by the end of 1927. The phenomenal success that spread itself before him as he toured the new settlements composed of men, women and children who only a few months previously had been starved and harried city-dwellers, aroused in him the desire to help the greatest possible number of his suffering Russian co-religionists achieve the same success. Following his Russian tour, where he nearly lost his life in a disastrous train wreck, he visited Poland and Czecho-Slovakia and returned to America last June to find he had been chosen chairman of the campaign in behalf of which he is coming to this city.

Arrangements Committee.

Arrangements for the local conference have been in the hands of a special committee, of which Harold Hirsch is chairman. On the general executive reception committee are the following:

Julian Y. Boehm, A. Cenker, Benjamin C. Fineberg, Algred Fox, Rabbi Tobias Geffen, Max F. Goldstein, Joseph Goldberg, Edwin R. Haas, Herbert J. Haas, Leonard Maas, Leopold J. Haas, Arthur I. Harris, Rabbi A. P. Hirmes, Leo Hexter, Hyman S. Jacobs, Isador Jacobs, Jake Jacobs, Victor H. Kriegshaber, Joseph Lazear, Max Lowenstein, Armand May, Rabbi David Marx, Sig Montag, A. L. Myers, William T. Rich, Sol Romm, Ralph Rosenbaum, Dr. H. J. Rosenberg, Samuel Rothberg, Dr. L. C. Rouglin, Nathan Saltzman, Isaac Schoen, Sam Schoen, S. S. Selig, Jr., Dr. Ben Wildauer and Joseph B. Wolfe.

Attorney A. D. G. Cohn, southern field director, assisted by Ben F. Sills, of New York, will move his headquarters for the day from the Piedmont hotel to the Atlanta Biltmore to be in readiness for the day's activities.

A woman's reception committee is headed by Mrs. Ben Wildauer with the following ladies serving: Mesdames Alfred Fox, Albert Goldberg, Max Greenfield, Clementine Haas, Leopold J. Haas, J. N. Hirsch, Ernst Horwitz, Hyman Jacobs, M. Klausman, Victor H. Kriegshaber, David Marx, Ben Z. Phillips, L. C. Rouglin, Sam Schoen, J. A. Sommerfield, Nathan Wolfe, Morris Commins, David Wise and Sig Samuels.

TWO CONVICTED IN U. S. COURTS UNDER MANN ACT

May Irene Amlin, 16, and Lester Hill, 25, both of Ohio, Saturday entered pleans of guilty to violation of the Mann act before Judge Samuel H. Sibley, of the federal court of the northern district of Georgia, and drew jail terms. The girl's sentence was suspended and she was put on probation for a year and a day.

Hill was sentenced to serve four months in Fulton county jail, while the girl was remanded to Fulton tower to await the arrival of funds to take her back home to her family.

According to evidence presented at the hearing, Hill and the girl left Cincinnati, Ohio, for an automobile trip to Atlanta. They were arrested by department of justice agents after complaints had been received from their families. Indictments were returned against them December 3.

CLINTON P. CAMPBELL DIES SATURDAY NIGHT

Clinton Pierce Campbell, 49, of 751 Highland avenue, well-known Atlantan, died at a private hospital Saturday night. Mr. Campbell was connected with the business office of The Atlanta Georgian.

He was a graduate of the University of Georgia and a member of the Chi Psi fraternity. He is survived by his widow; a daughter, Mrs. Warren H. Bearden; a brother, Robert Campbell, of Wichita, Kas., and a sister, Mrs. O. B. Andrews, of Chattanooga, Tennessee.

Funeral services will be held at 3 o'clock this afternoon from the Greenberg & Bond chapel. Rabbi David Marx will officiate and interment will be in West View cemetery.

PAUL ASKS $25,000 DAMAGES IN SUIT FILED SATURDAY

W. E. Paul, former switchman, Saturday filed a suit in Fulton superior court asking $25,000 damages of the Georgia Railway and Power Co. for injuries alleged to have been received by him on November 27, when he was a passenger on an East Point trolley and an automobile and the car collided at Gammage crossing. The petition was filed by Attorney E. R. Hill.

Paul claims he was standing in the door leading to the front platform, when the accident occurred and that the impact of the collision threw him through the door and against the controller box, fracturing his right knee cap, injuring his right leg and cutting a long gash in his head just above his right eye.

When the automobile and the car crashed the blow drove the front end of the car towards the rear, thus causing the floor to buckle, the petition sets out. The doors opening to the outside of the car also were thrown open, and after having been thrown on the platform, Paul was precipitated onto the street, which augmented his hurts and the damage, he declared.

Paul charges that at the time of the accident he was an abled-bodied man, but that since his injury he has been unable to work.

Forsyth Places Signs.

Forsyth, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—In order that tourists and others may be sure that they are here, the city has put up two large signs on the highway, one at each edge of the city. The signs are sheetiron finished in aluminum and bear in large letters the word "Forsyth."

They are the work of O. T. McCommon, one of the aldermen. Electric lights will be placed over the signs.

Macon Club Elects.

Macon, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—D. S. Wagnon has been elected president of the Macon Evangelistic club and Harry J. Burns, secretary-treasurer. The new officers will take charge in January.

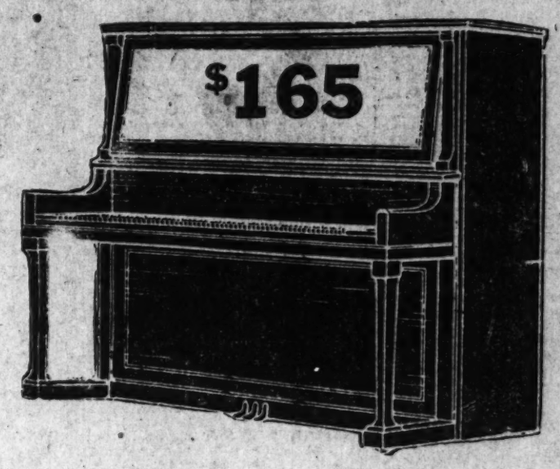

MERCER STUDENTS GET INCREASED HOLIDAYS

Macon, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—Christmas holidays at Mercer university have been extended two days this year.

The Mercer holidays will begin on Saturday, December 19, instead of Tuesday, December 22, as originally announced. The students will return to their books in January with the opening of the winter term. The holidays as now assigned will embrace a period of two weeks.

Georgia Tobacco Crop Should Not Be Increased In 1926, Says Westbrook

Tobacco Specialist Advises Against Increase In Crop; Recommends Intensified Cultivation.

Athens, Ga., December 5.—(AP)—In a letter to Georgia farmers calling attention to the fact that it soon will be time to begin work on the 1926 tobacco crop, E. C. Westbrook, tobacco specialist of the State College of Agriculture of the University of Georgia urges a "new faith and renewed courage" in the cultivation of the coming crop.

Farmers Interested.

Many farmers, says Mr. Westbrook, are asking about the tobacco outlook for another year and wanting to be advised what prices they can expect, whether there will be an over-production, whether it will be advisable to plant a big tobacco crop or should it be abandoned and in its place be planted a big cotton crop or a large melon crop.

Mr. Westbrook declares that he is unable to answer those questions, but contends that analysis of production of the principal farm products shows that they are about normal. "Apparently none of them has any decided advantage over the others," he says. "This year's tobacco crop is just slightly below the average for the last five years. The bright tobacco crop—the kind we grow in Georgia—for this year was many pounds in excess of last year's crop.

"Exports have not been as heavy as they were last year. The rest of the world is beginning to get back on a normal production basis. The situation is nothing to be alarmed about unless there is a big increase in the 1926 crop." However, he adds, "the situation does not justify an increase in the crop another year."

The same situation, Mr. Westbrook's letter says, exists with reference to the cotton crop. The slogan, he thinks, should be good tobacco on small acreages. "There never is profit," says the expert, "in growing common tobacco. We believe there never was a time when a well-balanced farm program was more advisable than now. With production of most of our major crops approaching normal it is impossible to foretell which one will have the advantage over the other another year. The farmer who has at least three money crops next year will have a much better chance to make money than the farmer who puts everything into one, regardless of whether it be tobacco, cotton or something else."

Experience year by year has demonstrated that farmers who sowed their tobacco the latter part of December and had plenty of good strong plants to set in the field by the latter part of March have rarely missed making a good crop of tobacco, in the opinion of Mr. Westbrook. "Plenty of good, early plants is the key to success in the tobacco busines. The bed should be sown between December 15 and January 1. It would be a fine thing if every Georgia tobacco farmer would sow his bed between these dates.

Fertilize Heavy.

"Don't be stingy when it comes to preparing the tobacco bed. Prepare plenty beds, 150 to 200 square yards for each five acres to be planted. Use a liberal amount of fertilizer on the bed at least three pounds of a high-grade fertilizer to the square yard. It will pay well. In the past some farmers have not used enough fertilizer on their plant beds to obtain a satisfactory crop of plants.

"For the tobacco land pick out land that is uniform. Save up a supply of well-rotted stable manure to go under the crop. Two to three loads per prove will increase the yield and improve the quality, thereby giving two chances to increase profits.

"Experiments and experience have shown that for average conditions 1,000 to 1,400 pounds per acre of an 8-3-5 fertilizer gets good results. Start early and start right, work life (here Mr. Westbrook uses a four-letter word meaning a place paved with good intentions) and you'll win the fight."

AGNES SCOTT MAN ELECTED BY DUKE

Professor W. Walter Rankin, Jr., head of the department of mathematics at Agnes Scott college, has been elected professor of mathematics at Duke university, of Durham, N. C., and will take up his duties at that institution next fall.

Mr. Rankin has been a prime mover in educational life in the southeast. He is chairman of the mathematics section of the Georgia Educational association, and is a member of the executive committee of the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics.

He has been head of the mathematics department at Agnes Scott for five years. Prior to that he taught mathematics for two years at Columbia university, and at the University of North Carolina.

Organizing the southeastern section of the Mathematical Association of America, Professor Rankin was chairman of the program committee for four years, and was appointed by the association chairman to study the situation as to high school mathematics and freshmen work at college, with a view to bringing about closer cooperation of high school and college work. He also organized the North Carolina Teachers of Secondary Mathematics, and was president of that body for two years.

Professor Rankin graduated from A. & E. college at Raleigh, N. C., the University of North Carolina, and Harvard. He also did post graduate work at Columbia university.

MANY FARM PRODUCTS SHIPPED FROM TOOMBS

Lyons, Ga., December 5.—(Special.) Completed data for the 12 months ending December 1, shows that the shipments of agricultural products from Toombs county have been heavy. These records do not include all that have been shipped from the county as local buyers have shipped several cars of each product but these only include the cooperative shipments handled by the county agent and his committee.

Corn has reached the total of 19,613 bushels which sold for $19,383.37. Of this amount 7,817.5 bushels were sold for $6,718.20 during the months of September, October and November of this year.

Poultry loaded in the poultry cars from this county during this period totaled 32,166 pounds for $7,106.03. Sweet potatoes, Porto Ricans, totaled 8,837 bushels, sold for $13,599.98. Hogs totaled $7,495.84.

Total farm products sold cooperatively amounted to $46,839.22 at a saving to the farmers of $6,492.32. Total cooperative purchases were $14,612.16 at a saving of $1,940.76.

In addition to this the Big Stem Jersey potato growers without an organization cooperated through W. L. Duncan in marketing $100,000 worth of Toombs county Big Stem Jerseys. These growers have now organized and the board of directors have appointed Mr. Duncan sales and field manager.

The above figures on the savings to the farmers show that in addition to securing markets for products which the farmers had as surplus crops they saved $8,433.08 above the speculator's prices.

WAYCROSS TO PAVE 84 CITY BLOCKS ON BABY BOND PLAN

Waycross, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—The McDougald Construction company of Atlanta has signed the contract with the city of Waycross providing for the paving of 84 blocks of city highway streets. The company has also posted bond for the satisfactory completion of the paving for the maintenance of the pavement in good condition for a period of five years.

Actual work will commence within 10 days. The civic clubs of the city are preparing a program for the day work begins, celebrating the beginning of what will be the most extensive paving program ever undertaken in the history of the city. The pavement will be of asphalt on a concrete base.

The city manager is now at work on specifications for a large number of city blocks to be paved under the bond plan, and it is expected that bids will be advertised for shortly.

Waycross Chamber Names Delegates To Douglas Meet

Waycross, December 5.—Waycross chamber of commerce delegates to the meeting of the Central Dixie Highway association meeting to be held in Douglas on December 8, have been named by J. W. Seals, chairman.

They are: Jack Williams, editor of the Waycross Journal-Herald, and W. D. O'Quinn, of the O'Quinn Clothing company.

In addition, the Lions club and Kiwanis club and the city of Waycross are expected to send delegates to the meeting which is expected to be one of the most important highway meetings.

The question of permanently paving the Central Dixie highway will be the principal question before the meeting.

A number of counties along the route have already started movements to pave, and other counties are expected to fall in line following the meeting in Douglas.

SOUTH GEORGIA A. M. E. CLOSES AT MOULTRIE

Moultrie, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—The 13th session of the South Georgia conference A. M. E. church, meeting in Grant Chapel Memorial church for the past five days, with Bishop J. S. Flipper, presiding, closed here today. Only a few hours remain until the Sunday religious service, a sermon by the bishop, when the heart-throbbing and anxious, expectant preacher will receive his commission "to go into all the world and preach the gospel."

Five young men were ordained elders. The finance committee reported an increase and pledged full support along all lines another year. The work of the ministry in the field has been very gratifying. Death rate has been higher this past year among the preachers than it has been in many years. The educational mass meeting was held tonight under the auspices of Rev. T. J. Linton, financial agent of Morris-Brown university system. The conference model Sunday school work, with 80 trained workers will be featured Sunday morning by C. A. Wingfield, state superintendent. At 11 o'clock Bishop J. S. Flipper will preach and the preachers will receive their assignments at the close of this service.

Drive of Buckner On Rum Syndicate Amazes New York

News Service, Subscribed To by Bootleggers, Caps Climax of Long Series of Sensations.

WINE, WOMEN, SONG USED TO BRIBE MEN

Alleged Liaison Man Between Rum Ring and Coast Guard Placed Under Arrest.

RUM DRIVE PLANNED ALL OVER COUNTRY

New York, December 5.—(AP)—Coincident with his announcement of the sweeping offensive against the alleged rum syndicate here, dispatches from Washington today quoted General Lincoln C. Andrews, prohibition head, as saying the arrest of William Dwyer and 20 alleged confederates was only the start of similar demonstrations throughout the country.

He said the cleanup started here would spread to Florida, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Baltimore, Chicago and San Francisco.

New York, December 5.—This ultra-wet city, satiated with liquor scandals and accustomed to exposures of "million dollar bootlegging rings," still was amazed tonight at the extent to which Emory C. Buckner, United States attorney, has carried his first big drive against alleged conspirators to violate the Volstead act.

Announcement by Buckner that he had discovered the existence of a news service, which carried valuable information to bootleggers and was subscribed to by rum runners and others to whom it furnished warnings of impending raids, capped the climax of a series of sensations, touched off by the federal authorities when they rounded up more than a score of alleged conspirators Thursday.

Extent of Bribery Surprises.

The extent to which bribery, through the medium of "wine, women and song" was carried on by the master-minds of the smuggling ring, also surprised New Yorkers. With the crew of one coast guard vessel under arrest, and a search under way for other alleged corrupt government employes, Buckner's agents today took into custody Daniel J. Keleher, whom they charge with being the liaison man between the rum ring and the dry forces.

An interesting point brought out by Buckner in an explanation of Thursday's round-up, in which Bill Dwyer, said to be a prominent race track owner was taken, is that because of the inclement weather, fewer corrupt federal employees than usual were around the offices of the alleged ringleaders, and consequently fewer were bagged than the dry forces had anticipated.

Lured by Entertainment.

Buckner has told enough to indicate that a considerable number of coast guard officials were in the pay of the bootleggers, and that the medium through which they were weaned away from their line of duty was entertainment, in which beautiful women and a liberal pouring of wine figured.

The U. S. attorney also has under investigation a memorandum taken

"Flying Yank" Ends Training For Big Races

Seiler Says He Is in Tip-Top Form for Competitions Here.

John J. Seiler, champion professional walker and runner, known as the 23-year-old "Flying Yank," Saturday astonished local followers of the cinder path by the perfect form he displayed when he trotted 12 miles out on the Stone Mountain road for the last of his training workouts before pitting the swiftness of his legs Monday against the mechanical perfection of the Wills Sainte Claire automobile, in the first of a series of competitions sponsored by The Constitution.

The youthful holder of many track records had planned to work out a bit today, but the hard surfaced roads he negotiated Saturday in a remarkably short time caused him to suffer from minor foot trouble and he has cancelled today's plans and announced himself ready for the beginning of his first contest against the automobile. The first event of the series, a 50-mile race, will begin at 9 o'clock Monday morning in front of The Constitution building and will end in front of Loew's Grand theater about 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon.

Seiler will proceed to the Stewart Shoe company from the starting point and there will be fitted with a pair of Bostonian shoes, which he will use in the 50-mile walk against the car. From that time on he will not stop

CROP-REPORTING BOARD INDORSES HARRIS' CHANGES

Georgia Senator Prepares Bill Calling for More Frequent Estimates by U. S. on Cotton Crop.

Washington, December 5.—(AP)—Indorsement of the crop-reporting board of the department of agriculture and a number of cooperative cotton associations was given today to a bill which is to be introduced in the senate next Tuesday by Senator Harris, democrat, Georgia, changing the regulations of the government cotton reports.

Taking the stand that the government reports should be improved rather than abolished, the Georgia senator prepared a bill which remodeled the law. The approval of the crop board was given today after a few changes in the bill were agreed upon. Believing that most of the criticism of the government reports is due to sudden movements in the cotton market caused by the uncertainty of the reports, Senator Harris' measure calls for more frequent reports.

Seek Daily Reports.

The new measure would require the census bureau to make public daily reports of cotton ginned as received by bureau agents with the statement of the number of bales ginned in the same territory the previous year. The cotton exchanges would be required to close 30 minutes after the semi-monthly reports are issued instead of 15 minutes, and on September 1 all abandoned acreage would be reported.

The semi-monthly reports would be issued at noon instead of 11 o'clock. Estimates of the cotton crop would be issued by states in groups of three, beginning on the fourth day of the month during the growing season, beginning with Virginia, North Carolina and South Carolina; on the fifth day, Georgia, Florida and Alabama; on the sixth, Tennessee, Mississippi and Louisiana; on the seventh, Oklahoma and Arkansas, and on the eighth, when the regular semi-monthly report will be issued and the estimate of the remaining states would be included. The same procedure then would be taken up on the 15th of the month and carried through until the next semi-monthly report is issued.

Field Agents Assist.

Field agents of the states to be reported would come to Washington on the day the reports of their states are to be made public and become a member of the crop-reporting board preparing estimates of their states. They then would return to the states and keep in touch with the developments of the crop.

Cotton exchanges would be required to make public daily the total number of bales dealt in on future contracts. Senator Harris declared this would expose the dealing of the speculators who trade in thousands of bales daily when cotton is being produced only in the hundreds.

BOND ISSUE VOTED AT CARTERSVILLE

With Only 7 Votes Opposing, $40,000 Issue for Paving, and Water, Gas Mains Easily Carries.

Cartersville, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—The voters of Cartersville Saturday by a majority of 476 to 7 voted in favor of a $40,000 bond issue, which includes funds to provide for additional street paving, enlarging the radius of the gas mains and water mains.

With slightly over 500 registered, the vote is considered one of the best ever recorded here for any purpose and proves the determination of Cartersville citizens to keep up the march of progress which has already wrought remarkable changes throughout the community.

AUTOIST MISSES STREET, VAULTING UPON SIDEWALK

Careening madly around the corner of Alabama and Forsyth streets, and apparently in a great hurry to beat another automobile to the narrow strip of street between the safety island and the M. Rich and Brothers company department store, an unidentified motorist Saturday night missed the entire street. His automobile vaulted the curbing, cut off a white-way lamp standard even with the street, crashed into the wall of the Rich store, and stopped.

Alabama street was well crowded with homeward-bound persons waiting for street cars, but none of them was touched by the flying car. The driver of the car and a woman companion apparently were unhurt, but the woman jumped from the machine and ran, while the driver calmly backed the car over the fallen lamp standard, down Alabama street to Broad and fled south on Forsyth street while hundreds stood about marveling at his lucky escape. Both he and his woman companion disappeared before the arrival of police, but the number on the automobile's license tag was supplied by several persons.

GERMAN CABINET OFFICERS RESIGN

Chancellor Luther Requested to Continue at Post and Form New Ministry on Coalition Basis.

Berlin, December 5.—(AP)—President von Hindenburg accepted the resignation of the German cabinet which was handed him today. The president requested Chancelor Luther to continue at his post. This means that the chancellor will form a new ministry on a coalition basis, whose views will coincide with the policies and agreements entered into at Locarno, and ratified at London December 1.

The resignation of the cabinet was in accordance with the announcement the chancellor made prior to the signing of the Locarno pact.

The Luther cabinet was constituted in January last to succeed the Marx-Stresemann ministry in which Dr. Luther held the portfolio of finance.

Growing opposition from the nationalists because of the government's policy of reconciliation with the former enemy countries culminated later in October with the resignation of all the three nationalist members of the cabinet. The specific point on which they withdrew was the negotiation of the security pact and collateral treatise which Chancellor Luther and Foreign Minister Stresemann helped to frame at Locarno.

The places of three nationalists were not filled, their duties being taken over by the remaining cabinet members. Dr. Luther announced to the leaders of the various parties on November 20 that the government would resign after the Locarno signing ceremony in London December 1 to leave the way clear for the formation of a new ministry in full sympathy with the Locarno policies and obligations.

DETECTIVE NABS JAIL BREAKERS

Two of Six Who Fled Decatur Cells Are Recaptured in Atlanta Apartment.

Alone and unaided, City Detective Lon W. Evans Saturday effected the capture of Arthur Billew, 18, and Garland Gingnilett, 17, who escaped Thursday from the DeKalb county jail at Decatur, in an apartment at 18 McMillan street.

Detective Evans received a tip that the two men were hiding at the McMillan street address, and without calling for reinforcements, entered the place and had handcuffs on the pair almost before they realized he was in the room.

The capture of Billew and Gingnilett, who were sentenced on charges of burglary, and the voluntary return of Harry Arnold, 19, who was serving time on a charge of larceny of an automobile leaves only three of the six escaped prisoners at large.

A vigorous search for the remaining three is being conducted by DeKalb officers in cooperation with the Atlanta and Decatur police departments and Fulton county officers.

Day's Search Nets 10 Stills And Much Beer

Columbus Officers Spend Busy Day in 'Shine District.

Columbus, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—Ten stills were destroyed, nine of them in Marion county and one in Chattahoochee county, by a raiding party headed by T. D. Harris, federal prohibition enforcement officer. E. P. Beall, local United States deputy marshal, and C. V. Mahoney, Troup county police officer, Wednesday, they reported on return to the city Wednesday night.

About 3,000 gallons of beer were poured out.

OPERA PROGRAM PLANS UNDER WAY

Colonel Peel Leaves to See New Productions and Stars Before Selecting Local Operas.

Colonel William Lawson Peel, president of the Atlanta Music Festival association, will leave next week for New York where he will spend some time in hearing the new productions of the Metropolitan Opera company, and new stars who have been introduced to the American public for the first time this season.

Colonel Peel will make a careful survey of work being done by the Metropolitan this season with a view to selections to be made for the Atlanta season of grand opera next April.

Directors of the Music Festival association announced Saturday that the matter of a contract for the Atlanta season of grand opera, to begin on April 19, will be taken up with the Metropolitan Opera company in about 30 days.

In the meantime, directors state Atlanta opera patrons who wish to make suggestions as to operas they would like to hear may do so, and that the body will be pleased to receive lists from one to seven operas, which will be carefully considered before the contract is closed.

All patrons who wish to submit such lists are requested to mail them to Colonel W. L. Peel, 1001 Citizens and Southern bank building, Atlanta, Georgia.

Mr. Peel's Letter.

Mr. Peel's letter follows:

"The directors of the Atlanta Music Festival association in about thirty days will take up with the Metropolitan Opera company the matter of a contract for our usual annual season of opera, which will begin on April 19.

"If any of our patrons wish to make suggestions as to operas they would like to hear, we will be very much pleased to have them write us, giving the names of from one to seven operas, and same will have our careful consideration."

HIGH ADDITIONS TO COST $100,000

Big Atlanta Store Will Erect Two Stories on Hunter Street 'L' Early Next Year.

Another indication of the ever growing faith in Atlanta as a merchandising center was revealed Saturday, when officials of the J. M. High company announced that directors have authorized the expenditure of approximately $100,000 on additions and improvements and that work will begin shortly after the Christmas holidays.

Two stories are to be added to the Hunter street "L," it was stated by W. H. Brittain, president and general manager, and improvements, which will add materially to the comforts of patrons will consume the remainder of the amount.

Shows Confidence In City.

"The decision of the board of directors, who held a meeting Friday, shows our confidence in Atlanta, and will mark another step in the perfection of our store at 66 Whitehall street, which we have chosen for a permanent location," Mr. Brittain said. "We feel proud of Atlanta and knowing her ability to do big things are ready to contribute all we possibly can to keep her the greatest city in the entire south.

"Up until December 1, our sales volume increased more than $500,000 over the whole of 1924, and we anticipate the largest Christmas business in the history of the city. Atlanta is making history in her commercial and industrial development at present, and our firm is feeling keenly this era of prosperity which has blessed the city for the past year."

The J. M. High company now is said to have the largest first floor selling space of any store in Atlanta, with 40,000 square feet as its total. The total selling floor space of the

12 CITIES BIDDING FOR QUADRENNIAL METHODIST MEET

Nashville, Tenn., December 5.—(AP) Twelve cities are bidding for the quadrennial convention of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, which will be held in May, 1926.

The selection will be made by a location committee, to meet in Memphis, Wednesday, December 9. Of this committee, Dr. S. H. C. Burgin, of San Antonio, Texas, is chairman.

Among the cities asking for the conference, says the Secular Press bureau of Methodist headquarters, are Dallas, Memphis, Kansas City, Nashville, Huntington, W. Va., Birmingham, Mobile, Athens, Ga., Asheville, N. C., Atlanta, Jackson, Miss., and Richmond, Va.

The legislative body of the church will remain in session three weeks.

The Latest Dances By Arthur Murray.

The Constitution announces a series of ten illustrated lessons on the latest dance steps to appear weekly in the Sunday magazine. These lessons are by Arthur Murray, now probably the most famous dance teacher in America, and who for several years conducted a dance studio in Atlanta.

Mr. Murray since leaving Atlanta has been dancing instructor to the Prince of Wales, is now instructor of the Vanderbilts and other prominent members of New York's four hundred, and was selected to teach the dancing instructors of the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis. He is recognized as the leading authority on ball-room dancing. His first lesson will appear in the Sunday Magazine of The Constitution on December 6.

Mr. Murray tells how to dance the Charleston in his first article, which appears in today's magazine.

LA FOLLETTE REBUFFS SENATE "REGULARS" OVER ORGANIZATION

Play of Love and Politics

:: PRODUCTION DURING HIS LIFE BARRED ::

Is Written by Clemenceau

BY RALPH HEINZEN
United News Staff Correspondent.

Paris, December 5.—Georges Clemenceau, the "tiger" of France, has written a play of love and politics—a play so filled with political implications that the famous statesman has decreed it must not be produced in France until after his death.

The former premier's role as playwright was revealed tonight by Cecile Sorel, the famous French actress, for whom Clemenceau has written the play. Although he has barred the production from France during his lifetime, the "tiger" may permit Sorel to produce it in the United States this winter.

So far the drama, which Clemenceau has spent a year in writing, has not been named. Its story is that of a man and a woman—dominant characters like Benito Mussolini—who conspire to control the destiny of their country.

The author and the star he chose for his work have conferred frequently on the play during its preparation. Recently Clemenceau advised Sorel that it was completed, but after reading it aloud to her he filed it in his archives with the remark:

"I do not want you to produce it until I am dead. I have too many political enemies who will attach themselves to your skirts."

Clemenceau is the author of the comic opera, "La Voile Du Bonheur," which was produced successfully in Paris before the war, but this is his first attempt at serious drama. The tiger, at the age of 84, undertook it simultaneously with his memoirs.

YOUNG BOB TURNS DOWN INVITATION TO PARTY CAUCUS

Rejects Offer for Conference and Meets With Group of Insurgents From Wisconsin.

FOLLOWS COURSE TAKEN BY FATHER

La Follette Promises Full Statement Today, in Which He Will Meet Issue Squarely.

BY THOMAS L. STOKES,
United News Staff Correspondent.

Washington, December 5.—Senator Robert M. La Follette, Jr., of Wisconsin, offered the smooth road of regular republicanism at the outset of his political career, has turned it down, boldly, for the rocky path traveled by his father for 20 years.

This was the meaning of his refusal to attend the regular republican caucus Saturday, to which he had been invited. Several regular republican leaders initiated the move for bringing the young La Follette back into the fold, their eyes on the slim actual majority they hold in the senate. Still maintaining his silence, he merely declined to attend the meeting, just as did his father.

Attends Insurgents' Meeting.

Instead, the young Wisconsin senator attended a meeting of house insurgents, where the irregulars discussed their plan of campaign during the coming session of congress. This indicates that "Young Bob" will take the aggressive and perhaps attempt to inject new life into the forces of the insurgents.

Insurgency is at a lower ebb now than two years ago, when it was riding on a high wave. It has been harassed by attacks from the regulars, now in the saddle.

House republican leaders, with a safe majority, took a further step in dethroning the insurgents from their last vestiges of power at their caucus Saturday, when Representative Frear, of Wisconsin, a veteran, was officially expelled from the powerful ways and means committee, and Representative Nelson, of Wisconsin, another veteran, was deprived of his place on the rules committee. Nelson was campaign manager last year for the La Follette campaign for the presidency. Other insurgents will be restricted to minor committees, unless they prove that they have decided to be regular.

The insurgent cause suffers in the house. In the senate, however, the insurgent group is still a power, holding a virtual balance of power. The

DAMASCUS ATTACK AGAIN THREATENED BY DRUSE REBELS

Street Traffic in City is Forbidden as Troops Strengthen Barricades, Prepare for Defense.

Damascus, December 5.—(AP)—All street traffic in Damascus was forbidden after 6 o'clock this evening as result of Druse bands gathering around the city and threatening to attack.

Troops were standing at various vantage points in the city and barricades had been strengthened.

The French heavily bombarded brigand elements in some gardens near the Chagour quarter of Damascus today.

U. S. DESTROYERS ARE WITHDRAWN.

Washington, December 5.—(AP)—The American destroyers Coghlan and Lamson will be withdrawn immediately from Beirut, Syria, the state department having decided today that they are no longer needed for protection of American lives and property there.

A dispatch from the consul at Beirut said that full agreement had been reached that the situation in the coastal region of Syria was such as to make the further presence of the ships unnecessary.

The destroyers were dispatched from the European fleet at Gibraltar to Alexandria, Egypt, in the early days of the revolt in Syria against French mandate authorities and following the disturbances in Damascus, as a result of which portions of the city were bombarded by the French. Refugees from Damascus and other points in the interior of Syria concentrated at Beirut and American residents there, fearing a spread of the disorders, requested through the consul that warships be dispatched to "stand by" in case of emergency.

The agreement of the consular and naval authorities at Beirut that the ships are no longer needed was taken as an indication that French reinforcements have arrived in sufficient numbers to insure against a spread of the Druse uprising in the interior of the mountainous coastal region of Lebanon, where a majority of the Syrian Christian population as well as of the American nationals in Syria reside.

PRISON CHAPLAIN REACHES ATLANTA

G. F. W. Ladlow Will Assume His New Duties This Morning; Succeeds Rev. J. A. Sewell.

G. F. W. Ladlow, of Troy, N. Y., former lieutenant of the Salvation army, arrived in Atlanta Saturday to begin his duties as Protestant chaplain of the Atlanta federal penitentiary. He succeeds the late Rev. Joseph Asbury Sewell, who held the post for the past 10 years.

Mr. Ladlow will begin his career as chaplain this morning, when he holds services in the chapel at 9:30 o'clock.

He was accompanied to Atlanta by his wife and two of his children, Miss Ethel Ladlow and Fred Ladlow. Two other daughters, Captain Robina Ladlow, member of the editorial staff of The War Cry, Salvation army publication, and Miss Hannah Ladlow, connected with the financial department of the New York office of the Salvation army, did not come to Atlanta.

Miss Hannah will arrive about January 1, Mr. Ladlow said. Mr. Ladlow will occupy the chaplain's residence, located on the prison reservation, just as soon as furnishings arrive from New York. He is now staying with friends in Atlanta.

FORMER EMPRESS CHARLOTTE IS SAID TO BE NEAR DEATH

Widow of Emperor Maximilian Gravely Ill of Bronchitis in Belgium In Her 86th Year.

Brussels, December 5.—(AP)—Former Empress Charlotte of Mexico is gravely ill. She is reported to be sinking rapidly.

The former empress has acute bronchitis with pulmonary congestion, her physicians announced this morning, after a consultation with King Albert. The queen has been at the bedside and the royal family has been kept informed of the patient's condition hourly. Slight hopes are entertained for her recovery.

Charlotte, the "mad empress," of Mexico, widow of the Emperor Maximilian, is in her 86th year. She has been in uncertain mental state since her dramatic interview with Napoleon III, when the French sovereign refused to aid her husband. Maximilian's ill-starred Mexican adventure came to an end at Queretaro, where he was shot by the revolutionists in June, 1869.

Charlotte for many years had lived in a chateau near Brussels. She was the daughter of Leopold I, king of the Belgians.

Charlotte is the aunt of Albert, king of the Belgians. Her brothers were King Leopold II, whom Albert succeeded, and Prince Phillippe, father of King Albert. She was born at the Chateau of Lacken, June 7, 1840, and was married to Maximilian at Brussels in 1857.

DEEDS EXECUTED FOR BLUE SPRINGS

Development of Albany Resort by New York Capitalist Soon To Follow Passing of Deeds.

Albany, Ga., December 5.—(AP)—With the execution of warranty deeds announced here today, final steps were taken in the acquisition of the property required by the Empire State Development company for the Blue Springs resort project, plans for which were announced several weeks ago by Barron G. Collier, financier of New York and Florida and head of the development company.

The company had an option on the property which included Blue Springs, owned by W. E. Hickey, and 252 acres of adjoining land owned by J. M. Patterson. The closing of the option marks the final step in acquiring the land needed for the Skywater Park development at Blue Springs, including creation of a large lake and park and construction of a modern tourist hotel, casino, gymnasium and golf links.

Preliminary work of grading for the lake and park already is under way and it is announced by Thad Huckabee, local representation and associate of Mr. Collier, that the actual construction work will be started as soon as the plans are completed by the architects.

PROGRESS IS MADE IN IMMUNIZATION AGAINST CANCER

London, December 5.—(AP)—Clear progress has been made by Dr. W. E. Gye and J. E. Barnard in their cancer work. These discoverers of the cancer organism, it is stated by the Sunday Times, have been successful in their efforts to secure immunization against cancer. Not only chickens, but mammals, have been inoculated and have remained immune to the cancer germ.

Their latest experiements, it is announced, will be published early in the new year.

Shenandoah Flight Not Made Over Protest of Lansdowne, Ranking Navy Officer Swears

Admiral Eberle Vigorously Denies Ship Was Ordered Upon Propaganda Mission.

Washington, December 5.—(AP)—Admiral Edward W. Eberle, senior ranking naval officer on the active list, gave the army court-martial today his sworn word that the dirigible Shenandoah was not ordered to make the disastrous mid-west flight over the protest of its commanding officer, Lieutenant Commander Zachary Lansdowne. He vigorously denied that the ship had been ordered on a propaganda mission, or had been sent out by officers lacking aviation understanding of the projected flight.

Before the veteran officer left the stand, where he sat for more than two hours facing Colonel William Mitchell, defendant in the trial and author of published charges that the Shenandoah's loss was the result of incompetence and neglect, he gave the court a detailed account of the preparations the navy made for the Shenandoah's flight, and explained at length why it had been authorized by the navy department.

Purpose of Trip.

"The purpose of the trip," the admiral said, "was to train the officers and men in overland as well as water flying, and to get some line on the commercial air routes to the west, especially in the vicinity of Detroit.

"We wanted also to train the Shenandoah's crew to the airship, in time of emergency, could be sent from one coast to another; to the Mexican border or the Great Lakes."

The court was reminded that the western flight originally was to have been made by the dirigible Los Angeles, limited by the treaty under which the United States obtained that craft to "commercial uses." That the commander of the Los Angeles turned back to Lakehurst, after he reached Cleveland, because of engine trouble, the admiral testified, showed that he exercised "good judgment." He added that Commander Lansdowne had the same "wide discretion" and could have turned back from his projected flight any time he wished.

Exhibition Incidental.

An incidental purpose of the Shenandoah flight, the witness said, was to give the people, in response to the many requests from governors and congressmen in the middle west, an opportunity to see the big dirigible. It was for this reason, he declared, that the department took into consideration, in arranging the ship's itinerary, the various state fairs being held at that time.

Responding to a question by the court, Admiral Eberle said in this connection that a number of surface craft had been sent to St. Louis at the time of the world's fair for the same motive that actuated the department in considering the state fairs when the Shenandoah's schedule was being worked out.

Letter Gave Wide Discretion.

The admiral said he gave Commander Lansdowne a letter June 29, which authorized him to exercise wide discretion in operating the Shenandoah at all times. The commander was "much pleased with the letter," the admiral declared, "and told me then that with the liberty of action the letter allowed, it was safe to go now" (in June) on the trip west.

The testimony of Admiral Eberle was given at the request of the prosecution counsel, who planned to conclude evidence on the Shenandoah phase of the trial in this way.

Lieutenant Commander B. G. Leighton, the second witness heard before the court recessed until Monday, told of the efforts made by the cruiser Richmond to save the airplane of Lieutenant Leigh Wade when the round-the-world flier made a forced landing in Iceland waters.

Tried to Save Plane.

Representative Frank R. Reid, chief defense counsel, contended that the navy failed to find Lieutenant Wade and save his plane. The commander admitted that a British trawler, passing by at the time, was the first to find the flier, but said the Richmond made a run of about 100 miles in slightly more than three hours, and did everything possible to save the machine when it reached the spot where the lieutenant had landed.

$300,000 LUMBER MILL IN MISSISSIPPI BURNS

Chicora, Miss., December 5.—(AP)—The mill of the Robinson Land company located near this place and one of the largest mills of its kind in this section, burned today with all the machinery. The loss will reach $300,000. The dry kilns and planing mill were saved. The mill will be rebuilt at once, it was said. W. B. Patterson, of Mobile, is one of the owners of the bill.

Coral Gables Orchestra at Biltmore

Coming directly from a six-months engagement at the Biltmore, in Coral Gables, John Hamp and his fellow musicians will be the main attraction in Atlanta at the Biltmore hotel from December 21 to January 10, playing for all social functions at the hotel. This orchestra is well known in the east, as well as in Florida, and will act as a drawing card for the Biltmore hotel affairs during the Christmas holidays.

Coolidge Ready To Deliver Talk At Farm Parley

Washington, December 5.—(AP)—President Coolidge today completed the address on agriculture he will deliver in Chicago Monday simultaneously with the convening of the new congress. He will speak before the seventh annual convention of the American Farm Bureau federation.

The trip to Chicago, which the president visited a year ago to address the international live stock exposition, will be made by special train, leaving here tomorrow afternoon. Mrs. Coolidge will accompany the president, the only others in his immediate party being Secretary Sanders, Major James F. Coupal, the white house physician, and Colonel S. A. Cheney and Captain Adolphus Andrews, aides.

Arrival in the midwest metropolis will be timed to give the president a brief rest before delivering his speech at 11 o'clock. He will go direct to the Sherman hotel, where the convention will be held, and a luncheon given in his honor by officials of the federation. Limiting his stay in Chicago to five hours, the president will go direct from the hotel to his train, which is due in Washington Tuesday in time for him to receive the congressional notification committee.

MINIATURE WHITE HOUSE IS BEING ERECTED.

Chicago, December 5.—(AP)—Artisans were working 24 hours a day in three shifts rushing completion of the miniature "white house" on the roof of the Hotel Sherman for President and Mrs. Coolidge, who will come Monday, when the president will address the American Farm Bureau federation. A number of radio stations will broadcast his speech, to be delivered at 11 a. m.

After lunching with the farmer representatives, the president planned to speed back to Washington to deliver his message to congress Tuesday.

Mrs. Coolidge will be the guest of the ladies of the farm bureaus at luncheon, with Mrs. O. E. Bradfute, wife of the president of the American Farm Bureau federation, as hostess.

Proof Is Found of Advanced Old Civilization in Sahara By Beloit College Expedition

Discovery of Queen's Tomb Pronounced Greatest Archaeological Treasure Africa Has Produced.

Paris, December 5.—(AP)—An account of how proof was found of the existence of an advanced ancient civilization, where desert winds now sweep over the shifting dunes of the south central Sahara, and of the discovery of a "legendary tomb that is not a legend any more," was brought to Paris today by the Count de Prorok, Beloit college expedition, just returned from its labors in the sun-scorched desert.

The expedition's leaders, Count de Prorok and Bradley Tyrrell, a trustee of Beloit (Wis.) college, said their discoveries in the Hoggar country, which some antiquarians have regarded as the "lost Atlantis" of the ancient world, had fully repaid their work.

"The primary object of the expedition—establishment of the fact that in ancient times there were Saharan trade routes between Carthage and the great civilization then existing in the Hoggar country—was achieved," the sunburned count said today.

"The tomb of Tin-Hanan (the discovery of which was announced November 28) is, I believe, the greatest archaeological treasure Africa has ever produced. The statue of the Libyan Venus we found there alone would more than pay the entire cost of the expedition.

"Tin-Hanan's tomb stands on a high volcanic rock overlooking the desert. It is built in a circular shape with rectilinear blocks, covered with Libyo-Berber inscriptions. These have been turned over for translation to Abbe J. B. Chabot, vice president of the French institute. The tombs of 15 nobles, or Amrads, surround the base of the tomb.

"Tin-Hanan was the ancestress of the Tuareg line of kings, whose rule was that of a matriarchate, that is, the succession descended through the female side. Legend appears to link her with the great goddess of the Carthaginians, Tanit, and with Athena of the Greeks. The tomb resembles the socalled 'Christian's Tomb' at Algiers, but is better preserved.

Food Stored for Ages.

"We began digging half way between the base and the top, driving into the heart of the structure and then downward until we struck a passage leading into an open chamber filled with dried dates, wheat and food stored ages ago. There were eight chambers, of which we explored only the treasures of the queen.

"French soldiers are now guarding the tomb, which the French government has declared a national monument.

"Carthage and Utica were not the first states to exploit the Saraha country. We found all along the way Neolithic stations, marked by heaps of black stones and ancient flints, in the dry river beds, indicating that still more ancient trade routes had passed that way. These flints were the handiwork of man at the dawn of history, and might be 10,000 years old. We found 14 in the same river bed within half an hour, showing that it was once a thickly populated region.

"Louis Chapui, a former officer with the French Saharan troops, had once seen this tomb and recalled its location and guided us to it. There we were aided in the work by natives."

Natives Are Hospitable.

The count said that the natives, the Tuaregs, a white race, were hospitable everywhere, but that they became excited when the treasures were taken out of Tin-Hanan's tomb. The greatest diplomacy was required to quiet them. The exposition, he said, went unarmed. They treated the natives courteously and taught them to sing college and Rotarian songs.

"We are glad to have found something after our hardships in the desert," Count de Prorok said. "Sometimes we went without water when our overheated engines required water to cool the radiators of our motor cars.

"On our return from the Hoggar country, our automobiles were caught in a terrific sandstorm, amid dunes of moving sand 1,500 feet high, the greatest dune country of the Sahara. Mr. Tyrrell and I reached Ouargla, but the other two cars were lost for four days. We had just sent out a camel caravan to search for them when we saw them creeping over a ridge miles away."

Description of Venus.

The Libyan Venus, to which Count de Prorok referred, is a small stone statuette of great antiquity found near the tomb of Tin-Hanan. Count De Prorok said it may date from nearly 100,000 B. C. The treasures found in the tomb, in which a skeleton was discovered, included "a golden diadem, dotted with stars, five necklaces of precious stone, 18 bracelets, nine of them gold and nine silver, furnishings of delicately carved wood, a complete set of toilet articles, a little mound of precious grease."

"The expedition packed up 40 cases of these marvels," Count de Prorok said, "and presented them to the governor general of Algeria."

4 Narrowly Escape Drowning as Car Runs Into River

Huntsville, Ala., December 5.—(Special.)—Mr. and Mrs. P. N. Huff and their two daughters, of Lacy Springs, had a narrow escape from death by drowning Friday when an automobile in which they were riding plunged into the Tennessee river at Whitesburg ferry. The ferry had been blown away from the landing by a gale and a signal from the ferryman to the driver of the Huff car came too late for the car to be stopped. The car plunged into the water but stopped before it became submerged. All occupants got a bad wetting but got safely out to the bank and the car was hauled out a few hours later.

PRESIDENT OF SUB CRASH PROBE BOARD CLAIMED BY DEATH

New York, December 5.—(AP)—Captain Orton P. Jackson, U. S. N., commandant of the naval training station at Newport, R. I., and president of the court of inquiry which has been investigating the sinking of the submarine S-51, died today at the Roosevelt hospital.

Captain Jackson died of high blood pressure, for which he had been under treatment at Roosevelt hospital for two weeks. He has suffered from the ailment for two years, and on November 3 he came to this city to consult with Dr. Rolfe Floyd, his personal physician.

Mrs. Jackson, and her son, O. P. Jackson, Jr., a student at Harvard university, were at the bedside when the naval officer died, as was a brother, George Jackson, of Negaunee, Mich.

YOUTHFUL MINERS DIE OF INJURIES FROM EXPLOSION

Fort Smith, Ark., December 5.—(AP)—William Fortner, 18, and Leonard Fortner, 21, brothers, died here tonight from injuries received in an explosion late yesterday in the Kanima mine at Kanima, Okla., near here. Floyd Hayes, 29, another victim of the explosion, is in a serious condition tonight.

According to James Bell, pit foreman of the Kanima company, the explosion occurred when a torch was accidentally applied to powder poured from a "jack" to form a spot.

MANGHAM REELECTED MAYOR AT BREMEN

Bremen, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—One of the hottest city elections ever held in Bremen came to a close here today when Mayor J. J. Mangham was reelected for a two-year term, defeating J. F. Walker by a vote of 162 to 120. More interest was manifested in this election than in any former municipal election here.

There were two complete tickets in the field and the entire Mangham ticket, including the school board, was elected.

$100,000 DAMAGE SUIT IS FILED AGAINST LIPSER

New York, December 5.—(AP)—James J. Lipser, vice president of the Park and Tilford company, was made defendant in a $100,000 damage suit, instituted in Brooklyn today, charging him with enticing from home Sophie Block, 18-year-old daughter of Benjamin Block.

The suit, brought by the girl's father, charges that Lipser made love to Sophie, who was his stenographer.

The office romance, according to pa-lution was passed whereby the members pledged themselves "never to marry a girl addicted to cigarettes."

To the more puritanical of the members this resolution seemed too mild, whereupon they moved that the league ban marriage with girls who "either smoked, drank intoxicating beverages, wore their hair bobbed or painted their lips."

GERMANS FORM LEAGUE AGAINST MODERN FLAPPER

Berlin, December 5.—A league against modern women has been formed in Germany by men who yearn for the old-fashioned girl.

DR. W. B. CALDWELL AT THE AGE OF 83

Your Laxative! Does It Regulate for Weeks?

To Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, it seemed cruel that so many constipated men, women, children, and particularly old folks, had to be kept constantly "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

While he knew that constipation was the cause of nearly all headaches, biliousness, indigestion and stomach misery, he did not believe that a sickening "purge" or "physic" every day or two was necessary.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which regulates the bowels. A single dose will establish natural, healthy bowel movement for weeks at a time even for those chronically constipated. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement but, best of all, it is often months before another dose is necessary. Besides, it is absolutely harmless, and so pleasant that even a cross, feverish, bilious, sick child gladly takes it.

Buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine and just see for yourself.

SNOW BLANKETS WID-WEST STATES

Chicago, December 5.—The middle west is in the grip of another cold wave tonight. Snow, driven by high winds, has blocked highways and delayed railway trains.

Four deaths and heavy damage to property resulted from severe winds and the intense cold.

The storm swept as far south as Kentucky, where three persons perished under the debris of wrecked buildings in the vicinity of Sturgis. John Murphy was frozen to death near Iowa City, Iowa, when he become lost in a blinding blizzard.

Temperatures throughout the Chicago forecast area dropped rapidly to near zero in Minnesota. Street car service was crippled by deep snows in numerous Iowa and Nebraska towns.

Trains were from one to two hours late in Minnesota and snow plows were brought out to clear the tracks.

WORK OF CLEARING SITE FOR MIAMI SCHOOL STARTED

Miami, Fla., December 5.—(AP). Work of clearing the site for Miami university has been started at Coral Gables. Present plans call for an expenditure of $10,000,000 upon the institution.

Construction will be speeded up, and the cornerstone will be put into place on New Year's day, Frederick Zeigen, managing regent of the university, announces.

Tentative plans for launching a drive for $5,000,000, to be added to a similar amount donated by George E. Merrick, developer of Coral Gables, are under way. No steps yet have been taken to obtain a faculty, Mr. Zeigen said.

RIVAL CHINESE ARMIES EXPECTED TO CLASH

Pekin, December 5.—(AP)—Rival armies are moving toward a meeting in the region southwest of Tientsin, which may decide the fate of General Li Ching-Ling, civil governor of Chihli, who is considered the main stumbling block to complete control of that province, including Pekin, by General Feng Yu-Hsiang.

General Li is strengthening his forces at Jenkiu, 65 miles southwest of Tientsin and all other points. Meanwhile, two divisions under General Youeh Wie-Chun, governor of Honan and ally of Feng, are approaching Tacheng, 25 miles east of Jenkiu.

Reports say numbers of troops of General Kuo Sung-Ling, who is leading the advance against his former chief, Marshal Chang Tso-Lin, are deserting Kuo and returning to Chang's command. However, Kuo's forces are reported to have begun shelling the Mukden war lord's defensive positions in southern Manchuria.

MEMORIAL MENTION IS NOT PERMITTED AT CAROLINA MEET

Columbia, S. C., December 5.—(AP) The Columbia State will say tomorrow that the subject of the Stone Mountain memorial was not permitted to be brought before the convention of the South Carolina division, United Daughters of the Confederacy, this week, although some delegates attempted to discuss the movement at the meeting.

The convention met in Spartanburg and was in session three days. No mention of Stone Mountain nor the memorial coins, for the sale of which a campaign is now under way in the state, was made in any press reports of the proceedings received in Columbia. The State says its information was received from delegates who have returned to their homes here.

In explaining reasons for the "tension," the delegates gave different views, according to the newspaper story, but "some held that opposition to Governor McLeod, who is ex-officio chairman of the campaign for the sale of coins in South Carolina, had considerable bearing on the matter."

NICARAGUA CANAL TO BE INVESTIGATED BY U. S. ENGINEERS

San Salvador, Republic of Salvador, December 5.—(AP)—A commission of American engineers has arrived at Bluefield, Nicaragua, to make preliminary studies of the construction of a Nicaraguan canal.

Proposals for an interoceanic waterway through Nicaragua were dropped by the United States government early in 1923 because of the prohibitive costs of the undertaking.

Last May, Ralph N. Elliott, a colleague of the economist, Professor Jeremiah W. Jenks, who was retained by Nicaragua to revise the country's banking laws, submitted a plan for the canal to the Nicaraguan government. He then was quoted in dispatches as declaring that the United States will finance and begin the preliminary work, but Washington officials asserted they had no knowledge of Mr. Elliott's offer and stated that the American government had not passed judgment on the project in any way.

One or Two Platoon System for Firemen Is Issue at Macon

Macon, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—Macon firemen will know next Tuesday whether they shall go back to the old one platoon system or continue in service on the two platoon system. While Atlanta has voted an increase in pay for her firemen, this city is endeavoring to increase the efficiency of the department by going back to the old system and at the same time promising to increase the pay of the fire fighters.

Mayor Wallace Miller in his opening speech to city council, after taking office, announced that there would have to be radical changes in the police and fire departments.

Notice has been given that there will be a new fire chief the first of the year. An ordinance to reestablish the one platoon system—or 24 hours continuous service for the firemen, with leaves of absence at intervals to be fixed by the fire committee of council—was introduced two weeks ago and will come up for final passage on Tuesday night.

Firemen are protesting the change. So are some of the labor leaders. The fire committee is hearing the protests.

Chief L. M. Jones will be replaced, it is stated, as head of the fire department and there is talk of getting a trained fireman from some other city to take charge as chief.

Chief Martin Thompson has been replaced by Lieutenant Colonel Ben Watkins as chief of the police department. The first of the year the police department is to be completely reorganized and it probably will be turned into a squad of motorcycle officers and a traffic squad to meet changed conditions of this growing city.

CHANGE IN PASTORS AT STATESBORO CHURCH

Statesboro, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—Rev. Leland Moore who has for the past three years been pastor of the Statesboro Methodist church goes to Cairo, next year.

The year which is just closed easily is the greatest year the Statesboro Methodist church has ever known. During the year almost 100 new members were added to the church. This year marks the peak of liberality in the church, and during the year the church had the privilege of entertaining the South Georgia Woman's Missionary conference, but has also practically completed a great building program.

Rev. J. M. Foster who has been four years with the church at Bainbridge, comes to the Statesboro pulpit.

SALARIES ARE NAMED IN MUSCOGEE COUNTY

Columbus, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—The grand jury at its session here this week approved the schedule of salaries for Muscogee county officials as submitted to the body by the county commission.

The schedule for the first five officials follows: Ordinary, $3,600, and one clerk, $1,800; tax receiver, $2,000, and two clerks for six months, $1,200; tax collector, $2,500, in addition to state fees, and two clerks full time, $4,800; clerk superior court, $7,500, and six clerks, total $15,840; sheriff, $3,600, and one deputy, $2,000, and one deputy, $1,800.

ATTRACTIVE FAIR HELD IN M'INTOSH COUNTY

Darien, Ga., December 5.—(AP)—The McIntosh county fair for 1925 was opened in Darien Friday morning at the courthouse under the supervision of the county demonstrator, Mrs. King, who succeeded former Agent Hogeboom about three months ago.

The poultry show was the main outside feature as there were some exceptionally fine fowls shown, the white leghorns and barred Plymouth Rocks making a splendid display.

There was a booth prepared by the owners of Broughton, one of the old rice plantations recently reclaimed and planted. This booth had white and blue cane rice on stalks and threshed, bananas, oranges, pepper, beans, peas and other products, all of which made a splendid appearance.

There were sent in from Pine Harbor many varieties of fruits, such as oranges, kumquats, grapefruit, etc., and various vegetables. Beautiful samples of paper shell and other pecans, grown near Darien, and Japanese walnuts were shown. A large variety of staple products were on hand, and, in fact, everything that goes to make up a county fair.

The display of canned goods, while small, was fine. An unusual display of fancy work was shown, the county club girls sending in samples of their work. There was a fine display of basketry made by women and girls in the county. Works of art were quite fine, and the fair is considered quite a success. Prize winners will be announced later.

Jefferson Davis Road Cities Are Interested In Bridge at Eufaula

Ashburn, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—An event of special interest to the people of Ashburn and Turner county is the completion of the memorial bridge on the Jefferson Davis highway at Eufaula, Ala., connecting link for the route between Georgia and Alabama. The citizens of Eufaula are making elaborate preparations to entertain the large crowd of Georgians and their home folks with a barbecue furnished by the civic clubs of that historic city on the bluff of the Chattahoochee river.

The Jefferson Davis highway which passes through Eufaula, connecting Montgomery with Richmond, the two capitals of the Confederate states, follows the historic route taken by Jefferson Davis and his party on their trip through Georgia, in an effort to reach the Gulf coast.

Mr. Davis and his party were captured near Irwinville, Ga., where the state of Georgia has been granted the land where that party camped the fateful night of his capture, and upon which suitable memorial is to be erected. The highway passes this spot.

Entering Georgia from South Carolina at Augusta the route proceeds through Louisville, Wrightsville, Dublin, Eastman and Abbeville, where Mr. Davis camped the night preceding his capture, through Fitzgerald to Ashburn, Sylvester, Albany, Dawson, Cuthbert and Georgetown.

The bridge will be officially opened on December 18, Governor Brandon and Governor Clifford Walker participating. Special invitations have been extended to the people living along the Jefferson Davis highway through the civic clubs of Eufaula, and its chamber of commerce.

LOUCHEUR ANXIOUS TO DISCUSS DEBTS TO U. S. AND BRITAIN

Paris, December 5.—(AP)—M. Loucheur, the finance minister, in the course of an interview published by the Matin, says:

"I am, naturally, eager to discuss interallied debts without delay. M. Berenger is going to Washington entrusted with that mission, while I myself am going to London with the same aim at the beginning of next month.

"I have already sent a message to Secretary Mellon, and he has just replied in the warmest terms, expressing pleasure at the renewal of the negotiations. Mr. Churchill has telegraphed from London in the same sense."

POSTAL RECEIPTS SHOW BIG GAIN OVER LAST YEAR

Atlanta postal receipts for the month of November soared again, increasing 8.25 per cent over November of 1924 and recording the largest total of any November since 1920, it was announced Saturday by Edwin K. Large, postmaster. The prosperity of Atlanta and the surrounding territory is reflected in the totals, officials said.

Receipts for November, 1925, were $292,771.12 while those for November, 1924, amounted to $270,449.68, registering a gain of $22,321.44. The receipt totals include money taken in for postoffice box rentals, but this is comparatively a small figure, the great majority being for the sale of postage stamps.

POTATO GROWERS ORGANIZE IN TOOMBS

Lyons, Ga., December 5.—(Special.) Final touches were put on an organization of sweet potato growers here Saturday afternoon when a large group of farmers met, elected directors who employed their sales manager for the ensuing season. This organization will also handle the early Porto Rican sweet potatoes.

Most of the growers of Toombs county have signed and contracts will be presented to neighboring counties soon. This association should handle about $400,000 worth of these sweets next year as the volume of Big Stems alone amounted to $150,000 this year and the crop was short, due to the drouth.

The seed crop has been unusually good here in spite of the poor outlook early last fall. These seed potatoes are now selling at a rapid clip and the growers are hilling them until next January when they will be delivered and bedded.

This crop has proven to be one of the most profitable ever developed here and since the markets can consume many more than are being produced, this county is planning to grow a much larger crop in 1926.

ST. LOUIS SPEAKER AT MACON PRESBYTERY

Macon, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—Mrs. W. C. Winsborough, of St. Louis, superintendent of women's work in the Southern Presbyterian church, made a report of the Stockholm conference at the group conference of the Macon presbyterial at the First Presbyterian church yesterday. Mrs. W. A. Turner, president of the Georgia synodical, discussed the negro women's conference and Mrs. Fred Arthur, of Americus, talked about boys. There were a number of other speakers.

Mrs. Walter D. Lamar presided over the luncheon at noon. After this Mrs. Winsborough gave an account of her journey through Brazil. There were 150 delegates in attendance.

'Wolf of Wall Street,' 57, Weds Screen and Stage Star

BRIDE, 21, IS FORMER BATHING BEAUTY

New York, December 5.—(AP)—David Lamar, whose stock transactions earned him the name of the "Wolf of Wall Street," was in New York today with his bride, formerly Edna Eck, known on the stage and screen as Edna French, whom he married November 22 in Ridgefield, Conn.

Lamar, who is 57, and his 21-year-old bride had both been previously married. A year ago Lamar's first wife, Mrs. Marie Lamar, divorced him and was given custody of their young daughter, Dorothy. Divorce also ended the first marriage of the second Mrs. Lamar, who secretly married Frank Gregg, wealthy Cleveland man, several years ago.

Lamar's bride, daughter of August Eck, retired Montana miner, was formerly a motion picture bathing beauty. Later she became a Ziegfeld Follies girl. She and Lamar met last year, after he was released from prison at Trenton, N. J., where he had served a year for conspiracy to prevent shipment of munitions during the war.

Previously Lamar had served a two-year sentence in Atlanta penitentiary for impersonating a federal officer in an effort to defraud J. P. Morgan & Company.

In 1923, after his appeal from the sentence for conspiracy failed, Lamar disappeared from New York. He was found eight months later in Mexico, and after several futile attempts to have his sentence set aside, he was sent to prison.

On November 22 Lamar and Miss Eck motored to Ridgefield and were married by the Rev. Wilmot P. Lord, pastor of the Ridgefield Methodist church.

Ex-Choir Singer Is Arrested

BROADWAY BUTTERFLY FALLS INTO HANDS OF LAW

On Worthless Check Charge

New York, December 5.—Another butterfly has been singed on wicked old Broadway—this one after an attempt to sink its teeth into the dapper orchestra leader, Vincent Lopez.

Miss Lora Sonderson, a musical comedy star of surpassing beauty, charged Lopez with stealing from her a pearl ring worth $6,000. Hardly had this case been thrown out of court before Lora was arrested for passing an alleged worthless $175 check for a gown at a Fifth avenue shop.

Miss Sonderson, by the way, first attracted attention as a choir singer in Kansas City and again in 1923, when prominent artists placed her among the most beautiful women in America. She has played prominent parts in various musical comedies.

Lopez testified that Lora and a young man entered his night club and that when the pearl had dropped out of its setting, he had picked it up and returned it to her. A waiter found the pearl again after she had left and gave it to Lopez, who returned it to the actress three days later. Lora insisted that Lopez had asked to see the ring and had failed to return it. She then asked for another adjournment of the case. The court refused the adjournment and dismissed the action because, he told Lora, "your actions throughout this case have not impressed me favorably."

At this point, an attorney for a jeweler stepped in and asserted that Lora had given a $1,850 check for a diamond bracelet which had come back marked "no funds."

After that, Lora was arrested on complaint of the gown shop.

The records show that last May the beautiful butterfly announced that she had been lured from her apartment in the "sinful Seventies" and that while she was gone someone stole $30,000 in jewelry, which was insured for $20,000.

FARMERS OF SYCAMORE GATHER PEANUT CROP

Sycamore, Ga., December 5.—(AP)—The peanut crop of this section is being gathered during the early days of December, it is learned from farmers, who also advise that their yield of "goobers" is finding a market as soon as they are picked.

More than 60 carloads have been shipped from Sycamore, representing about half the production of this section.

HUNTSVILLE JAIL SETS VISITING DAYS

Huntsville, Ala., December 5.—(Special.)—Sheriff D. M. Gardiner has announced that hereafter visitors will be allowed to see inmates of the jail only on Thursdays, and not as they please, and all parties calling at the jail are subject to being searched if it is thought necessary, he said.

There are 42 inmates, 23 of them being federal prisoners.

FARMERS OF HANCOCK PLANT COVER CROPS

Sparta, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—The farmers of Hancock county will plant the largest acreage in cover crops this fall they have ever planted in the history of the county, County Agent S. D. Truitt, has ordered many tons of hairy vetch and crimson clover seed and sold them to the farmers co-operatively.

MRS. GEORGE M. KNOX PASSES AT APPLING

Appling, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—Mrs. Georgia Knox died here Thursday night after a lingering illness.

She was the wife of Cephas P. Knox, who survives her. She also leaves several sons and daughters.

PENSACOLA TO GET SHIPBUILDING PLANT

New York, December 5.—(Special.) Announcement was made today of the formation of the Pensacola Shipbuilding and Engineering corporation to engage in ship construction at Pensacola on the Gulf of Mexico. The new project, which is expected to bring about a revival of shipbuilding activity at Pensacola, has the backing of E. M. Elliott and associates of Pensacola, and Congressman Fred S. Purnell, of Attica, Ind., and D. Lewis Green, former law partner of Congressman Purnell.

According to present plans a modern shipbuilding plant will be put into operation at Pensacola which possesses the largest and best harbor on the Gulf of Mexico. Rapid strides in the recent acquisition of the St. Louis & San Francisco railway of the Muscle Shoals, Birmingham and Pensacola road, which gives the Frisco system its first outlet to Tidewater on the gulf.

BROOKS FARMERS MAKE HALF BALE TO ACRE

Quitman, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—The ginning report for Brooks county shows that 4,156 bales were ginned to November 15 as compared with 2,441 bales on the same date of 1924. The value of the cotton crop in the county this year is figured at a half million dollars.

The farmers feel very much encouraged over the yield per acre which averaged a half bale and was quite as good as the average yield before the boll weevil came and it is certain that more attention will be paid to the crop next year.

OVERSTREET ROBBED ON WADLEY STREET

Wadley, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—E. L. Overstreet was held up and robbed at 9 o'clock last night on a side street by two masked men. Overstreet was riding in a car with a man who was supposed to be his friend. From evidence obtained it appears to have been a frame-up, as his "friend" cannot be found, and his name is not known. Overstreet was relieved of all the cash he had, his watch, ring and pin.

FLORALA, ALABAMA, GETS CHURCH MEETING

Columbus, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—The fifteenth annual session of the southeastern district Council of the Assemblies of God, who held their annual council with the North Highland Assembly of God church, closed yesterday after a three days' session.

Florala, Ala., was chosen as the meeting place for the next council, which will convene December 1, 1926.

Entombed Miners Rescued Alive After Being Trapped In Blazing Mine 18 Hours

Two Victims Die in Hospital at Mouth of Tunnel Soon After Being Released From Trap.

Nederland, Colo., December 5.—In a little four-room shack far up near the timberline of the Rockies tonight tender hands are caring for the survivors of a mine accident which in some respects is just another chapter in the big volume of tragedies peculiar to these colonies where men wrest precious metals from their hiding places within the rugged mountains.

In other respects, the Fairview Tungsten mine accident will be remembered for many years by those who live in the valley below, for its climax was a rescue that was almost miraculous.

Huddled around their firesides in this blizzard-swept area discussing the happenings of the last two days veteran miners and their families were unable to recall a parallel to the Fairview episode.

Working frantically against the hazards of fire, high winds and intense cold the 23 men who were entombed 800 feet back in a huge mountain peak were brought out after 18 hours with the loss of only two lives.

Robert Stephenson, 23, one of the entombed men, and Charles Hjuroust, 55, a member of the rescue party, died in the improvised hospital at the mouth of the tunnel. Those who remain in the shacks are not seriously injured and one at a time are being released and sent down the mountain side to their homes below.

A few miles down the range in a hospital at Boulder lies Prentice Norris, the hero of the rescue. Physicians say Norris may recover but he was gassed in the world war and his lungs may not be strong enough to overcome his present injuries.

Rescuer Defies Gas.

Norris was the man who defied the gas and smoke of the smouldering tunnel to save his companions. He crept in blindly, felt his way about and succeeded in turning on the huge exhaust fans that kept the entombed men from becoming asphyxiated. In doing this, however, Norris touched an exposed electric wire and the shock sent him into unconsciousness. Then for several minutes before help could reach him he lay on the tunnel floor inhaling smoke and mine fumes.

Three hundred persons participated in the rescue. Acts of heroism too numerous to recount are being told in the little homes that make up the Fairview colony.

Winds Fan Blaze.

Fire broke out in the main tunnel of the mine early Friday morning. High winds fanned it until the tunnel mouth became a roaring inferno. Against the blizzard chemicals were impotent and water froze in the buckets before it could be thrown on the fire.

The frantic rescue workers called for help from surrounding towns and resorted to pitching snow on the flames. They knew that at least 20 men were huddled together back in a side tunnel, probably suffering from a lack of air as the fire drew the oxygen out of the mine, giving poisonous fumes an opportunity to seep out through the tunnel walls.

Cave-in Blocks Rescue.

Friday evening the flames were extinguished, but just as the workers were beginning to make some headway through the debris that blocked their path there was a cave-in. Timbers, weakened by the fire, had given way and let the roof fall down.

Fortunately the rescuers escaped the tumbling debris. They then began sinking a shaft into the tunnel from above, back of the place where the cave-in occurred. It was through this shaft that rescue squads, in the bleak, early hours this morning brought the entombed men to safety.

Some were able to crawl out without help, but others had to be carried.

POLISH NOVELIST CLAIMED BY DEATH

Warsaw, December 5.—(AP)—Wladislaw Stanislaw Reymont, Polish novelist and poet, and last year's winner of the nobel prize for literature, died today, after a long illness.

M. Reymont was born in 1868 of a peasant family which took active part in the Polish revolution against Russia of 1863. He was expelled from school at Kielce because of anti-Russian expressions when very young, and began work as a telegraph operator in a small railroad station.

Later he joined a traveling theatrical company and then drifted to other occupations, being at one time a railroad worker and another a farm hand. His first stories were published in magazine form in 1893. His first novel was "Marzyciel" (the dreamer), the hero of which is a railroad employee.

Reymont visited the United States in the summer of 1919 to study the life of Polish immigrants here. The award of the nobel prize last year was based on his most famous work, the novel "Polish Peasants," issued in four volumes — "Autumn," "Winter," "Spring" and "Summer." These volumes have been translated into all the European languages.

MIAMI-CHICAGO STEAMER SERVICE IS EXPECTED SOON

Miami, Fla., December 5.—(AP)—Inauguration of the first direct Miami-Great Lakes steamer service will follow the expected arrival here today of the steamship Bennington, followed immediately by the steamship Burlington, of the Rutland Lake Michigan lines from Chicago.

The two ships, proceeding a short distance apart, were placed in this service principally as a result of the railroad embargo on non-perishable freight, Florida found.

The twin craft sailed from Chicago two days apart, the Bennington clearing on November 15 and the Burlington on November 17, proceeding down the St. Lawrence river to the Atlantic coast and thence here. Both steamers, of 2,000 tons displacement, are loaded with freight cargoes from 150 shippers of Michigan, Illinois and Wisconsin.

Wednesday is regarded as an unlucky day by the Asiatians and is never chosen for a wedding.

RAILWAY PAY ROLLS SHOW BIG INCREASE

Washington, December 5.—(AP)—Class 1 railroads had 1,803,527 persons employed September 15. The interstate commerce commission, in reporting the figures today, estimated this to be an increase of 2,231 over the total for the same month last year. The pay roll for the month amounted to $244,281,920 in September. Last year it was $240,659,250.

Government Land Near Miami Sold For $2,800,000

Washington, December 5.—(AP)—The $2,800,000 bid of Nathan Friedman, of New York, for the 800-acre Chapman field military reservation near Miami, Fla., was accepted today by Assistant Secretary Hanford MacNider, of the war department.

The Friedman bid was the only proposal received, and the government realized a profit of 3,843 per cent, having paid $71,000 for the tract. Mr. Friedman was represented by his attorney, J. Silverman, who said that no decision had yet been reached by the interests his clients represented as to how the tract would be exploited.

"We have not given that subject detailed consideration as yet," Mr. Silverman said. "We happened to have surplus funds available and we believe that Florida real estate is a safe investment."

Under the the terms of the contract which Mr. Silverman will sign with the war department, a cash payment of $1,500,000 must be made when the contract is executed. The fact that this unusually rigid provision was included in the government's proposal in some measure influenced the department in deciding to accept the Friedman bid.

A careful checking up of the financial responsibility of the bidder and of the question of present actual values of the land preceded the action taken by Secretary MacNider in accepting the bid. The appraised value of the tract is considerably less than the amount of the bid and Mr. MacNider said that views held by real estate experts in Florida as to the possible acutal or speculative value of the tract varied so widely that no definite consensus was obtainable which would have justified the department in rejecting Friedman's offer.

MUSSOLINI OFFERS BILL TO RATIFY U.S. DEBT AGREEMENT

Rome, December 5.—(AP)—Premier Mussolini presented a bill in the chamber of deputies today for ratification of the Italian debt funding agreement, negotiated at Washington by the mission under Count Volpi, the finance minister.

Count Volpi was roundly cheered when he entered the chamber. Premier Mussolini thanked the finance minister and the members of his mission in the name of the government, and declared the negotiations had been facilitated by the amicable atmosphere encountered by the delegates in Washington. For this he expressed greetings to the American nation.

Count Volpi asserted that the success of the mission was largely due to the fraternal spirit he had found in America where, he added, Mussolini enjoyed remarkable prestige.

VETERAN JUMPS TRAIN UPON WAY TO ENTER HOSPITAL

Mobile, Ala., December 5.—(AP)—While being escorted from Mobile to a world war veterans' bureau at Augusta, Ga., for treatment for a nervous disorder, Herbert J. Stanley, 26, of San Antonio, Texas, leaped from a fast-moving Louisville & Nashville train, five miles out of Mobile today, and eluded his guard.

Stanley was in charge of Deputy Sheriff Harry Moran, who permitted him to enter a lavatory and, once inside, the ex-soldier slammed the door, locked it, and leaped from a window. A search was made, but he could not be found. Stanley was picked up here by Red Cross officials several days ago.

DeVALERA SCORES BRITISH DECISION ON IRISH DISPUTE

Dublin, December 5.—(AP)—Eamonn deValera, the Irish republican leader, in a statement today, scored the boundary agreement reached in London but declared it would be respected "if submitted to an assembly of representatives elected by the Irish people."

"England succeeded in cheating Ireland by article XII of the Free State treaty, and has been pleased to waive her claim to cheat them by article V," he said. "The article, which was interpreted as a safeguard against the partition of Ireland and as liberation of the nationalist majorities in Ulster has gone by the board and in exchange England promises not to make us pay a debt we do not owe her.

"When Professor MacNeill (the Free State representative on the boundary commission) resigned, I hoped that no Irishman would be found who would sign a document dismembering the country but now that this has been done my only hope is that the people will not consent to it."

EX-BANK OFFICIAL GIVEN SEVEN YEARS FOR EMBEZZLEMENT

Nashville, Tenn., December 5.—(AP) Drew Rowen, former assistant vice president of the Fourth and First Savings Bank and Trust company, and manager of its branch at the powder plant at Hadley's Bend, alleged to have embezzled more than $150,000 of the bank's funds and on trial in the county criminal court on an indictment alleging embezzlement of $25,000, fraudulent breach of trust and grand larceny, was convicted this afternoon on embezzlement charges and given a sentence of not more than seven years.

DAVIS APPROVES CHANGE IN STYLE OF ARMY UNIFORM

Washington, December 5.—(AP)—The roll collar style for tunics and overcoats was approved by Secretary Davis today for enlisted men and officers of the entire army.

A fight to replace the present high-stiff collars in the army uniform has been in progress for years, and the secretary, in approving the change, said investigation both in the national guard and the regular army had shown a desire for the newer type. The air service officers previously had been given permission to wear the roll collars.

No attempt will be made to alter stocks of uniforms for enlisted men now on hand and these will be used until exhausted, with a gradual complete change to the new roll collar tunics.

Regulations to make the new uniform effective for officers are being drawn so as to permit gradual replacement of the present high collar uniforms as they are worn out. Present army overcoats can be altered with little additional expense to the officers, it is held.

SPARTA MAY REVIVE EPISCOPAL CHURCH

Sparta, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—Plans are being made by local members of the Episcopal church in conjunction with church officials from other cities of the state to remodel the local church and resume regular services after a lapse of several years without a minister.

It is reported that a new roof will be placed on the building which is located on lower Broad street, the building painted and all other necessary repairs made.

MUSSOLINI FAVORS 'LEAGUE OF SILENT' TO STOP SPEECHES

Rome, December 5.—Premier Mussolini favors a "league of the silent" whose aim would be the abolition of speeches.

The premier today addressed the national congress of schoolmasters, promising them higher salaries. When he concluded, his hearers urged he continue his speech: Mussolini retorted:

"I have said enough. Verbosity is characteristic of democracy and the old regime. I wish to found an organization which has not yet been projected, namely, a league of the silent, which will abolish speeches."

BOY WITH PEANUTS GIVE OFFICERS CLUE TO ALLEGED TIGER

Macon, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—City detectives last night trailed a boy and a bag of peanuts into an alleged blind tiger. A lookout was seized by the officers when the boy entered the "hooch" establishment, and a detective tip-toed up the stairs behind the boy.

When a hand was thrust through a half open door for the peanuts, the strong arm of the law took hold of the hand. Then two other detectives joined the one who was holding the hand.

Howard Smith, alleged proprietor and lookout, and Lester Clements, who had a penchant for peanuts, were booked at headquarters on charges of violating the prohibition law. A quantity of liquor was seized.

MOVIE QUEEN AGAIN BECOMES U. S. CITIZEN

Los Angeles, Calif., December 5.—(AP)—Constance Talmadge of the films became an American citizen again here yesterday.

She is native born, but lost her nationality some years ago when she married J. T. Pialoglou, wealthy foreign cigarette manufacturer. Then she was divorced and had to be naturalized.

COMB SAGE TEA IN FADED OR GRAY HAIR

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, imporoved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, for only 75 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

Well-known druggists say everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and beautiful.

DECATUR TO HEAR REPORT ON HOTEL

Decatur, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—A meeting which has for its purpose the boosting of the proposed hotel for Decatur and at the same time to probably hear the report of the Hockenbury system, financiers of hotels, who have a representative here, will be held here Tuesday night by the Decatur Chamber of Commerce.

It is planned to erect in Decatur a 100-room hotel, costing around $300,000, and so attractive is the proposal that the Hockenbury system, of Harrisburg, Pa., last week sent J. T. Stacks, their statistician, to Decatur to inquire into the feasibility of backing the hotel project. Mr. Stacks has made a thorough survey of the situation and his decision is awaited with interest.

The Tuesday's night's meeting will be in the nature of a general get-together booster meeting of the citizens of Decatur. A snappy program has been arranged, the chamber announces, and all Decatur citizens are expected to be present. The meeting will be held in the auditorium of the courthouse.

J. A. McCrary, chairman of the hotel committee, will preside. J. Howell Green is president of the chamber.

Decatur citizens and chamber officials are optimistic in their opinion that the new hotel will be erected. Located in the shadow of the world-famed Stone Mountain to which thousands of tourists go every week, and at the same time being close enough to Atlanta to reach that city within a few minutes, coupled with the fact that several main highways pass through here, would make a hotel a paying proposition here, leaders say.

DAIRYING PROFITABLE IN DEKALB COUNTY

Decatur, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—The rising tide of farm values in DeKalb county was shown in a striking manner here this week when lands were sold at public sale for $125 per acre. The property was known as the Webb estate, and is located about 4 miles from Decatur on the Shallowford road.

There are no buildings on the property and was bought in small tracts by three different persons to be used as home sites. The buyers are all citizens of the vicinity and were acquainted with land values in this county. The land was sold by L. J. Steele, administrator of the Webb estate.

Much Demand for Land.

The demand for farm lands is increasing throughout this section and the realty men are expecting active trading with the opening of the new year. A number of people who have made money in Florida are prospecting for homes and investments in DeKalb county.

DeKalb has long been one of the leading dairying counties in the state and a number of large and exensive concrete milking barns are being erected. Some of these modern milking barns, equipped with concrete floors and walls, metal stanchions to hold each cow, flowing fresh water in each stall and appliances which provide for the complete washing of the interior of the barn, easily and quickly, will cost from $3,500 to $5,000, and there are bottling houses and cooling plants in addition.

These improvements are being made by the dairymen of this county to meet the demands of Atlanta's new milk ordinance which goes into effect early next year. Most of the leading dairymen of the county are located in the Panthersville and East Atlanta sections.

The possibilities of dairying in DeKalb county are shown by the experience of Loyd Mathis, who came here from south Georgia a few years ago and started in the dairying business near Panthersville with 12 cows.

He was only 17 years of age, but he bought a farm for $100 per acre on credit which he has not only paid for but has greatly improved by alfalfa and other soil-building crops and the fertilizer from his dairy herd, which now numbers 80 cows. He has just finished a modern concrete barn, milk house and other needed buildings at a cost of over $4,500.

Farms Are Green.

Large quantities of clover, vetch and other cover crops have been planted by the dairymen of the county and present a very attractive appearance showing green and fresh while other vegetation has become brown and dead.

DeKalb is not only one of the leading dairying counties of the state, but it is especially suited to trucking and poultry raising.

NEW TELEGRAPHY SYSTEM ENABLES DEAF TO LEARN

A system by which deaf mutes can be made telegraphers has been invented by James J. Cooper, Atlanta telegrapher and inventor, it was announced here Saturday.

The system, declared by Mr. Cooper to be recognized by the United States patent office and the war department, is a head arrangement through which sound waves cause a distinct pressure on the temples, thus registering the telegrapher's dots and dashes, he explained.

Baptists of State Gather or Annual Convention

Automobile and railway parties will be starting from every section of the state Monday morning for Savannah, where the one hundred and fourth session of the Georgia Baptist convention opens Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock, preceded on Tuesday by the annual pastors' and laymens' conference. A number of important board and committee meetings will be held Monday night and during the day Tuesday.

Dr. Norman W. Cox, pastor of the First Baptist church, Savannah, reports more registrations already than had been expected for the entire convention and hotels are rapidly filling and committee in charge of providing entertainment in private homes, where requested, reports a large number of reservations. It is likely that the majority of messengers and visitors will be in Savannah by Tuesday morning.

A number of important matters will come before the convention at Savannah. The report of the committee on the Mercer university system of schools and colleges probably will prove one of the outstanding reports of the convention. For sometime Baptists of Georgia have conducted their educational work under the Mercer system, having the president of Mercer, Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, act as chancellor of the system. This plan was officially adopted in 1919. There is some feeling that an adjustment is needed in the present organization of the schools and several committees have been at work during the year to find a basis of adjustment which will be satisfactory both to the convention and to the separate institutions.

Committee To Report.

Dr. John D. Mell, president of the convention, is chairman of one of these committees and his committee will take to the executive committee of the convention a report which will likely be embodied in the executive committee's report which goes to the convention in connection with the report on education Thursday morning at 9:45 o'clock.

The convention will provide a special period for open discussion during the afternoon on Wednesday at which time it will be the privilege of any messenger to bring before the convention any matter which he may deem important. It is expected that this open period will call out a frank discussion of the denomination's program which will prove helpful and stimulate closer cooperation.

Other feature reports coming before the convention will be the report on foreign missions on the first day afternoon. The report will be read by the Rev. Z. E. Barron of Baxley. Dr. H. M. Fugate, of Macon, is the Georgia member of the foreign missions board and will be in charge of the period devoted to that board. The principal address on foreign missions will be delivered by Dr. James Franklin Love, secretary of the board. The headquarters of the board is located in Richmond, Va.

The Wednesday night session of the convention will be an inspirational program, featuring the addresses by Dr. J. E. Dillard, of Birmingham, and Dr. Charles W. Daniel, of Atlanta. The needs of the world and the challenge of the churches of Jesus Christ to meet these needs will be the theme of the evening. The 1926 cooperative program will be presented as the practicable manner of meeting these needs. Dr. Arch C. Cree, executive secretary of the convention, will be in charge of that session of the convention.

Report on Education.

The report on education will come Wednesday morning with Dr. L. M. Latimer, of Griffin, reading the report and President Weaver, of Mercer; President Chamlee, of Bessie Tift college; President Furry, of Shorter, together with the presidents of all the secondary schools, expected to deliver addresses. The attendance of the various schools and colleges of the convention is larger this year than ever before and it is predicted that the report will reveal a steady growth in every particular.

Rev. S. A. Cowan, of Atlanta, will read the report on home missions which comes Thursday afternoon. Special addresses will be delivered by Dr. M. A. Wood, of Macon, Dr. Ellis Fuller, of Atlanta, and other prominent leaders in the convention. Dr. B. D. Gray is the secretary of the home mission board, with headquarters in Atlanta.

Another important report of Thursday afternoon will be The Christian Index report read by Dr. John A. Davison, pastor of the First Baptist church of Columbus. Mr. James W. Merritt, business manager of the paper, will address the convention. The paper will report a substantial increase in circulation.

The report on state missions will have the entire evening session on Thursday. Rev. W. P. Binns, of Moultrie, will read the report, and there will be addresses by the heads of the various departments of the state mission work. George W. Andrews is secretary of the Sunday school department; Channing Hayes is secretary of the B. Y. P. U. department; Mrs. A. F. McMahon is secretary of the W. M. U. department; Dr. B. S. Railey, recently deceased, was secretary of the enlistment and evangelistic work.

Speakers on Program.

Friday morning will be featured by the report on benevolences. Rev. Fred E. Smith, of Montezuma, will read this report. Addresses in behalf of the Georgia Baptist orphans' home and the Georgia Baptist hospital will be heard under that report. Pat Anderson is superintendent of the orphanage, and Dr. Arch C. Cree is superintendent of the hospital. Both institutions will report an increased volume of business for the year. The hospital has just negotiated a half million dollar bond issue with which a new unit will be erected.

A number of other reports will be discussed Friday afternoon, and the convention will adjourn at will during the afternoon. W. W. Gaines, of Atlanta; J. L. Jackson, of Atlanta, and Dr. M. A. Wood, of Macon, compose the committee on order of business.

It is likely that Dr. John D. Mell, for more than a decade president of the convention, will again be elected. Dr. B. D. Ragsdale, of Macon, is the secretary, and has been for thirty years. Dr. E. J. Forrester, of Sparta, is treasurer.

Dr. William Russell Owen, pastor of the First Baptist church, of Macon, will deliver the keynote address on Wednesday morning, and there will be other addresses by President Mell and Secretary Cree. Dr. W. A. Hogan, of Lincolnton, will deliver the convention sermon at noon Wednesday.

KENTUCKY AUTHOR WILL BE HONORED

The Kentucky club will plant a tree in the Authors' grove in Piedmont park in memory of James Lane Allen, famous Kentucky novelist, Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Memorial exercises will be conducted at the Peace monument, at the Fourteenth street entrance to the park, and the program will consist of papers relating to the life, character and productions of this author by members of the Kentucky club, who had some personal connection with the writer. In case of rain the exercises will be postponed.

Mrs. Ashby's Lecture.

"Mind Expressed Through the Subconscious" will be the subject of a lecture to be given Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock by Mrs. Rose Mae Ashby in the mahogany room of the Ansley hotel.

HOWARD THEATER INCLUDED IN NEW GROUP EXPANSION

Much local interest attaches to the official announcement that, through the filing of incorporation papers at Albany, N. Y., a new entertainment organization has been formed that will include in its group of theaters both the Howard theater and the new Keith house, which is at present under construction back of the Henry Grady hotel, according to Manager Charles G. Branham of the Howard.

The new organization will be known as the Publix Theaters corporation and Sam Katz has been selected as president. Back of the name of the new company stands the amalgamation of two of the most important theater groups in existence—Famous Players-Lasky Corporation of New York, and Balaban and Katz of Chicago.

In this connection, announcement also is made that the elaborate stage presentations arranged for Publix theaters in New York will come to the Howard theater here.

Part of Heart Named for Man

Dr. George Bachmann, professor of physiology at the school of medicine of Emory university, has been honored by having a part of the human heart named after him, because of his physiological research work. This part of the heart is now known in scientific circles as the "faisceau de Bachmann" or the "bundle" of Bachmann. Dr. Bachmann, in an article, "The Inter-Auricular Interval," published in the American Journal of Physiology in 1916, explained the function of the bundle leading from the sinus node to the left auricle. Dr. Bachmann lives at Atlanta, Ga.

'What Ails Our Younger Set?' Causes Heated Discussion At Young People's Meeting

Many Subjects of Interest to Young People Come Before "Y" Conference at Carrollton.

Carrollton, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—"There are two views of the question of 'What ails our youth of today?' declared Donald Thompson, of LaGrange, at the Older Boys' conference in session here under the auspices of the State Y. M. C. A. "One view is that the present-day youth is without fault, the other is that we are the worst of any generation in history. Neither, it seems, is correct. Not long ago a stone was dug up in Egypt which had lain buried three or four thousand years. The inscription on this stone when translated shows that the young people in those days were reckless and irresponsible in the good old days."

This opening statement provided the liveliest discussion that has taken place thus far in the conference. "I believe that our trend is upward," declared J. D. Sewell, "because of the many organizations we have, such as the young people's meetings in our churches: the Boy Scouts, the Hi-Y clubs and increasing number of young people attending high schools and colleges."

"We must not be too well satisfied with ourselves, however," added Alfred Mullins, of Columbus. "Not all of our young people are members of these helpful organizations by any means. The records of our juvenile courts show that not many boys go wrong who are regular attendants at Sunday school. The prevalence of crime throughout our land should give us much concern and should lead us to ask ourselves whether or not we are on the up-grade," he said.

"Young people this day," declared William Tyler, of Cedartown, "are not responsible for any bad environment in which they find themselves. They are responsible, however, if they do not seek to improve that environment and rise superior to it."

The conference went on record after a lengthy discussion that all things considered, the present-day generation of young people were dissatisfied with the existing order of things and were seeking to create a newer and better day.

Not Weak Physically.

Young Thompson, chief speaker on the subject, among other things said of the present-day youth:

"It has been said that our youth of today is weaker physically than the youth of past generations. This was a common opinion before the war, but when our American soldiers went to war and endured such hardships and fought so bravely, it was proved that the younger generation of today is not weaker, but much stronger and braver than those of the past. Statistics show that the health of the youth of today is much better than the health of the youth of past generations. Our younger set is certainly not lacking physically.

"Then the question comes, is the youth of today equal mentally to the youth of the past, or is our younger set lacking in this respect? The average modern youth is more highly educated than the youth of the past. Statistics show that a greater per cent of the present younger generation complete grammar school, graduate from high school and pursue a college course than in the past.

"Although some think the modern youth lacking physically, mentally, and in proper education, the greatest criticism upon youth is that he is lacking morally.

"Our younger set is not without faults, whatever may be said, but it might be said, too that they are not new—our weaknesses only. Though other generations might not have had them to the same degree still they had them. Still the criticisms made of our younger set are none the less true of the younger sets of all times."

Despite a downfall of rain, rendering roads well-nigh impassable, high school boys from LaGrange, Mount Zion, Cedartown, Griffin, Columbus, Rome and Bowdon gathered at Carrollton for the West Georgia Older Boys' conference. The opening session was held at the First Methodist church Friday and was presided over by H. E. Montague, state boys' secretary, Y. M. C. A. A spirited election was conducted which resulted in J. D. Sewell, of Carrollton, being elected president.

Audrey Lauderdale, of LaGrange, the champion high school orator of Georgia, was made vice president, and Carson Pritchard, of Carrollton, secretary. A short address of welcome was made by Knox Walker, superintendent of Carrollton schools.

E. J. Simmonds, of Havana, addressed the conference at the afternoon session, taking as his subject "The Boys of Other Lands." At the banquet session held at the high school building, John Staton, of Atlanta, was the chief speaker, his subject being "Vision." The conference will close Sunday.

MAN CONFESSES KILLING HIS WIFE

Albany, N. Y., December 5.—(AP) Albert Devine, a former member of the Albany board of aldermen, today was formally charged with the murder September 6 last of his wife, Catherine. Arrested yesterday afternoon, Devine during an all-night grilling confessed the crime, the police said, and declared that he had buried the body in the cellar of their home.

Devine's arrest followed a report to the Pennsylvania state troopers of the disappearance of Mrs. Devine, the troopers in turn passing the report along to the Albany police. The husband had explained the absence of his wife by saying she had left him and was with relatives in Pennsylvania.

The police declared that Devine in his confession said he and his wife had quarreled and that he killed her with a hammer and then buried the body. Devine, 44 years old, is a draftsman for the New York Central railroad. Mrs. Devine was two years his junior. The couple had two children, both over 20 years old.

Albert Devine, jr., son of the man under arrest, is being detained as a material witness. It is understood that the son knew of the death of his mother and that the circumstances so preyed upon his mind that he told a grandmother in Scranton, Pa., and that she in turn notified the Pennsylvania state police.

A daughter, Grace Devine, lives at Dunmore, Pa.

HUNTSVILLE JUDGE CALLS DRUNK CASES ON 'MORNING AFTER'

Huntsville, Ala., December 5.—(Special.)—Mayor Fraser L. Adams, who is also the city recorder, has informed the police that he wants to see the people who are arrested for drunkenness the "morning after" if they can possibly be brought into court.

"Don't put off their appearance until all the visible effects have gone," he said. "It is rather confusing to the court when these parties come up a day or so afterwards all dolled up and looking as chipper as a bunch of spring radishes, and enter a plea of not guilty. Let's have them the next morning, so we can see how they look and better judge what they have been up to."

JUDGE HARDEMAN TO CLEAR DOCKET IN TOOMBS COUNTY

Lyons, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—Judge R. N. Hardeman, presiding at an adjourned term of the Toombs county superior court, disposed of 76 cases in rapid order this week then adjourned court until December 8 in order that the officers could have the remaining cases on the docket ready for court.

Five men convicted of selling or distilling whisky were fined $1,000 each and given a jail sentence of one year, but the jail sentence may be suspended on good behavior. This, together with the vigilance of the two county policemen and the Lyons' city policemen, is making the whisky dealers, who had, apparently been slowly accumulating in this county, scamper for better territory.

In pronouncing sentence on the violators of the Volstead act Judge Hardeman gave the men talks that will long be remembered in this county. He says he has rented an apartment here and intends staying here until both the civil and criminal docket of this county is cleared if it takes until Christmas.

The citizens of this county are loud in their praises of his determined stand to punish the law violators. He called a special grand jury which met last Wednesday to dispose of whisky and other cases that have come up since the last regular term of the jury.

Trainman Killed.

Maryville, Mo., December 5.—(AP) One trainman was killed and another probably fatally injured when a Burlington railway wrecker was derailed near here early today.

The wrecker was derailed while in route from Creston, Iowa, to Bolckow where a freight train had been derailed earlier. The trainmen were scalded.

COLONEL HERO NAMED ARTILLERY CORPS HEAD

Washington, December 5.—(AP)—Colonel Andrew Hero, Jr., of the coast artillery corps, has been selected chief of the corps with the rank of major general. He succeeds Major General Frank W. Coe, who is to retire at his own request. Colonel Hero is now on duty at Fort McPherson, Ga.

General Coe has been granted leave of absence at the conclusion of which his request for retirement will take effect and appointment of Colonel Hero to be chief of the corps for a period of four years will be recommended to the president by Secretary Davis.

General Coe is a West Point graduate, was born in Kansas in 1870 and has spent his entire military life in the coast artillery. He served in France as chief of staff, first division, prior to his promotion to brigadier general when he was assigned to command the first separate brigade, coast artillery. He was recalled to Washington in 1918 to become chief of the corps and has had that position ever since.

Colonel Hero was born in New Orleans, is an academy graduate and also has been a coast artillery man throughout his professional career. He commanded the 154th field artillery brigade of the 79th division during the war.

HERO HAS LONG RECORD OF SERVICE.

Colonel Andrew Hero, Jr., 57, recommended by Secretary of War Davis for the post as chief of coast artillery to succeed Major General Frank W. Coe, has been stationed at Fort McPherson since June 16, 1925. He arrived at McPherson from the Philippines, having been stationed there following a series of assignments which took him to many parts of the world.

He was born in New Orleans, December 13, 1868, and was graduated from Tulane university, Columbia university and West Point military academy.

Colonel Hero married Miss Fanny Caroline Davis, daughter of Captain J. M. K. Davis, July 14, 1897. He has two daughters, one of whom married an army officer and another a naval officer. A son now is being educated at Kent, Conn.

Following his graduation from West Point, Colonel Hero was assigned to the Twelfth infantry, and a few months later was transferred to the Fourth artillery. He later served with the Fifth artillery, receiving the grade of captain in 1901. In 1908 he was made a major in the coast artillery, lieutenant colonel in 1915, colonel in 1917, and was advanced to the grade of brigadier general in the national army in 1917.

When the United States entered the world war he was placed in command of the 154th field artillery, seventy-ninth division, and later was transferred to Liverpool, England. Following this he had charge of firing schools in France, and served in the Meuse-Argonne offensive. Later, in 1919, he was stationed at Treves, Germany.

After the war, he was given command of the Thirty-ninth artillery brigade, coast artillery corps, but later was assigned to the staff of the Second coast artillery district. In November, 1922, he went to Camp Totten, and from there to the Philippines, being brought back to the United States and assigned to his command in Atlanta last June.

ATLANTA AGENCY GETS ADVERTISING CONTRACT

Brunswick, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—The builders of Brunswick committee of the Brunswick Board of Trade has begun plans for an advertising campaign exploiting Brunswick.

The committee is composed of M. J. Welsh, A. L. Church, A. S. Kloss, Albert Fendig, J. P. Davenport, C. D. Terrell and F. E. Twitty.

The committee is having a thorough survey made of Brunswick's advantages and opportunities, and the campaign should get under way by January 1.

The first unit of $25,000 for this purpose has been assured, and it is expected that the campaign will involve the expenditure of more than $50,000 over a year's period.

James A. Greene and company, Atlanta advertising agency, has been awarded the advertising contract.

HIGH ADDITIONS WILL COST $100,000

store will be augmented by about 50,000 square feet by the additional floors, pushing the grand total of the store to about 200,000 square feet.

Growth Is Universal.

When asked why High did not seek a permanent location on the north side, officials of the company stated that Atlanta is not destined to have a north or south side development but a universal growth. This is due largely to the policy of the men at the head of the city's municipal affairs, who a pushing the new viaducts and the new grading on Hunter street, they declared.

"The proposed viaducts will mean more to Atlanta than most of us realize, and our location will offer to the buying public one of the most desirable in the whole city." G. C. Jones, vice president and treasurer of the company stated. "The High concern is naturally intensely interested in the growth of Atlanta and in the convenience of our hundreds of patrons.

Atlanta's Renowned Pianist Plays With Orchestra Today

:: HUGH HODGSON TO FIGURE IN FINE PROGAM ::

Hugh Hodgson, famous Atlanta pianist, who will play the Rubinstein Concerto in D Minor, as the feature of today's symphony concert program.

BY RALPH T. JONES.

Of the entire eight programs to be given this season in Sunday afternoon concerts by the Atlanta Symphony orchestra, the one for this afternoon carries the greatest appeal to lovers of good music.

In the first place, our own Hugh Hodgson, famous pianist, is to play the lovely D Minor Concerto, by Rubinstein. That announcement alone should be sufficient to draw all Atlantans and visitors to Loew's Grand theater at 3:30 o'clock when the concert begins.

For Mr. Hodgson, native of Athens, Ga., and resident of Atlanta, is one of the most popular musicians in the country. His playing at earlier concerts with the orchestra, as well as his performances at a number of recitals and his work as organist at the Second Baptist church, have demonstrated his consummate art to thousands of Atlantans and the fact that in him Atlanta possesses a concert pianist of major renown is well known.

In addition to the appearance of Mr. Hodgson, however, the program for today contains several numbers that are among the greatest in the symphonic library.

For one thing, "Unfinished Symphony," of Shubert's, is to be played. The entrancing melody of this composition, of which only two movements ever were written, are among the best known musical motifs in the world. It is beloved by all great musicians; it is adored by all music lovers and, even among those who do not usually appreciate classic music, its melodies have become favorites because they formed the basis of the musical score for "Blossom Time," the outstanding light opera success of the last half dozen seasons in the theatrical world.

The program will open with a magnificent overture, "The Bartered Bride," by Smetana. Second will come Mr. Hodgson. He will be accompanied by the orchestra as his fingers draw the brilliant fireworks and thrilling harmonies from concert grand piano.

One of the most famous of all the Strauss waltzes, that from "Rosenkavalier," is given third place on the program. This will be followed by the odd, yet dainty and musical "Air," for G string, by Bach.

The program will close with the stirring, thrilling, pulsing "Bacchanale" from "Samson et Delila," by Saint-Saens.

Doesn't that complete a marvelous program?

That Loew's Grand theater will be filled to capacity for the performance is certain. Ticket holders, as usual, will find their places reserved on the ground floor or in the balcony, loges or boxes. The top gallery will be open free to the general public, but it is expected that many will be turned away from the doors for lack of room, so it will be advisable to get in line as early as possible.

That is one of the reasons why we have decided to make the present location our permanent home. Atlanta will expand in every direction and its growth will not be limited to any particular section."

High department store was reorganized February 17 of this year, and all employees were given the opportunity to buy stock in the company. More than 40 have availed themselves of this opportunity, Mr. Brittain declares, and the firm has found that the system is of great benefit to the organization. The morale of the salesforce has been lifted and its members take more pride in the discharge of their duties. When they acquired a financial interest in the business, they began to work harder for the success of the enterprise, said Mr. Brittain.

Rose From Ranks.

The store prides itself on the fact that many of the sales managers began their business careers as cash boys in the store, and have advanced in position with the growth of the firm.

"Improvements which the firm will make are only one side of the phenomenal progress of the store," Mr. Jones said. "No opportunity is being overlooked to strengthen and bind fast the loyalty and cooperation of every employee. The happiness of each and all is a matter of deep and permanent concern to the firm."

Other officers of the company are Paul H. Jones, secretary and general superintendent, and D. R. Peteet, auditor.

LA FOLLETTE REBUFFS SENATE REGULARS

senior La Follette was the fighting leader of both house and senate insurgents, directing their plan of campaign. For the present, insurgent activities will be centered in the senate. Young La Follette's attendance upon the house meeting Saturday, however, indicates that he stands ready to aid them.

The threat of the insurgents in the senate was indicated by the failure of senate republicans in their caucus Saturday to take any action regarding young La Follette, whom they had invited, or the two other insurgents whom they ousted last year, Brookhart and Frazier. Several leaders have goven so far as to urge that even the latter two, officially read from the party ranks last year, be invited back into the fold. A much larger number favored conciliatory offers to young La Follette. This peace sentiment reveals the necessity of regular republican leaders.

Curtis Holds Olive Branch.

The desire for conciliation was further illustrated Saturday by the announcement from Senator Curtis, of Kansas, republican floor leader, that the fact that a senator does not attend the party caucus, as was the case with young La Follette, has nothing to do with his party affiliation, or with his possible committee assignments. Generally, however, the fact of La Follette's attendance or non-attendance had been set as the test, and he didn't attend. Curtis, apparently, is still hopeful that young La Follette may come around.

The insurgent group in the senate this year will include, besides La Follette, Brookhart, Frazier, Norris, and possibly Nye, as well as the farmer-labor member, Shipstead, provided, of course, that Brookhart is seated and the young senator from North Dakota is declared appointed legally. As before, this group will be joined on occasion by others from the ranks of the socalled "mild progressives," such as Borah, Johnson, Capper and other westerners and northwesterners. The republican majority, counting all the irregulars, is but 14. A defection of some of the "mild progressives" with the insurgents would overthrow that majority.

Follows Father's Footsteps.

In making his decision to go his way alone, young Bob La Follette has, at the outset of his political career, done just what his father did many, many years ago. The elder La Follette, fighting alone much of the time, reviled during the war when he was a veritable outcast, rose toward the end to a controlling place in congress and to become the choice for president of some 5,000,000 voters. When he was ousted from his party, it was almost an empty gesture, as he had played a lone hand for so long.

Whether the son will carve for himself such a place as the father held is for the future to determine. In his action Saturday, he made the same beginning that was made by his father.

NEW YORK AMAZED BY BUCKNER DRIVE

from one of the prisoners Thursday, which referred to several thousand dollars having been paid out for "roads." Buckner understands this to mean that the highways, along which liquor flowed from convenient landing places on Long Island to New York city were paved with bribes.

Nature of News Service.

The news service referred to was said to have been conducted along the same lines as those furnishing legitimate business men with information—a sort of "Bootleggers' Bulletin"—in which prices were listed, newcomers to the ranks were named, and tips were furnished regarding officials who were subject to bribery, with the prices to be paid and the method of approach outlined.

A comprehensive grand jury investigation, at which more facts regarding the rum conspiracy undoubtedly will be brought out, will start on Monday. Evidence obtained in the rainy day raid will be used in an effort to extend Buckner's drive against the "big fellows" of bootleggery.

Parisians Shiver When Cold Wave Descends on City

Paris, December 5.—(AP)—The whole of northern and central France are in the grip of an intense cold wave, unprecedented for this season of the year, while along the Swiss border the people are suffering from weather of great severity.

Gilley, in Doubs department, leads with 17 below zero, Fahrenheit, but across the border in the Swiss Jura range the mark of 29 below has been reached.

The cold is so intense in Paris that the Enghien race track meeting has been canceled. Stoppage of the current in the subway system early to night interrupted service for nearly an hour.

Two persons died from the cold and one is reported near death from exposure.

INTENSE COLD DRIVES WOLVES FROM FOREST.

Vienna, December 5.—(AP)—Advices from Belgrade report that huge packs of wolves have been driven from the forests by the intense cold and snow, and are devouring hundreds of sheep. The temperature at Belgrade is 12 above zero, Fahrenheit. Trains are greatly delayed by the snowdrifts.

VILLAGE IS BURIED UNDER SNOWDRIFTS.

Brussels, December 5.—(AP)—The village of Fellenne, 20 miles from Namur, is buried under snowdrifts and also besieged by wild boars, which, in a famished condition, have attacked villagers who attempted to secure assistance.

KIPLING'S ILLNESS RECALLS VERSES WRITTEN IN 1899

Liverpool, England, December 5.—(AP)—Rudyard Kipling's present illness recalls memories of the writer's attack of pneumonia in New York city in 1899 when, after news that the danger point had been passed, the following verse, signed "Tommy Atkins," appeared in the Liverpool Daily Post:

"We 'eard as you was fightin' 'ard,
Just as we knew you would,
But we 'ardly 'oped you'd turn 'is flank;
They said you 'ardly could.
But the news 'as come this morning,
And I'm writin' 'ere to say;
There's no British son more 'appy
Than your old friend, Thomas A."

TOOMBS CITIZENS TO DISCUSS ROAD BOND ELECTION

Lyons, Ga., December 5.—(Special.) A big mass meeting of citizens of this county has been called for Tuesday at the Lyons courthouse to discuss the proposed bond issue for paving the principal highways of Toombs county. Everybody in this county who have expressed themselves say they are in favor of the issue, realizing the importance of this move toward the development of this county and section.

READY FOR TESTS

JOHN J. SEILER.

"FLYING YANK ENDS" TRAINING FOR RACE

once until the contest is over. He will drink Coca-Cola during this test as a stimulant.

Praises Coca-Cola.

He declared that contrary to the belief of many athletic and track coaches, he has found that Coca-Cola food ingredients are just what he needs to bolster his strength and to give him the punch to carry on in the final stretches of his competitions.

The easy stride and the machine-like precision of his breathing won the admiration of a large number of persons who "paced" the young track wizard in machines Saturday.

At the conclusion of the 12-mile trot, Seiler declared that he felt in fine condition, and did not experience any difficulty in breathing the Atlanta air. He has been caused considerable trouble on other runs in the south on account of the quality of the air.

"While many athletes in other branches are short lived, track men usually lead long lives and are very active," Seiler said. "Ed Payson Webster, who now is 84 years old and who has held many walking and track records, walked 1,000 miles in 1,000 hours. Dan O'Leary, 87, outwalked a picked squad of men in relays in what is known as a six-day walking race. Both these men now can outdistance the average young pedestrian, and still are vigorous. They live long because they take care of themselves and observe a rigid training diet."

76-Mile Run.

Seiler has held himself in check for his 76-mile run, which is slated to begin Friday, December 18, from Athens to Atlanta. A tthis time the Wills Sainte Claire car, which he will race, will be locked in high gear, as it will be in all his Atlanta races, and the test will be for the runner to beat the machine to Atlanta. At no time will the automobile be allowed to make a speed greater than six miles an hour. This will be a great strain on the car, but E. B. Hinds, of the Hinds Motor company, who accepted Seiler's challenge for the race, declared that the machine could travel the entire distance making only two miles an hour if it were necessary.

After the race Monday, Seiler will visit schools and colleges Tuesday, his rest day. Hundreds will be anxious to get a close-up of the champion and he will tell of his unique training rules.

Wednesday Seiler again will race the Willis Sainte Claire, locked in high gear, for a 10-mile speed test through congested districts of downtown Atlanta. He will drink Coca-Cola on this jaunt also, but will not be required to observe the synchronized light traffic control signals, while the automobile will be forced to keep within the traffic laws at all times. This race will begin at The Constitution building at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, and will end about 4:30 o'clock in front of Loew's Grand theater.

Last Atlanta Contest.

On Friday, the last of the Atlanta contests will take place, when Seiler will engage in a 25-mile run against the Wills Sainte Claire. He will start from The Constitution building at 2 o'clock this time also, will drink Coca-Cola as his only beverage, and will wear the Bostonian shoes furnished him by the Bostonian Shoe company.

Then will come the rest for the Athens-Atlanta run, December 18. Seiler declared he is in perfect form for his "trials" and predicts that he will test the mechanical perfection of the Wills Sainte Claire machine he will be pitted against in the events.

Seiler's muscles are in perfect condition, being hardened by the road, but free of the congestion which usually marks the long training of a professional. He stands six feet and one inch, and weighs about 168 pound. He has established a long record of success in runs in many parts of the country.

DEPOSIT OF HELIUM GAS IS REPORTED FOUND IN CANADA

Toronto, December 5.—(AP)—Premier Ferguson, of Ontario, made official announcement today that a deposit of helium gas had been discovered at Inglewood, in Peel county, about 40 miles northwest of Toronto. Three wells there have been purchased by the government, which has for some time been extracting gas from them in cooperation with the University of Toronto.

"The province has taken over the helium rights at Inglewood," said Premier Ferguson, "and I am informed that they have the highest content of this gas in any of the British empire. The wells have been turned over to the University of Toronto for research work. Though I see no immediate commercial possibility in the discovery, the gas will undoubtedly take a big place in the scientific field of Ontario and the world."

The premier stated that strict secrecy had been maintained because of the "tremendous importance of the find."

After Sickness Get Strong Quick

New Pleasant Way To Take Cod Liver Oil—Puts On Weight.

Nothing like the wonderful vitalizing vitamines in Cod Liver Oil to help convalescing people to quickly get strong and well—everybody knows that.

But nobody wants to take the ill-smelling, horrible-tasting, stomach-upsetting oil itself, so nowadays, up-to-date medical men are ordering a tablet of Cod Liver Oil and it surely has proved a blessing to thousands of people who have been sapped of their natural strength after a severe illness and especially after the grippe or a stubborn cough or cold.

Ask Jacobs' Pharmacal Co. or any druggist for a box of McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets. They cost but little, are sugar-coated and as pleasant to take as candy.

Skinny men and women take them to speedily put on plenty of good healthy solid flesh and for this purpose they are so extremely good that thin men and women often take on 5 pounds or more in 30 days. As a matter of fact, your druggist is authorized to return your money if you don't take on 5 pounds in 30 days.

Be sure and ask for McCoy's, the original and genuine Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets—60 Tablets—60 cents.—(adv.)

Geological Survey of Alaska Will Be Made Next Spring By American Navy Aviators

Undertaking Described as Greatest Aerial Photographic Mission Ever Attempted.

Washington, December 5.—(AP)—Loening amphibian planes, similar to those used with the MacMillan Arctic expedition, will be employed next spring by naval aviators in the mapping of 40,000 square miles of southeastern Alaska for the geological survey.

Is final orders for the survey sent by Secretary Wilbur to Admiral C. F. Hughes, commander in chief of the battle fleet, who has been placed in command of the expedition, the undertaking is described as "the greatest aerial photographic mission ever attempted by any country."

Prepare for Flight.

The expedition, which will have Ketchikan as its base, will be headed by Lieutenant Ben H. Wyatt, now at the San Diego naval air station, where preparations for the expedition are being made. It is proposed to fly over snow-capped mountains, rivers, glaciers and forests extending from the Aleutian Islands and the valley of 10,000 smokes to Ketchikan.

If the project is successful a similar undertaking may be attempted later in northern Alaska in the vicinity of Point Barrow, where there is a vast naval oil reserve. Because of weather conditions, only about three months in the year may be used in the work and the entire task, at this rate, is expected to occupy three years.

Weather Hinders Work.

The geological survey for years has been surveying and charting Alaskan territory, but the work has been slow, due to the climate and the mountainous regions. By aerial photography, however, it will be possible for three planes, flying in a line five miles apart at 100 miles an hour, to map a strip 200 miles wide and 100 miles long in an hour. The planes will fly ordinarily at an altitude of 12,000 feet.

With Lieutenant Wyatt will be Lieutenants W. M. Dillon, M. A. Schur, who was with the MacMillan expedition, and L. W. Curtin, as well as a number of enlisted men. They will have three new Loening amphibian planes designed to operate from land, water or ice and a navy scouting plane of the Douglas-Wright type. Inverted Liberty motors will be used.

The aircraft tender Gannet and the mine sweeper Kingfisher will serve as base ships.

SHELDON, STUDENTS OFFER XMAS PROGRAM

An interesting event of the Christmas season will be the program of carols which will be given by the Emory Glee club on Sunday afternoon, December 13, at 4:30 o'clock at the First Presbyterian church. Dr. Charles A. Sheldon will assist at the organ.

DR. M. H. DEWEY,

Head of the Department of Romance Languages of Emory University and Director of Emory Glee Club.

There are many cities where the annual singing of carols is a musical event of greatest interest and importance. The program contemplated by the Emory Glee club will not only be a pleasing contribution to Atlanta's present Christmas season, but it is to be hoped by those in charge that it may become an annual event to be looked forward to with increasing interest and delight.

The program not only will include many well-loved carols but also several less familiar ones. A fourteenth century French carol "Holy Mother," and two arrangements by Praetorious (1571-1621) will be included.

Dr. Sheldon will give several selections and the entire program will take its place among Atlanta's many interesting musical events.

The Emory Glee club is composed of 40 Emory men under direction of Dr. M. H. Dewey. From past seasons it has won recognition among the premiere musical organizations of the south and the program on next Sunday promises to be one of outstanding interest.

The city auditorium being used this week for a radio exposition necessitates cancellation of the regular Sunday organ recital both for today and next Sunday, Dr. Sheldon states.

Taylorsville, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—Rev. W. B. Taylor, the new pastor of the Stilesboro charge preaches his first sermon at Taylorsville, Sunday morning. The other churches in the charge are Stilesboro, Bethlehem and New Salem.

Rev. R. W. Green, the former popular pastor, who had served the charge two years, goes to Kensington circuit, exchanging places with Rev. Taylor.

COLUMBUS YOUTH DIES IN CYCLE-AUTO CRASH

Columbus, Ga., December 5.—(AP)—Stewart Brooks, 16, whose skull was fractured when his motorcycle was hit by an automobile near here early Thursday night, died at the City hospital early Saturday morning.

Brooks was found in the road in an unconscious condition a few minutes after he was struck by an unidentified person. The police immediately instituted an investigation in an effort to apprehend the driver, but no arrests have yet been made. It is understood that they have been unable to obtain clues as to the identity of the person.

Brooks is survived by his parents, four brothers and three sisters.

Five Lives Lost As British Ship, U.S. Vessel Crash

London, December 5.—(AP)—The British steamer Ashton sank today after a collision with the United States shipping board steamer Federal in the Scheldt river. The Ashton went down within a few minutes with the loss of the captain, pilot and three members of the crew.

The Ashton was an iron screw steamer of 990 gross tonnage, owned by the Cadeby Steamship Company, Ltd. Her home port was Grimsby.

The Federal, which sailed from Mobile November 3, arrived at Hamburg November 26.

BRITISH STEAMER ESCAPES INJURY.

Baltimore, December 5.—(AP)—The British steamer Mombassa, Baltimore to New Orleans, and the Italian steamer Campania, Antwerp to Baltimore, apparently escaped critical injury when they collided in a fog in the lower Chesapeake bay off Point No Point today. The Campania, the smaller of the two vessels, appeared to be the most damaged. She called for aid soon after the crash, saying she was shipping water in her No. 1 hold. Dichman, Wright and Pugh, Inc., the Campania's Baltimore agents, dispatched a tug which was aiding the vessel over the remaining 75 miles of her journey to this port tonight. Her agents believed she was not in danger.

FORD PURCHASES RELICS OF EARLY FARM LIFE

Doylestown, Pa., December 5.—(AP) Henry Ford today purchased $3,000 worth of hoopskirts, grain flails and varied relics of early farm life among the Pennsylvania Dutch. The antiques, explained Mr. Ford, who came here last night, are for his Dearborn, Mich., museum, and also for his Wayside Inn, near Boston, formerly the old Longfellow home.

TEACHERS OF FULTON FORM ORGANIZATION

Reorganization of the Fulton county unit of the American Federation of Teachers was effected Saturday at a gathering of 200 instructors of the Fulton county system at the courthouse. The body has not functioned since 1920.

Officers were elected as follows: Boyd Taylor, instructor of Spanish at Fulton High school, president; Robert H. Lamkin, principal of Hapeville school, vice president; Mrs. Lena H. Cox, principal of Grove Park school, secretary; Miss Lydia Guice, principal of Cascade school, treasurer.

Miss Mary Barker, principal of John B. Gordon school and president of the National Federation of Teachers, and E. L. Sutton, national vice president of the teachers' federation and representative of the American Federation of Trades, attended the meeting.

Mr. Sutton invited the reorganized unit to become affiliated with the American Federation of Trades, and it is regarded as probable that this offer will be accepted.

MIAMI BEACH ASKS NEW YORK FURNISH NEW POLICE CHIEF

Miami, Fla., December 5.—(AP)—Miami Beach, now without a chief of police since the trial and federal penitentiary sentence of Damon Lewis became known several days ago, may have a New York city police official in the position, it was reported today.

Mayor Louis F. Snedigar, of Miami Beach, will accompany Mayor-elect James J. Walker, of New York, on the northern trip on the steamship H. F. Alexander this evening, it was said, and while in the metropolis will confer with Commissioner Enright as to the possibility of bringing a New York man here.

If Sleep Doesn't Rest You---Beware of Chronic Fatigue

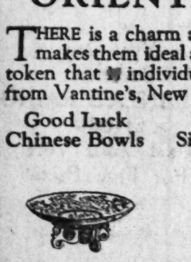

Thousands of men and women wonder why they are so terribly "all-in" every morning, hardly able to get up, starting the day's work late—and this in spite of the fact that they have really had a full night's sleep. Nine chances out ten, though they may never suspect it, the real cause of this discouraging, fagged-out feeling and lack of energy is that they are suffering from debility—due to chronic fatigue.

Chronic fatigue is entirely different from the ordinary, "healthy" fatigue you feel after vigorous exercise. Chronic fatigue—the serious kind—comes from within. Your organs and muscles have become debilitated and cannot function properly. This condition if not corrected may lead to far worse.

To conquer chronic fatigue you must get at the real root of the trouble—in the blood. For it is the blood that carries nourishment to all the nerves, muscles and tissues of your body. And it is almost invariably when your blood is thin and pale, lacking in sufficient strength-giving organic iron that you become chronically run-down and suffer from that continual tired feeling, backache, dizzy spells, and other distressing ailments that make life a burden.

What you need then is to strengthen your entire system by restoring this organic iron to your blood. But don't take the old-fashioned mineral iron medicines which many doctors now say do little good. Take organic iron—Nuxated Iron—which is like the iron in your blood and like that in spinach and lentils. Unlike ordinary mineral iron it will not injure the teeth or disturb the stomach, but is promptly assimilated. Furthermore, Nuxated Iron is so concentrated that one dose contains practically as much organic iron as one-half quart of spinach or one quart of green vegetables.

Take Nuxated Iron for just two weeks and you'll be astonished how that miserable tired feeling vanishes, and what a glorious new tingle of energy and vitality begins to come over you. Money back if not improved. At all good druggists.—(adv.)

FLORIDA WOMAN STRUCK BY TRAIN, INSTANTLY KILLED

Winter Haven, Fla., December 5.—(AP)—Mrs. Ella Sparks, 53, of Tocoma, Va., was instantly killed here this afternoon when struck by a passenger train on the Atlantic Coast Line within a few blocks of the business district. A slight deafness and confusion caused by the noise of the nearby traffic caused the woman to step in front of the train. Her husband, Calvin Sparks, and a son who accompanied her, escaped unhurt. The body will be shipped to Virginia.

TWO CHILDREN DIE AS FATHER STARTS FIRE WITH GASOLINE

Tchula, Miss., December 5.—(AP)—Two sons of William Ray, a railway employee, were burned to death, their mother was perhaps fatally injured and Ray less seriously hurt when a can of gasoline being used to start a fire exploded in the Ray home near here today.

The two children, 5 and 2 years of age, were asleep while the father was starting a fire and the mother preparing breakfast. Burning oil was thrown over the room and the house was destroyed before help could be summoned, the children perishing as they slept. Mr. and Mrs. Ray were taken to a Greenwood hospital on a special train. It was said Mrs. Ray's hurts would probably prove fatal.

MEXICAN BUSINESS MEN ARE ALARMED OVER LABOR LAW

Mexico City, December 5.—(AP)—A feeling ranging from uncertainty and apprehension to positive alarm prevails among business leaders here, both Mexican and foreign, regarding the proposed new labor law, which among other things requires profit-sharing with employees.

Fostered by organized labor, the bill has passed the chamber of deputies and is pending in the senate, where efforts are being made to modify it by amendments. The labor leaders demand its passage unamended, denying the charge by some industrialists that it is unduly burdensome or unfair to the employers.

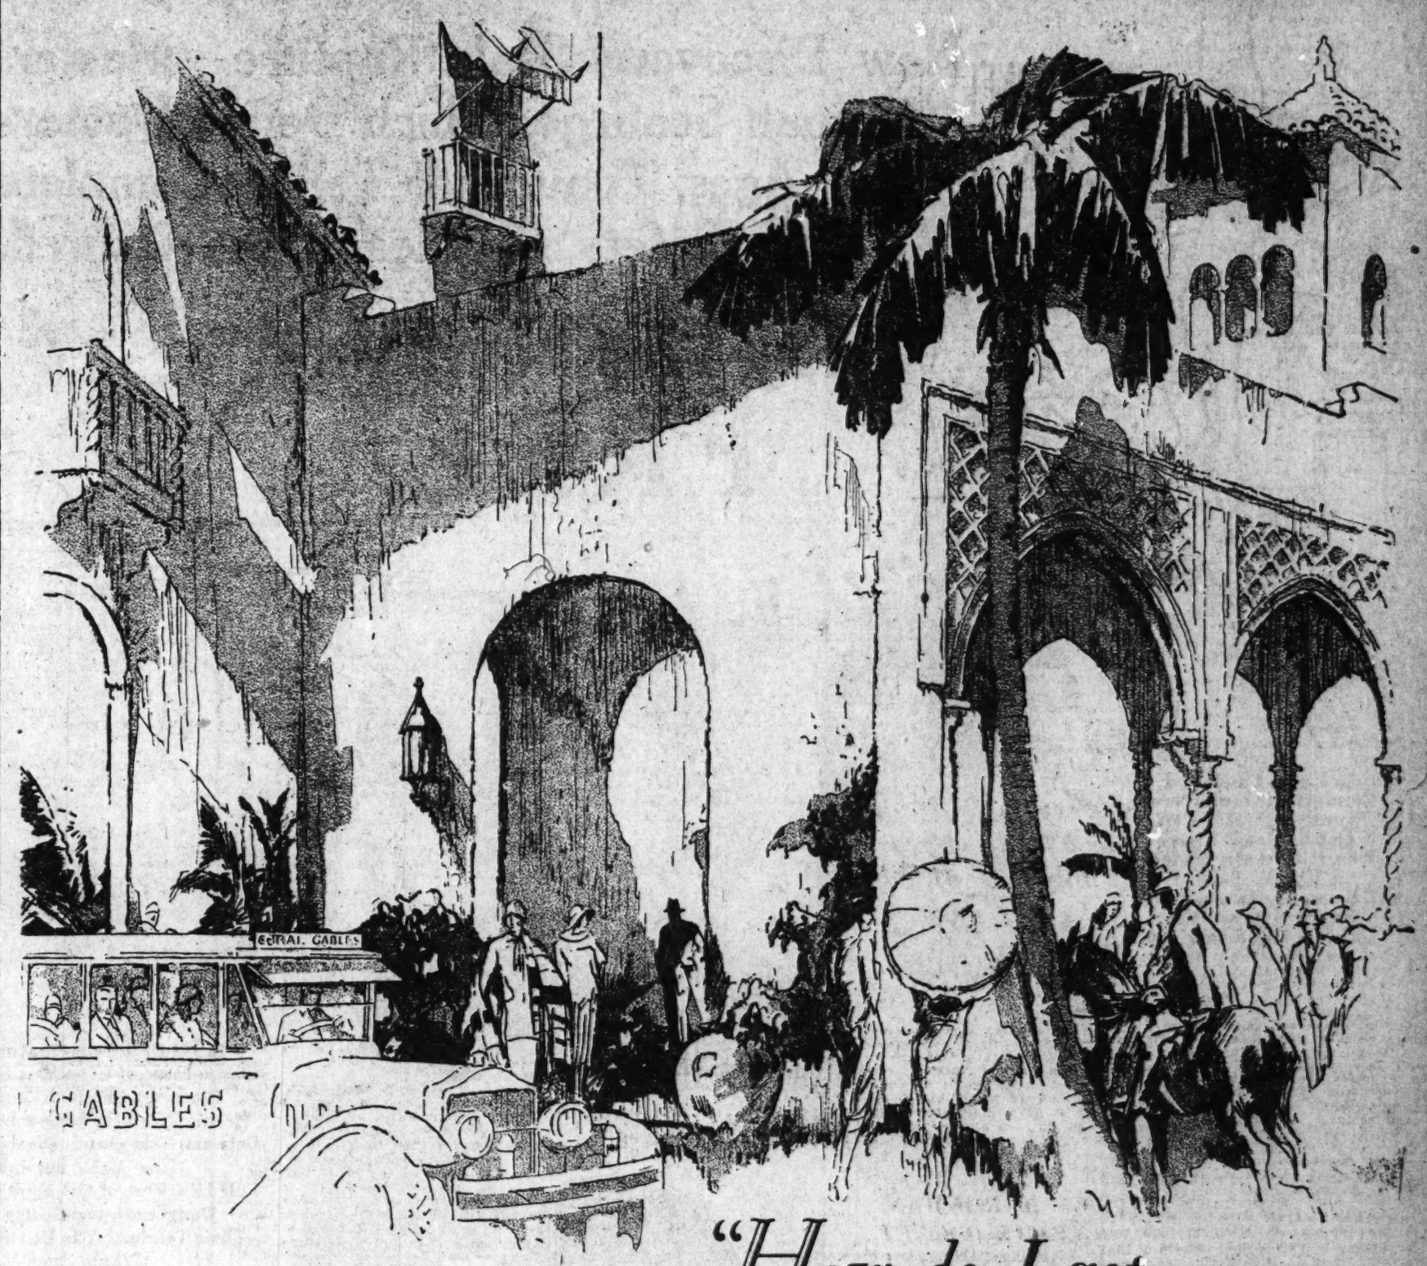

They say the Mexican workman has known extreme exploitation and miserable living conditions, and has been notoriously underpaid. Some improvements have been made since the revolution, they admit, but more reforms are needed and the proposed law merely follows enlightened labor legislation in other countries.

$2,200,000 Law Suit Against Mine Union To Be Tried Again

Fort Smith, Ark., December 5.—(AP) Suit of the Coronado Coal company against the United Mine Workers of America for approximately $2,200,000—based on the contention that damages to the properties of the company during labor troubles in 1914 were the result of a conspiracy to interfere with interstate commerce in non-union mined coal—will be called for trial for the third time in United States district court here Monday.

The case twice has been submitted to the supreme court and each time the verdicts were set aside.

The first trial in 1917 resulted in a verdict for the plaintiffs, known as the Bache-Denman syndicate, for $600,000. This verdict was reversed in 1922 by the supreme court. When the case was tried again in 1923 a directed verdict was given for the defense. That decision was affirmed by the supreme court last May, so far as the international union was concerned, but reversed as to the district organization, local unions and about 200 individuals.

"How do I get to Coral Gables?"... Here's how:

THE migration to Florida, and particularly to Coral Gables, is assuming extraordinary proportions. Transportation facilities are taxed to the utmost. Unless very carefully arranged, travel southward is apt to become uncomfortable and crowded.

In consequence, the Coral Gables Corporation has arranged a plan that will enable its guests to travel with the maximum of comfort and to see the best of Florida at close range.

Your local Coral Gables office will help you to secure reservations and tickets to Jacksonville. They will also give you another ticket that entitles you to a seat on one of the busses that will take you straight to Coral Gables from the Jacksonville railway station.

These busses are luxurious, speedy, and run at frequent intervals every day. Down the Dixie Highway they roll, and the glorious pageant of Florida unrolls itself before your eyes. You touch at historic old St. Augustine. You pass through miles of millionaires' estates around Palm Beach. You ride close to the tumbling sea, through picturesque forests and the new developments that are replacing them. And when at last you arrive at Coral Gables, you have a basis on which to judge it, and a keener appreciation of its beauty and permanence.

This system avoids all congestion at the points where it now occurs and assures a safe and interesting journey. Whether or not you take advantage of the limitless opportunities that everywhere await you in Coral Gables, you will at least see the best that Florida has to offer.

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT

Get in touch with this office for a trip to Coral Gables, on one of our Pullmans leaving Atlanta, Macon, Augusta, Columbus and other Georgia points every night. Call or telephone for all the necessary information regarding the best way to visit Miami as our guests.

Rupture Can Be Cured

Science Finds

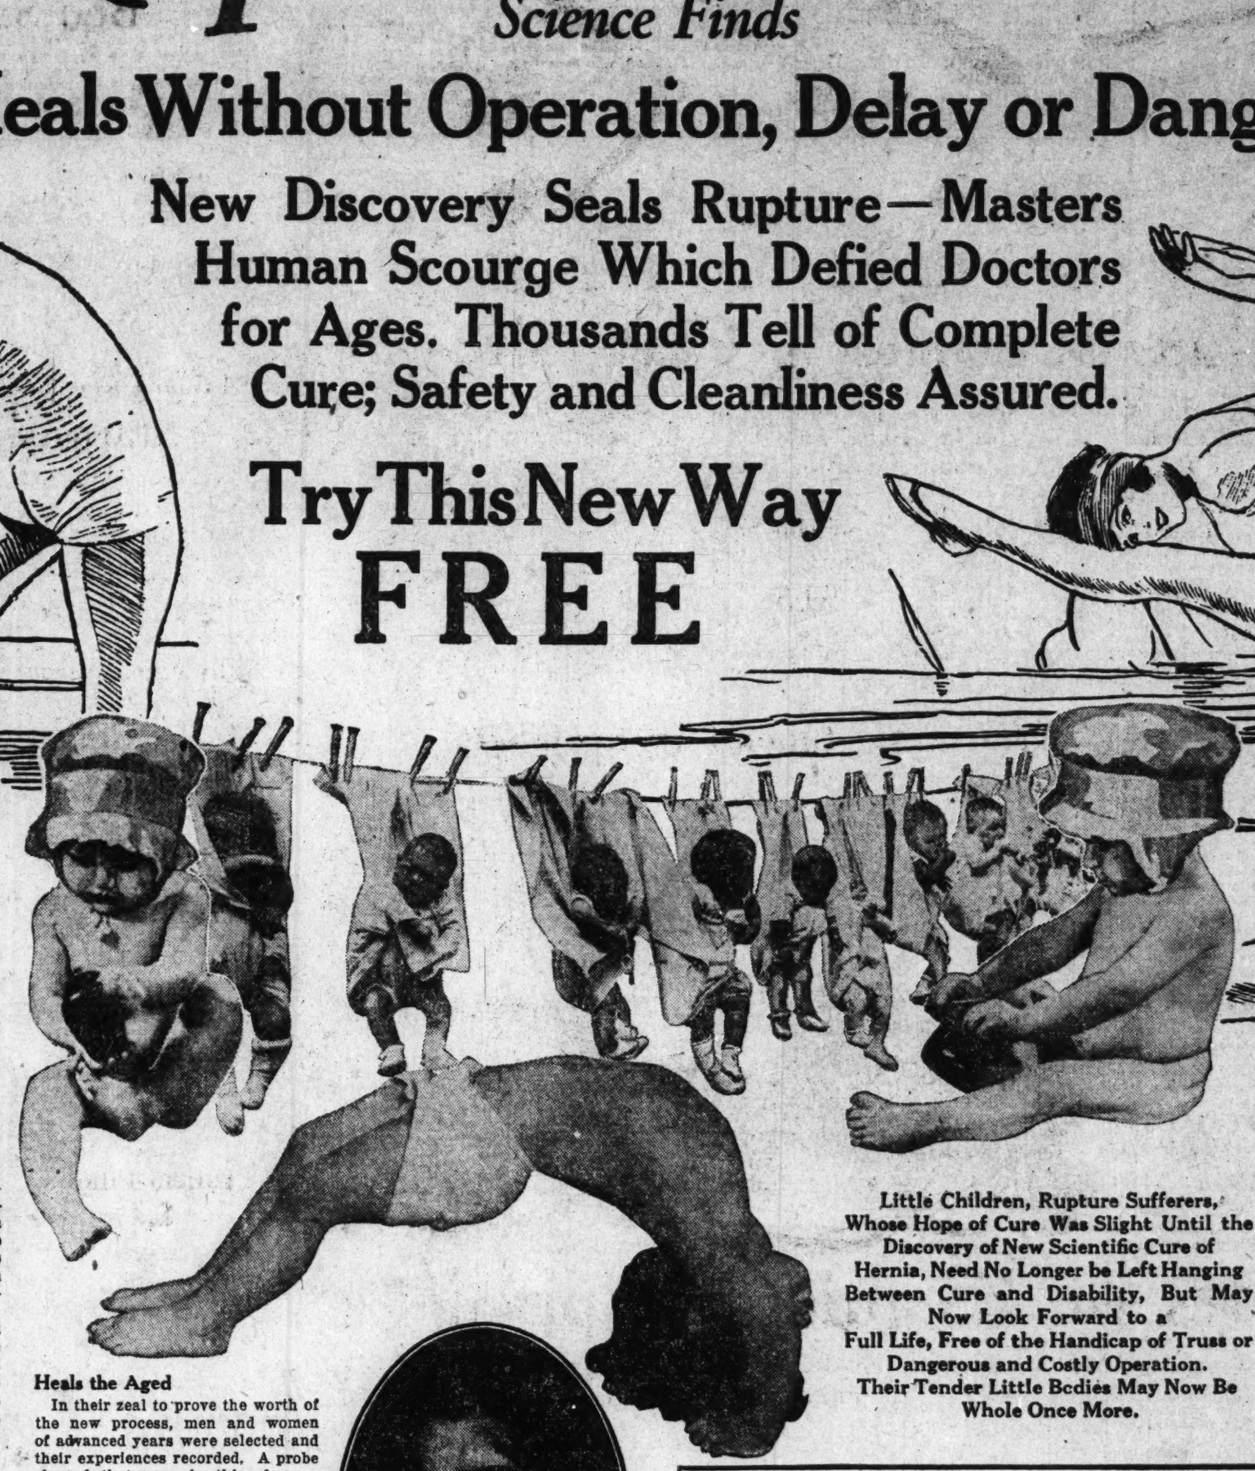

Heals Without Operation, Delay or Danger

New Discovery Seals Rupture—Masters Human Scourge Which Defied Doctors for Ages. Thousands Tell of Complete Cure; Safety and Cleanliness Assured.

Try This New Way FREE

So Light, Small and Comfortable is the New Rupture Cure, It Can Not Be Noted Even When the Wearer is Clad in Tights. Several Dancers, Sufferers from Rupture Due to the Unusual Exertion, Have Been Cured by New Discovery.

Little Children, Rupture Sufferers, Whose Hope of Cure Was Slight Until the Discovery of New Scientific Cure of Hernia, Need No Longer be Left Hanging Between Cure and Disability, But May Now Look Forward to a Full Life, Free of the Handicap of Truss or Dangerous and Costly Operation. Their Tender Little Bodies May Now Be Whole Once More.

Strains of Unusual Positions, Mean Nothing to Rupture Sufferers Now, as Science Has Perfected a Cure for Rupture Which Even During the Healing Stage Does Not Interfere With the Body Actions.

Rupture can be healed.

Medical science, endless investigation, combined with modern inventiveness has devised a method which actually heals rupture. For ages, the healing of rupture, or hernia as it is known medically, has been the aim of countless physicians and surgeons.

Investigations into the ills and body afflictions of ancients, disclose that in days, when history was noted on tablets of stone, rupture was known and even then priests of that time, were aimlessly trying to effect a cure. Trusses, as the implements which hold or retain the rupture are called, were in use at that period in history, but like the modern truss they held the rupture but failed to assist nature in healing the wound.

The ancients' attempts at healing were mere gropings, as they knew nothing of the circulation of blood and its effect on body tissue and body growth. The various phases of growth were mysteries which they were unable to fathom. Since Sir William Harvey, an English scientist of the early century, discovered that blood really circulated through the body, sending life-giving materials to all parts of the human system, the path of the rupture scientists has been more easy to follow.

They attempted to find, if possible, some method of retaining the rupture safely, yet something which would allow free circulation of blood and not irritate the edges of the hernia or rupture and which would heal the tear.

Assists Nature to Heal

This has been done. Experiments carried on for more than 30 years has resulted in the perfection of an appliance, light, safe, comfortable and clean, which assists nature and really heals the rupture. An additional improvement has been made; the entire appliance, which weighs less than two ounces, can now be washed in water or antiseptics, eliminating all body odors, irritations and causes of skin blistering. The announcement was withheld for some time, so that thousands of experiments which had been carried on in all sections of America, Holland, England, Canada and Germany could be investigated and the condition of these observed at frequent intervals.

These investigations have been made and it has been found that a great number of cures have been effected. That the cures have been permanent ones, is attested by letters written by the people themselves and sent to the offices of those who perfected the new rupture appliance. These included people in every walk of life, people who make their living by hard work, where strains, heavy lifting and constant muscular effort is necessary. Others include society women, working women and women in moderate circumstances. The cures have been general in all classes.

Heals the Aged

In their zeal to prove the worth of the new process, men and women of advanced years were selected and their experiences recorded. A probe showed that even in this class, a great number of permanent cures had resulted, where the patient followed closely the instructions of the experts.

To really understand what this great discovery and these years of experimenting and testing mean to humanity, it is almost necessary that a full description of the new method be given. Like all inventions and discoveries of science, its method of healing is based on logic and upon a keen knowledge of the subject.

A rupture or hernia, as it is known in medical science, is literally a tear or a separation of the muscle fibers in the walls of the abdomen. This separation is caused by a heavy strain, a violent jerking or unusual exertion. The fibers separate and allow a portion of the intestine to protrude through the opening. This results in a small knot or knob on the wall of the abdomen.

Before the investigation, which resulted in the discovery of this new method of healing, there were but two courses open. A physician or surgeon could be called and an operation performed or the patient or sufferer could seek some sort of comfort from a truss, which pushed itself into the rupture opening, keeping the protruding intestine inside the body.

The operation was expensive and dangerous, with the outcome a doubtful thing.

All the surgeon with his knife, could promise to do, was to bring the edges of the torn section together and sew it, then await the action of nature and allow growth to renew the torn sections.

Truss Prevents Cure

If the truss was called into service, the hard leather knob was forced into the tear, where constant irritation wore thin the edges of the wound and the hard pressure prevented proper blood circulation. The sufferer was forced to resign himself to a lifetime of rupture suffering, never free from the harness of the truss. No hope was held out by scientists, that his rupture would ever cure itself, although many manufacturers of appliances contended that such a thing was possible; scientific investigation showed that it was impossible to heal the rupture as long as the heavy pad was being pushed into the rupture opening, separating the edges of the tear and wearing thin, the edges of the torn section.

Sir William Harvey, English Scientist, Whose Discovery of the Circulatory System, Assisted so Greatly in Perfection of New Medical Discovery Which Heals Rupture.

The heavy springs in the usual truss pressed into the body, many times injuring the kidneys and causing unrepairable damage to the back, where the heavy steel pressed into the tender nerves, centered in the spinal column. Besides this, so cruel was the old-fashioned truss, it was impossible to sleep in the apparatus, with the result that in sleep many times, the rupture "came out" and even a doctor was unable to replace it. When this happened, an immediate operation was necessary if the life of the patient was to be saved. Peritonitis would result in 24 hours if the rupture strangulated or could not be replaced. The old truss was not washable; it caused skin irritations and the dirt which accumulated caused a feverish condition which retarded the cure.

The great number of rupture cases among small children and babies made necessary some method which would eliminate forever the pushing pad, the dangerous operation and heavy steel encircling the body, injuring the delicate nerve centers.

Experiments Bring Cure

The experiments resulted in the discovery and perfection of the Brooks appliance. C. E. Brooks, a resident of Marshall, Michigan, was ruptured. He was not a doctor but he was a well educated man. Rupture causes and rupture cures became his hobby and after many years he developed the appliance which now bears his name.

He soon found the deficiencies of the truss—the things it did to hinder cure and to retard healing. So he developed an appliance which did everything which the truss failed to do. With reverse logic he invented the rupture appliance which resulted in the many cures narrated.

Can Be Washed Daily

His appliance, built scientifically and recommended by physicians and doctors in all sections of the world, lays—not pushes—on the rupture. Small, slight, clean, safe and comfortable, its soft velvet-like air cushion of hygienic rubber retains the rupture and at the same time tends to bring the edges of the tear together. The action of the small oval is to gently close the wound, and in this way allow growth. Nature, when assisted, soon repairs the damage wrought in the injured side and the result is a cure for the sufferer. The washable, sanitary feature, so necessary if cure is expected and health assured, was incorporated into this new invention.

He eliminated at once all metal springs and hard, unyielding pads. Soft washable material encircles the body and acts as a support for the small oval. There are no features in the newly perfected appliance which do not work toward the cure of the patient. Every movement of the body results in the edges of the wound being brought closer together, reversing the action of the old style which constantly forced the edges of the wound apart.

It is so light, so comfortable that it can be worn even while asleep, so that night and day, asleep or at work, the rupture is being healed.

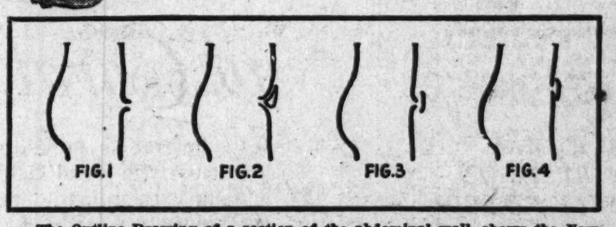

Thousands Cured

It is no wonder then that so many people have been cured by this new discovery. A volume of letters began to flow into the offices of the inventor as soon as these cures were effected. People who thought they were destined to wear a truss all their lives or submit to a dangerous operation, reported cures in a few months while cures with small children were regular occurrences.

To ascertain the truth of the reports of permanent cures by the use of the new invention, a check was taken over a period of years and letters written to hundreds who had worn the new device. The answers were amazing—the number of cures astounding. Hundreds, literally thousands, torn for years by rupture and weakened by its effects, had gained freedom from all devices by the consistent use of the new invention.

In a letter to the inventors, Mrs. Thomas Scott of 11637 125th Street, Edmondton, Alta., Canada, said:

"One year ago I bought your rupture appliance for my little girl, who was three years old. She is now four and the rupture hasn't bothered her since I put the appliance on.

The Outline Drawing of a section of the abdominal wall, shows the New and Old Way by Which Rupture Was Treated. Until the Present Discovery, a Heavy Pad or Knob Was Used, It Forced Itself Into the Rupture Opening, Retaining the Rupture But Making Cure Impossible.

"I surely am very thankful to you and you may use this letter, as it may help some other worried mother."

An amazing cure was effected by C. H. Campbell, a carpenter, 75 years old, living at Freeport, N. S., Canada, who had been ruptured many years. He said:

"I am pleased to inform you that I do not need anything in connection with the appliance, for I have not worn same for the last nine months and consider myself cured of rupture.

"The rupture has not troubled me for the last four years—thanks to you and your invention. It was a God-send to me, for the doctor said there was nothing for me but the knife. I am seventy-five years old and work every day at my trade as a carpenter. You are at liberty to use the above statement in any way you choose."

A brief period cured E. W. Brown of Norwich, N. Y., who states:

"I discontinued wearing my appliance about six weeks ago and am happy to say that my rupture is entirely healed. Was examined by my doctor and pronounced cured. Considering my age, 61 years, think this is wonderful work.

"Cannot express to you just how grateful I am, for up to the time I commenced wearing your appliance was miserable every minute."

Steel Trusses Fail

A proof that spring trusses failed to effect a cure while the more modern Brooks appliance made possible a cure which even a doctor pronounced positive. The letter from Albert Foote, P. O. Box 177, Sterling, Mass., said:

"Gentlemen: I wore your grand rupture appliance for one year day and night, after which I underwent a doctor's examination. He stated I was completely cured. This examination was made in December, 1921, and I haven't worn the appliance since and have had no trouble.

"I suffered from a double rupture and had used spring trusses for six years without help."

A further proof that the cures are permanent ones, is verified by John Clark, Roan Mountain, Tenn., R. F. D. No. 2, Box 84, who said:

"Your rupture appliance has cured me—I have been well for two years.

"You may use my name and this letter in any way you wish, for I feel very grateful."

A sad case was disclosed when a man writing from Peoria, Illinois, gave the following statement. His name was withheld out of regard for his grief. It gives a striking example of the dangers of rupture, especially where the old-fashioned spring truss is used. The application of the new Brooks appliance might have resulted in saving the man's life. The letter from his son follows:

"Dear Mr. Brooks: I am returning the rupture appliance for refund, as father died from strangulated hernia the day before it came.

"We tried two years ago to get him to order one of your appliances and cannot help but feel that if he had done as we wanted him to—he would have been spared."

Thousands Cured

On file in the offices of the company are thousands of letters, telling of the cures effected by this new invention and many of them full of thanks and gratitude for the cure which they had always thought impossible or too dangerous to attempt.

So convinced are the people who now make this new invention that it will cure rupture and bring instant relief they will allow a ten-day free trial of the new appliance. In ten days, they believe any rupture sufferer can tell whether or not it is satisfactory in his or her particular case. If it fails to give the comfort that they feel it should it can be returned.

Free Trial

The financial standing of the people who make this newly perfected appliance is above reproach. They give as references, banks, ministers, physicians and express companies in their city or in practically any large city in the entire nation.

"To gamble with rupture," said a prominent scientist, "is to gamble with life, itself. Trusses hamper the wearer, they many times ruin the health of children for life. To secure an appliance, which retains and at the same time assists healing is wonderful and means much to mankind."

To obtain this appliance the readers of this paper can write to Brooks Appliance Co., 619B State St., Marshall, Mich., and it will be sent for free test trial. Fill out the coupon below and mail it today. To delay may mean permanent ill health or even worse.

The New J. M. High Company

THE CONSTITUTION'S REAL ESTATE REVIEW

:: :: :: :: CONDUCTED IN THE INTEREST OF DEVELOPMENT OF ATLANTA AND THE SOUTH :: :: :: ::

Lease Activities Shows Steady Atlanta Condition

Leases aggregating an excess of $75,000 have been closed during the last 60 days in the Palmer properties to many new concerns that never before had southern headquarters in Atlanta. Some of the other leases are to organizations already located here whose expansion has been so rapid recently that they have required additional office space.

Noteworthy among the new branches is that of the Pittsburgh-Des Moines Steel company which has taken a suite in the Glenn building, which is owned by Palmer, Inc. This national concern has moved its southern headquarters to Atlanta from Richmond, Va. C. R. Ford is district manager and C. J. Jackson is his assistant. The Pittsburgh-Des Moines Steel company is one of the largest manufacturers of structural steel in the United States.

In the Palmer building the Miller-Bryant-Pierce company has closed a lease for a suite. A. Perry is district manager and Lora T. Perry assistant. Miller-Bryant-Pierce company deals in typewriter supplies and manufactures over 700 different kinds of carbon ribbon. The states of Georgia, Florida, North Carolina, South Carolina and Louisiana will be handled from this headquarters. Atlanta was chosen from among other southern cities for headquarters after an exhaustive study of the south by executives of this well-known concern.

The Lincoln Park memorial organization, of which H. L. Albert is the head, also has located its offices in the Palmer building, moving here from Chattanooga, Tenn.

The Baldwin Universal company has taken a handsome suite at 101 Marietta street, which is another one of the office buildings owned and operated by Palmer, Inc. J. B. Johnson is the southern head of the Baldwin company, which has just established its branch here from New York headquarters. The entire south will be covered from Atlanta.

The choice of the Palmer properties by so many new concerns locating for the first time in Atlanta indicates the rapid influx of newcomers to the city. Each one of the concerns above mentioned has large clerical forces and add materially to the pay rolls of the city.

Expansion Shown.

The quickened business activity in Atlanta is further shown by the expansion of various organizations having their headquarters in the Palmer properties. Eastman-Scott company, a well-known advertising organization, has found its business so rapidly increasing that it has recently taken on considerable additional space in the Glenn building. Also in the Glenn building the Georgia Railway and Power company has further expanded, taking in aproximately one-third more of a floor.

Liggett & Myers Tobacco company, which maintains southern headquarters at 101 Marietta street, has taken on additional space because of the very marked increase in activity throughout its territory. H. G. Davidson is southern manager for Liggett & Myers tobacco.

Locations on the ground floors of the Palmer properties have recently been leased. The Poinsettia Park organization of Florida has located its Atlanta headquarters at 39 Marietta street in the Palmer building. G. L. Scrivens is th local representative. D. C. Paris & Co., who handle men's haberdashery and suits, have leased a ground floor location in the 101 Marietta street building. At 585 Marietta street the Star Provision company has taken a garage.

Recent leases closed in the Palmer building also include a large suite of offices to the Cotton States Advertising agency, of which Allen Gottschaldt is president. The Atlanta Car Interchange association, of which A. Armstrong is head, also has located on the third floor of the Palmer building and the southern headquarters for Good Housekeeping and Cosmopolitan Magazine company also has been located in the Palmer building.

The Quaker Oats company has established headquarters in the Glenn building, and at 101 Marietta street the Kelley-Hughes company, of which Francis Kelley is head, has leased a large suite of offices. The Atlanta Chemical company and the Wallace Construction company have located their headquarters on the fourth floor at 101 Marietta street. With both of these organizations Arthur L. Brooke is associated in an executive capacity. Mr. Brooke is very prominent in Atlanta affairs and has recently been elected president of the Southeastern Fair association.

The aggregate rental of the above leases, closed within the last 60 days by Palmer, Inc., in their properties is about $75,000. It is one of the best indications of the splendid business conditions in Atlanta and another tribute to the strategic location of the gate city of the south.

Handsome New Home in Cascade Heights

Modern residence newly constructed in the "Pace's Ferry road of Atlanta's west side." This dwelling, with all that is new and approved, attracted much attention and many visitors have admired its interior arrangement as well as its beautiful exterior. The home was built by the "Wey-Con" company, developers of Cascade Heights, one of Atlanta's largest and most attractive subdivisions.

Evidences of Prosperity In Central Business Deals

Signs of bigger business and greatly increased activity in real estate transactions are to be seen in every part of the city and Atlanta is taking on more and more the true aspect of the metropolis of the southeast. The approach of the holidays is doubtless responsible for some of the activity, but long-term leases on business houses in the center of the city, as well as sales of central property to business concerns to be utilized as business homes indicate the permanence of the revival. High rentals and high prices for the business property indicate the high esteem placed on Atlanta by business concerns.

It was stated several months ago that Atlanta was over-built and that there were many business places vacant in the central portion of the city. It was a fact that many new stores had been erected, and many of the new office buildings as well as apartment houses drew from the older and less desirable establishments tenants who wished better quarters. This left a number of vacancies, but in a majority of instances owners of the vacated houses took advantage of the situation to overhaul and renovate their property with the result that most of these places are tenated today. There has been a steady increase in the population of the city, and many new business concerns have located here, all of which has served to absorb the greater portion of the empty stores, residences and office buildings. The prediction recently was made by a well-known renting manager that the apartment situation is most satisfactory, and that if the demand for homes will keep up at the present rate it will be but a short time until more apartment buildings will be required.

South Side Activity.

Special activity in the renting of central business property is to be noted on several of the downtown streets. South Broad street, which has been gaining steadily in importance and popularity since the removal of the mammoth department store of M. Rich & Brothers company to the corner of Alabama and Broad, is undergoing many changes and a number of new concerns are locating on that thoroughfare, with prospects for even greater development. Among the recently projected improvements on South Broad street is the rebuilding of the several buildings that were destroyed a few months ago by a fire that burned several stores and buildings. These renovated and rebuilt stores, which are now under construction, will add much to the appearance of South Broad, enhancing its modern aspect and adding to the business tone of the street.

The completion of the F. & W. Grand store, which has an ornamental entrance on Broad, about as attractive as the Whitehall street entrance, is another feature of Broad street improvements. Practically all the large Whitehall street department stores that run through from Whitehall to Broad street have immense show windows and entrances on Broad. One of these stores has its principal entrance on Broad.

Recognizing the growing crowds that are daily using Broad street and realizing the value of this street as a shopping center, a number of important business changes are expected to take place, and it is believed that several new concerns will open business on South Broad within a short time. Among the definite announcements that have been made is that of a well-known restaurant man, who announces the opening of a pure food restaurant in a large brick building at the south end of the broad street bridge. This will add to the small number of high-class eating places existing now on the south side of the city. The restaurant, it is stated, will be one of the most modern and one of the highest toned places for dispensing food to be found in the city.

Peachtree Active.

Vacancies that were spoken of that existed along Peachtree street also are being rapidly absorbed, and a revival of real estate activity on that thoroughfare has been specially noted during the past few weeks. Many largs sales and a number of long-term leases have been closed on this famous street within the past few days, and announcements are made by real estate men specializing in north side business property that several large and important transactions are in the making for Peachtree street real estate.

West Peachtree street also is undergoing a revived activity that has drawn attention of real estate men and investors to that section of the city. The same is true of Spring street and several of the cross streets intersecting these thoroughfares.

The big building program on Peachtree street and on streets intersecting it, and the large number of splendid structures that have been announced for Peachtree and West Peachtree, will have the effect of adding to the activity in property. Among the mammoth projects for Peachtree street is the Shriners' mosque, a structure that will cost more than a million dollars. Two other specially designed buildings are said to be projected for Peachtree, each of which will cost in the neighborhood of a million dollars. No public announcement has been made regarding these buildings, but the writer was assured by a well-known realtor that they are to be erected.

Vacancies on Whitehall street are disappearing daily, and a number of new buildings on that thoroughfare have added greatly to the activity of this famous old street, which at one time was Atlanta's fashionable residential center. Among the important new buildings on Whitehall street are the large cold storage plants of the Cudahy company, the Armour company and Wilson & Company, all of which were erected last summer. Other large packing concerns, which now have their warehouses and cold storage plants on Alabama street, it is declared, will also build modern plants on Whitehall street in the vicinity of the above-mentioned concerns.

Apartment house and residential rentals are experiencing renewed activity, according to real estate concerns of the city, and residential sales are reported to be on the increase by concerns specializing in that class of property.

"There is a feeling of confidence—an atmosphere of coming prosperity in Atlanta," said a well-known realtor, "that can mean nothing less than that Atlanta is on the threshold of perhaps her most splendid era of progress and prosperity."

TURNER BAPTISTS SEND CAR OF EATS TO HAPEVILLE TOTS

Ashburn, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—The Turner county Baptist association shipped a carload of provisions today to the Georgia Baptist orphanage at Hapeville, Ga.

Sending a car to this orphans' home is an annual custom with the Baptists of this association and the donors have been very generous in giving hay, feed stuff, flour, meal, cured meat, potatoes, syrup, peanuts.

In fact a little of everything that is used in the ordinary home.

NEW FIRM ACQUIRES HUNTSVILLE THEATERS

Huntsville, Ala., December 5.—(Special.)—Announcement was made Friday that the Grand and Jefferson theaters of this city, operated for several years by Charles L. Hackworth, had been acquired by a newly organized corporation of which M. A. Lightman, of Nashville is president and treasurer; Charles L. Hackworth, vice president, and R. E. Smith, secretary.

Jack Marshall has been retained as local manager for the Grand, and Mrs. Charles L. Hackworth will have charge of the Jefferson, which will be operated six days a week in the future instead of only on Saturday and holidays.

West End People Are Grateful for New Playgrounds

BY PAUL JONES.

The announcement that was made last week that Atlanta's West End is to have a new civic park—a breathing space of 25 acres, in which children in this section of the city can enjoy sports and pleasures—where old people can assemble for an hour of social intercourse in the afternoons and mornings, and where middle-aged people may take their children for a few hours of pleasure. The news was received with much pleasure by the people of West End.

Atlanta has been remiss in providing such breathing spaces for her people, according to real estate men and those who have observed the growth of the city. Atlanta would have profited much by providing more space for the enjoyment of the citizens, and this would have been a larger town, it is believed, if the city fathers and the citizens had taken pains to see that more open spaces had been provided as the city grew in population and importance.

"Some of us make serious mistakes," said a real estate man in discussing this problem, "and we are prone to look with a disapproving eye upon efforts that are being made by the more public spirited citizens and those who are able to see far in advance of us, that we will some day be in vital need of parks and playgrounds. Atlanta is sure to grow to a city of 300,000, if not 500,000, and when we attain that proportion we will find ourselves shut in with big business buildings—structures that have been erected by great financial interests that are counting only upon the return on the dollar, and there will be no provisions made for the open spaces—the breathing places and the playgrounds, that New York's planners, Cleveland planners, Augusta, Ga., planners and other civic planners wisely provided for. We will find ourselves in much the same position that the crowded east side of New York is in today, with thousands of children playing in a crowded street, impeding progress, defiant of the stream of traffic, oblivious to danger in their eagerness to have a breath of air and an opportunity to stretch their limbs.

"Children will not be driven from their right to enjoy themselves and unless Atlanta takes advantage of her present opportunity to rearrange her civic centers and to provide for the children who are coming on, and who will demand the right to enjoy their young lives, we are more than likely to have the blame of our descendants heaped upon our heads."

CENTRAL DIXIE MEET PLANNED AT DOUGLAS

Fitzgerald, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—Thirty members of the Fitzgerald Chamber of Commerce have signed up to attend the meeting of the Central Dixie Highway association to be held at Douglas Tuesday, December 8.

Douglas Chamber of Commerce and Kiwanis club are in charge of the local arrangements for this meeting, at which the state highway depaerment will be represented by Chairman John N. Holder and others.

The immediate completion of construction of the unfinished links on this route will be planned at this meeting, most of the county authorities along the route being quoted as favoring hard-surface roads through their counties. Pulaski county is preparing to pave to the Houston county line and Ben Hill county is now building the last link of the Dixie highway through that county.

Commissioner Warren Paulk, of Irwin, has made application for state aid for the road from Ocilla to the Coffee county line and is ready to place his working force on this link of the route. From present indications, 1926 will see a completely paved road from Perry, Ga., to Jacksonville, via Fitzgerald and Ware county the latter is now paving the remaining unpaved part of the highday through that country.

SCHOOLS OF MONROE CLOSE DECEMBER 18

Forsyth, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—At a meeting of the Monroe county board of education it was decided to close the schools of the county Friday, December 18, for the Christmas holidays and to open Monday, January 4. Arrangements were made also to pay the teachers promptly at the close of the school month.

A committee was appointed to look into the feasibility of placing on interest the several thousand dollars now being held up by litigation.

PROFESSOR FORMS CHEMICAL SENATE TO EDUCATE U. S.

Bridgeport, Conn., December 5.—(AP) A senate of chemical education which will plan for the future development of chemical education in this country is being formed, Professor Neile Gordon, head of the department of chemistry in the University of Maryland, said today in an address before a joint meeting of the Yale section of the American Chemical society, and the New England association of Chemistry Teachers. The senate will ally the industires, the high schools and the universities in a national movement to accomplish radical reforms in the teaching of chemistry throughout the country, he said.

Each state will be represented by three senators, most of whom he announced, have already been elected. The senate will work in cooperation with organizations of chemistry teachers in every state and with the section of chemical education of the American Chemical society, which will direct the coordinated efforts. Fifteen thousand chemistry teachers will be enlisted.

The first meeting of the senate will be held in connection with the spring meeting of the American Chemical society in Tulsa, Okla., early in April.

GLASS WORKERS ASK 8 PER CENT BOOST IN WAGES

Cleveland, Ohio, December 5.—(AP) Requests for an 8 per cent increase in wages of all window glass workers in plants east of the Mississippi river, to be effective December 27, were sent out to window glass manufacturers today, J. M. Siemer, president of the National Window Glass Workers' association, announced.

An additional 5 per cent increase for workmen in western plants is included in Siemer's new scale, based on the increased selling price of glass.

"Manufacturers are agreed that we are entitled to a raise in wages," Siemer said, "and we expect to ratify the new scale."

At a wage conference here this week with Manufacturers no agreement on the amount of the increase was reached.

PRESIDENT ADAMS WELCOMES REAL ESTATE VISITORS

"In behalf of the officers and members of the Atlanta real estate board, I wish to extend to the visiting realtors attending the fifth annual convention of the Georgia Real Estate association hearty welcome.

"It is the desire of the Atlanta board that your every care and comfort be attended to and an effort has been made to provide a program that will meet with your approval and pleasure.

"Any personal service that can be extended you while in Atlanta will be gladly rendered and this will be brought about by calling upon any member or the office of the Atlanta board, 17 Poplar street.

"Wishing for the convention every success, extending you a friendly greeting and looking forward to seeing you at the convention, I am,

Cordially yours,
(Signed) A. S. ADAMS,
President, Atlanta Real Estate Board.

Real Estate Men To Hear Address By W. P. Walthall

A. S. Adams, president of the Atlanta real estate board, has announced that the board will hold a luncheon meeting on the Cecil hotel roof on Monday at 12:30 p. m. W. P. Walthall will speak on "Review of the Real Estate Business for 1925." The speaker will endeavor to give an outline as to real estate sales during the past 12 months and at the same time compare them with the sales of past years, quoting amounts and established sales records.

Mr. Walthall, through many years experience in the real estate business, is said to be well equipped to discuss this subject. He has promised to give data that will be of exceptional interest.

The committees in charge of arrangements for the state convention to be held in Atlanta, December 9-10, will announce the program of speakers for the convention and the entertainment program will be discussed.

This luncheon is the last the board will hold this year.

School Control Changes Urged; Favor Bond Issue

Radical changes in control of Atlanta public schools, including the recommendation that a bond issue of $8,400,000 be floated for new buildings and annexes, are urged in the report of the citizens commission appointed early this year by John T. Hancock, president of the board of education, which is to be formally presented the board of education at its regular meeting Tuesday afternoon.

The report was first made public several months ago by Joel Hunter, chairman of the commission.

Changes Recommended.

Other changes in the present school system, as recommended in the report are:

Reduction of the personnel of the board from 12 members, one named by each of the 12 wards, to nine members, all to be named by voters of the city-at-large.

Consolidation of the Tech High and Boys' High school and the boys department of Commercial High school and also the consolidation of the girls' department of Commercial High with Girls' High.

That the schools receive no less a proportion of city's funds than at present but that the schools be given a certain percentage of revenue from taxes only, instead of 26 per cent of all current revenue, as at present.

That all portable schools be abolished.

That the board be allowed to expend its funds and control schools independent of council except that the mayor be given veto powers over all school expenditures.

The report expressed opposition to any plan to allow the school board to levy taxes or to certify to a separate tax for school purposes.

Expended When Needed.

The proposed bond issue for the schools is to be expended only as the needs arise. One-third of the proposed $8,400,000 in bonds should be floated at once and the remainder within a period of four to five years, it was recommended.

The meeting of the board Tuesday will be held in city council chamber at city hall, because the new quarters of the board in Walker Street school have not been sufficiently fitted up to permit the board to meet there.

COTTON GROWERS DENY MISTREATING MEXICAN WORKERS

Little Rock, Ark., December 5.—(AP) Charges that Lee Wilson & Co., operating large plantations in Mississippi county, Arkansas, had mistreated Mexican labor imported from Texas to harvest the cotton crop were declared to be unfounded in a report made to Governor Tom J. Terrall today by Dwight Blackwood, state treasurer, who investigated the charges at the request of the governor. The charges had been telegraphed to Governor Terrall by the Mexican consul general at New Orleans, who also sent a representative to the Mississippi county plantations.

The text of the report was not made public today but it was understood that Mr. Blackwood told the governor he found many of the Mexican workers, of whom about 400 are employed, satisfied with conditions and doing well. Part of the cause for complaint, he said, was due to the fact that rains had interfered with cotton picking operations. He declared that none of the employees of the plantations was armed, as had been charged, and that insanitary conditions were due primarily to the failure of some of the workers to keep their houses clean during the rainy period. Others, he said, kept their quarters spotless.

WHEAT POOLS HELD EXEMPT FROM TAXES

Topeka, Kan., December 5.—(AP)—Wheat pools are exempt from taxation, the Kansas supreme court ruled today. The court held tha individual members of pool were subject to taxation for their share in the pool.

Georgia Realtors To Meet In Atlanta December 9-10

Information coming in to the office of Executive Secretary J. C. Davis, of the Atlanta real estate board from all parts of the state is said to indicate that the coming Georgia real estate convention to be held in Atlanta on Wednesday and Thursday, December 9-10, will be the largest attended meeting ever held by the state association. The boards that will participate in the convention are those at Augusta, Savannah, Macon, Columbus, Atlanta, Albany, Bainbridge, Thomasville, Americus and Moultrie.

Definite word has been received from the officers of the boards in Bainbridge, Albany and Columbus that each organization will be well represented at the convention by an attendance of ten or more from each board. Active campaigns are being carried on by the Macon, Columbus, Augusta and Savannah boards for the purpose of having large delegations at the convention.

The convention committees of the Atlanta board already are making an endeavor to prevail upon every member of the Atlanta board to register and attend the convention and indications are that over one hundred members of the local body will register and participate in the convention activities. Josiah Flournoy, president of the state association, advises that he has communicated with all speakers booked for the convention and he is glad to announce that the convention program has been arranged in a final and definite way that assures the attending realtors of many helpful and constructive ideas.

A. S. Adams, president of the Atlanta board, declared that the convention chairmen, consisting of Dana Belser, John J. Thompson, Jesse Draper and J. R. Smith, are preparing a program of entertainment that will appeal to every realtor. Of course the outstanding social event of the convention will be the banquet at the Capital City club. The committee is arranging for a real night and those who attend will not be disappointed.

All members of the Georgia Real Estate association are asked to look forward to the convention and advocate attendance to their fellow members and make their minds up definitely so proper reservations can be made.

The program follows:

'Don't Envy Fla. Prosperity, Let's Share It'—Forrest Adair

Georgia is destined to reap rich prosperity from the great activity now in evidence throughout the state of Florida, and is indeed already feeling its effect in a general rise in property values, according to Forrest Adair, prominent Atlantan who has just returned from an extended trip over the peninsular state.

"Of course the great development and general progress that Florida is now experiencing is wonderful to behold," said Mr. Adair, and should be a source of great pride to every southerner. But to a Georgian, the first thing visible is the great good all of it will do us.

"The fact that Florida now has the spotlight of the nation is bringing thousands of people southward that never have traveled here before. Naturally, they see Georgia and the rest of the south when they come—and they see its advantages and its resources in a way that the past hasn't given them.

"And it is not just seeing the south—for many of them will remain. Many are finding that Georgia suits their needs better than Florida. Especially prosperous now is the south Georgia section, where land values are mounting and a general awakening to the possibilities of the section is taking place.

"It's true the south over—this reflex action from Florida's prosperity. Certainly the trend in Atlanta is upward and the outlook here is brighter than it has been in years."

Extended Tour of Florida.

Mr. Adair, while he covered practically the entire state in his extended tour, was particularly enthusiastic about the west coast—the St. Petersburg, Tampa, Bradenton and Sarasota region.

"Those people on the west coast," he said, "have something that not all of Florida can boast. In fact, they have a natural endowment which can hardly be matched in the world, let alone the United States.

"This quality I speak of is their wonderfully fertile back country. Before anybody had even suggested that there was a 'boom' in Florida, this section in Manatee, Sarasota and Hillsborough counties was shipping the best of vegetables and fruits to all corners of the world. They can grow every delicacy imaginable, and the climate is so beneficient and the seasons so convenient that they can demand top prices on all the yearly markets.

"The town of Bradenton alone, with something like 8,500 inhabitants, shipped last season more than 9,000 cars of fruits and vegetables. It has been estimated that the last tomato crop alone netted the farmers something like two and a half million dollars. There is no sense in talking about 'slumps' when a country is as rich as that—and as awake to its natural wealth."

Mr. Adair also stated that only "short-sightedness" could possibly make any Georgian alarm over Florida's prosperity. The "reflex action," he said, will be one of the greatest things Georgia has experienced in recent years. "Instead of envying Florida's prosperity," he said, "let's share in it."

BY THE AUCTIONEER

ATLANTA BOARD HOST TO STATE REALTORS.

The Atlanta real estate board will entertain the large crowd of Georgia realtors who will gather in this city December 9-10 for the annual convention of the Georgia Association of Real Estate Boards. Members of the local realty organization are making elaborate preparations for the entertainment of the visitors, according to J. C. Robinson, executive secretary of the Atlanta organization.

OTIS TO SPEAK TO CONVENTION ON APPRAISALS.

R. R. Otis, one of the leading members of the real estate fraternity in Atlanta, and a well-known speaker on civic and real estate matters, will deliver one of the principal addresses of the coming convention of the Georgia realtors here December 9.

NOTABLE REALTORS TO ATTEND CONVENTION HERE.

Among the notable out-of-town realtors who will attend the Georgia real estate convention will be Josiah Flournoy, of Columbus, president of the state organization. J. Clay Murphy, of Macon, who was president of the state association in 1924, will also be present, and will deliver an address upon "State Advertising."

LOCAL CHAIRMEN WILL ARRANGE FOR CONVENTION.

President Albert S. Adams, of the local real estate board, has named the following committee chairmen to arrange for the entertainment of the Georgia Real Estate association delegates when they arrive here for the annual convention next week; Dana Belser, John J. Thompson, J. R. Smith and Jesse Draper. These chairmen are said to be making elaborate preparations for the entertainment of their guests.

THOMPSON LOOKS FOR BUSINESS REVIVAL.

"There is an air of optimism and confidence," said John J. Thompson, well known Atlanta realtor, "that surely indicates that Atlanta is on the threshold of a period of good business. Every one seems to feel this atmosphere and is preparing for prosperity."

Mr. Thompson deals in homes largely, having sold large numbers of Atlanta dwellings. He says that people are coming to the city in larger groups and that there is every indication that the demand for all classes of realty will be stimulated by the increasing population. "Business has been good with us all the autumn," said Mr. Thompson, "and we have sold many homes during the past season."

FLORIDA-BOUND CARS SENT TO THOMASVILLE

Thomasville, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—Thomasville, like other towns in south Georgia, is having numbers of automobiles shipped here to be sent on to Florida. These cars are of various makes and while some are stored for shipment, others are sent on to Florida upon their arrival, drivers coming here for the purpose of taking them down to that state.

A large number being driven through the streets here yesterday attracted much attention, being of some of the best grades and prices.

BAINBRIDGE CITIZEN IS KILLED BY TRAIN

Bainbridge, Ga., December 5.—(AP) F. E. Holt, 30, of the Perkins-Holt Manufacturing company, and an inventor, was instantly killed at 3 o'clock Friday morning, when his automobile in which he was riding on the tracks of the Atlantic Coast Line railway was struck by a passenger train.

The accident happened at a curve. Why he was on the railroad track has not been explained.

SALVAGING OF S-51 WRECK ABANDONED UNTIL NEXT SPRING

Washington, December 5.—(AP)—Salvage operations on the submarine S-51, sunk off Block Island, R. I., September 25, were ordered abandoned by Secretary Wilbur today until next spring.

The decision was reached upon recommendation of Admiral Plunkett, in command of the third naval district at New York, under whom the operations have been proceeding because of weather conditions hazardous to the divers.

As a result, the court of inquiry has been directed to submit its report on the disaster without waiting until the submarine is raised.

The craft is resting in 120 feet on an even keel lengthwise to the current and is expected to remain in position until salvaging operations are resumed. Thirty-three officers and men were lost when she sank after a collision with the steamer City of Rome and three men were saved. Nine bodies have been recovered.

U. S. WINS HONORS AT CATTLE SHOW

Chicago, December 5.—(AP)—A compilation of the distribution of honors at the annual international live-stock exposition, closing today, indicated that neither the United States nor Canada, the chief exhibiting nations, had anything to be ashamed of.

America took the highest honor when the Iowa state college's Mah Jongg was acclaimed the grand champion steer, but the Canadians scored when the Prince of Wales' shorthorn bull, King of the Fairies, won his honors as breeding animal.

Honors Are Divided.

The Americans took the grand championship in the Hereford class, but in the others honors were about even.

In horse awards, honors were about set off. America took all honors in the swine exhibitions, but the Canadians counted by taking the honors in the sheep division.

Colonel Robert McEwen, of London, Ont., took one more prize than any other exhibitor. For the fourth time he won the carload championship. The University of California took first honors for a wether.

Canadian Dethroned.

In the grain show, an upset was recorded when a Canadian was dethroned after a five-year reign by a new "wheat king" from Fishtail, Mont., who, however, the Canadians claimed, exhibited wheat grown from Canadian seed. He was L. P. Yates.

America as usual took the title of "corn king," L. M. Vogler, of Hope, Ind., being crowned.

There were many women exhibitors in virtually all classes, Pauline Brown, a nine-year-old Aledo, Ill., girl, taking the highest award for her sex by winning the junior feeder contest.

The attendance was greater than any other year, more than 225,000 persons passing through the turnstiles.

BLACK'S SHOE STORE CLOSES OUT BUSINESS

Black's Shoe store, for many years in the retail shoe business in Atlanta, is soon to close its doors and retire from the retail shoe business after a long and successful career, officials announced Saturday.

Numbering its friends by the thousands, for there are many Atlanta citizens with families whose first infant shoes mother or dad purchased for them at Black's, the news of Black's closing will be received with genuine regret.

In speaking of selling out the the first day of our closing out sale. "We really did not realize how many friends, real honest-to-goodness friends, Black's had until yesterday, the first dayl of our closing-out sale. Aside from the crowds who came to take advantage of the reduced prices, there were hundreds of folks who came in just to tell us how they were going to miss the home-like, friendly spirit of their family shoe store. But we could hold out no longer against the march of progress and the tempting offer of a large chain store syndicate to possess our location and store equipment.

"It is with no little regret that we leave such a large circle of loyal friends after so many years of business relationship that has always been marked with a brotherly and neighborly sentiment. It consoles us some to be able to offer the reduced prices which we have done to effect a quick clearance of our large stock and in this manner show our desire to reciprocate for the long loyalty and patronage extended us by the good people of Atlanta."

CALDWELL'S FUNERAL WILL BE HELD TODAY

Funeral services for John Williamson Caldwell, III., 23, southern tennis champion of 1924, who died early Saturday morning at his home, 747 North Boulevard, will be held at 3 o'clock this afternoon from the Westminster Presbyterian church. Dr. J. Sprole Lyons will officiate and interment will be in West View cemetery in charge of H. M. Patterson & Son. Deacons of the Westminster church will act as pallbearers.

Caldwell died after a week's illness from influenza. He was the son of Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Caldwell, II., and was well known in business circles, being manager of the Atlanta branch of the Equitable Trust company of New York.

In addition to his tennis activities, Mr. Caldwell was prominent socially, taking an active interest in the Atlanta Athletic club, the Piedmont Driving club and the Nine O'clock club. He was a member of Westminster Presbyterian church, where he taught a Sunday school class of high school boys. His father is pastor of the church.

In addition to his parents, Mr. Caldwell is survived by a sister, Miss Mary Palmer Caldwell, and his paternal grandmother, Mrs. J. W. Caldwell, Sr., of New Orleans.

HIGH COURT CLERK RECEIVES RECORDS OF SCOPES CASE

Nashville, Tenn., December 5.—(AP). The records in the Scopes evolution case were received here today by David Landsden, clerk of the supreme court. They were sent by S. E. Cleage, of Knoxville, supreme court clerk of east Tennessee, under agreement to transfer the case to Knoxville for hearing of argument. Attorney General Thompson was not prepared today to say what action the state contemplates.

LONDON WOMEN ADOPT NEW STYLE SAUSAGE MUFFS

London, December 5.—(AP)—Sausage muffs, long and round, have made their appearance in large numbers in the fashionable streets of London. Many of them are made of the same cloth as the costume, and are banded at the ends with fur. They are equipped with pockets which accommodate all the extensive toilet supplies women of fashion must carry to keep their make-up in order.

Farmer Slays Neighbor Boy

:: AGED FATHER THEN CALLS SHERIFF ::

To Avenge Daughter's Honor

Fairfield, Iowa, December 5.—Out on a snowbound Iowa farm today, an aged father avenged the honor of his 14-year-old daughter by slaying the neighbor boy she had named as her betrayer.

The shooting and the incidents that followed it make a story as dramatic and colorful as any ever written in the records of early settlers of the frozen north.

With his two daughters, Edna, 14, and Beulah, 17, old Louis Bruey lived quietly and prosperously on his little Iowa farm in this county. The land adjoining his was held by the McNeese family, which numbered among its members a fair-haired boy named Sam.

For a farmer boy, Sam was a dashing type. His temperament was more like that of the French, from which the Brueys had sprung, than the quiet, thrifty Scotch who were his own relatives.

Sam and Bruey's little daughter, Edna, were playmates almost from the time they could walk. When Sam was not visiting at Edna's house, Edna was visiting at Sam's.

In time, they became more conscious of themselves and of their relations to each other—they became lovers. But their parents took too much for granted, for Edna and Sam were drifting into dangerous currents where there were whirlpools and hazardous eddies.

This morning Edna confessed to her father that she was soon to become a mother. Sam, she told him, would be her baby's father.

The 60-year-old father bristled at these words. Back into his makeup surged the high temper that had made it necessary for his ancestors to leave France more than a generation ago. Bruey's daughters were his dearest possessions, about his only ones, in fact, save the little farm.

Old Louis controlled himself long enough to step to the telephone and call up Sam McNeese. In a pleasant voice, he asked Sam to come over. "Something new to show you," the old man said.

It had been snowing in Iowa for nearly 10 hours. The fields were white and the highways choked by high drifts. But Sam made his way to Edna's house.

When McNeese entered the front door and walked into the parlor, old Bruey told him what Edna had confessed and asked him if he was sorry for what he had done. Then, without waiting for Sam to answer, Bruey brought his gun out from behind his back and shot the young man through the heart. Edna started forward as if to fall upon her lover, but the old man brushed her back. He told his daughters to go up stairs and wait while he called the sheriff.

"I have just killed a young man who has wronged my daughter," Bruey told Sheriff C. D. Butcher over the telephone. "The snow is so deep that I can't come in and give myself up. Can you come out?"

Butcher said he would try. He hired a team and wagon and drove out to the Bruey farm, where the old man sat waiting. He showed the sheriff and his deputies into the parlor where young McNeese's body lay where it had fallen and told the story of the shooting.

Bruey was brought to jail here this evening to be held pending the action of the county prosecutor, who will examine him Sunday.

SOUTHERN GROTTO ASSOCIATION FORMED

The Southeastern Grotto association was organized Saturday at an executive session of 20 monarchs gathered from all parts of the southeast at the Ansley hotel. Officers were named and the date and place for the first annual convention selected.

J. C. Puckett, of Birmingham, Ala., was named president of the new organization. Other officers were: Dr. T. W. Hughes, of Atlanta, vice president; Guy Smithson, of Knoxville, Tenn., secretary and treasurer. Members of the executive committee are: I. J. Gauthier, of New Orleans; J. W. Elmore, of Knoxville, Tenn.; Lamar R. Jones, of Chattanooga, Tenn., and Howard Haire, of Atlanta.

New Orleans was selected as the place for the first annual convention, which will be held next February.

Following the business sessions in the morning, delegates were carried on a sight-seeing trip to Stone Mountain. They again gathered Saturday night for dinner in the Ansley rathskeller.

TWO ARE INJURED IN AUTO ACCIDENTS

Mrs. Ira McEachen, 25, of 5 Bassoe street was give treatment at Grady hospital Saturday for a deep laceration on the chin, which she said was received in an automobile accident. She would give no details of the accident and police had no report of it.

F. E. Hamilton, of 73 East Ashland street was slightly bruised about the hips and legs Saturday afternoon when he was struck by an automobile driven by an unidentified young woman at Euclid and Edgewood avenues. The driver is said to have stopped her car and offered assistance to the victim but in the excitement that followed the accident her name was not learned.

Hamilton was taken to the office of Dr. J. R. Fuller in the Atlanta Trust company building and given treatment. Dr. Fuller called patrolman L. L. Stone and reported the accident.

ST. PAUL'S CHURCH TO INSTALL BOARD OF STEWARDS TODAY

Public installation of 66 newly-elected stewards at St. Paul's Methodist church will be held this morning. At a meeting of the new board Dr. W. L. Ballenger was reelected chairman.

Reports from various committees show that considerable increase was made this year collecting funds, $35,000 being raised for all purposes. It was announced at the meeting that the new Sunday school annex will be ready for use the first of next year.

In addition to Dr. Ballenger, other officers are: D. L. Shannon, vice chairman; J. C. Little, treasurer; J. S. Tilley, assistant treasurer; Arthur Styron, secretary, and J. T. Shields, recording secretary. Miss Lena Mae Jones was elected church secretary for the year and Mrs. Annie Mae Norton and Hugh Timmons were named organist and choir director, respectively.

PROGRESSIVES VOTE AGAINST HOLDING NATIONAL PARLEY

Cleveland, December 5.—(AP)—Members of the progressive party, at a regional conference here today, voted against holding a national convention of the party at an early date.

The decision was reached after several speakers had declared that a convention within the next few weeks would call forth representatives from only a small portion of the country.

Mercier C. Johnson, Baltimore, Md., national vice president, led the speakers in holding to this view.

Thorough organization of the party in various states will be entered upon as the more important part of next year's procedure, officials said.

'HOLLOMON HIGHWAY' PROPOSED BY ROMAN

Rome, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—At a joint meeting of Rome and Calhoun good roads boosters at a luncheon of the Calhoun Civitan club Friday, Colonel John Graham, prominent banker and civic leader of Rome, declared that the proposed Rome-Asheville highway should be named and dedicated the "Hollomon highway," in honor of James A. Hollomon, the associate editor of The Atlanta Constitution.

"No man in Georgia has done so much and such effective work for highway development throughout all of north Georgia as Mr. Hollomon," said the speaker, "and by all means this great highway from the metropolis of northwest Georgia to the metropolis of western North Carolina should bear his name as a testimonial of his worth and services."

The suggestion met with tremendous applause, and there is little doubt but that the proposed Rome-Asheville highway will take the official designation of "Hollomon highway."

Lord Campbell Called The Turn

"So essential did I consider an index to be in every book that I proposed to bring a bill into parliament to deprive an author who publishes a book without an index of the privilege of copyright, and, moreover, to subject him, for his offense, to a pecuniary penalty."

So wrote Lord Campbell, in 1857, in his preface to the "Lives of the Chief Justices."

The prejudice in favor of indexes, which he evidenced, is not a bit greater than ours.

The Constitution also appreciates the vast reader-convenience they bring. Our ideas on this subject concur exactly with those of Lord Campbell.

That's why we use painstaking care in arranging the A-B-C Classified Ads in perfect catalogue form with alphabetical index terms—so that you can instantly find what you want—and so that you will not say in exasperation that we deserve a "pecuniary penalty!"

BORROWING

$10 TO $300

ON FURNITURE AND PIANOS

FOR EMERGENCIES

MY OWN VIEWS ON THE SUBJECT

IF I needed $10 to $300 in an emergency, I —would NOT want to borrow it from a friend or employer.
—would NOT want to borrow it from a relative.
—would NOT want to ask any one to indorse for me.
—would NOT want to be under obligations to any one.

I WOULD want to borrow from some one who made a business of lending money.

I WOULD be willing to pay a reasonable amount for the use of the money I borrowed.

I WOULD NOT go to the first money-lending concern that I came to.

I WOULD consider ONLY a firm that was long established in my community.

THE CITIZENS LOAN CO., licensed by and bonded to the state, and under the supervision of the banking department, is well and favorably known in this community, a reliable firm that makes a business of lending money at a low, lawful rate, and has a genuine desire to be helpful.

SHOULD you need money, now or at any time, do not fail to call on us.

Abounding Health

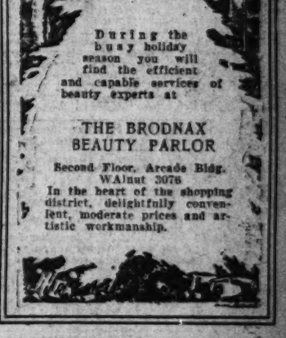

Here we offer you a "Perpetual Health Spring for Your Home," which is simply a Radium Ore Lined Jar, containing the health-giving qualities of radio-active water. The water is drawn from the faucet in your home, and the jar itself gives to it the qualities which enable the system to eliminate poisons.

No medicines involved. The qualities of the jar impart to the water the same health elements as those at famous health centers — Hot Springs, Ark., Baden, Germany, and Vichy, France.

J. R. NUTTING & CO.

A COUNTRY HOME IN THE CITY

THERE is an individual style about this house; it shows the results of an architect's planning. The material is a hollow tile and stucco, with tile roof; the house is fireproof and has a singularly pleasing exterior. The setting is one of the selected building sites in Druid Hills; it is not a corner lot, but is at the junction of two prominent roads, affording an unusual and sweeping view; frontage is 475 feet.

A FEATURE of the interior of the house is the extra large living room, a Moorish style, with stairway going up on both sides to a balcony above; there are four bedrooms and three baths and a wonderful sleeping porch.

THE grounds afford plenty of room for a lawn and shrubbery, and massive original trees are there; these are things that no amount of money can buy and only nature can produce. Those who have planned and built a fine home after selecting a lot know how much money can go into a place; they know what the adding machine discloses after all the bills have come in. We believe that it would cost $75,000 to buy a lot as good as this one and build a house of the same type. Our price, $39,000.

Shaw Paints Vivid Picture

:: BIRTH CONTROL, EIGHT HOURS OF LEISURE SEEN ::

Of Life in Socialist State

BY CHARLES M. M'CANN,
United News Staff Correspondent.

London, December 5.—A vivid picture of life in the socialist state, for which millions of people in Great Britain and other countries are working, has been painted by George Bernard Shaw.

Birth control, a new up-to-date religion, absolute equality of income for everyone, some means whereby a wife can leave her husband without turning in her meal ticket, and eight hours a day of leisure aside from work, meals, sleep, dressing, and drinking, are foreseen by Shaw as necessary features of a socialistic state. His views were given in a lecture here.

First, Shaw said, it must be assumed that by stopping waste, socialism would bring a four-hour working day.

"I will take it that the standard day will mean four hours' work, eight hours sleep, and, say, four hours for drinking, dressing, undressing and a little sleep," he argued. "Therefore, we may look forward to eight hours of leisure.

"Under socialism, everyone must have the same income. This is fundamental; the moment that is departed from socialism would go to pieces.

"I know of two very happy marriages, but in neither case was it a first attempt. Between the happy marriages and the downright unhappy ones, there are a large number of unions in which people rub along together because they have to. Under socialism, a woman would not experience the slightest pecuniary embarrassment in leaving her husband. The social pressure which keeps so many households together being completely relaxed, a great many households would break up.

"It is difficult to conceive a socialist state that would not control birth. Birth control is a necessity of the present moment, and if we want to get rid of that immediate necessity, we must bring about socialism.

"With regard to the Bible, socialism would say, 'This literature is very interesting from an artistic point of view. But we are not going to allow any person to put the Bible forward either as a statement of fact in every particular or as a guide to conduct.' Socialism will say, 'We will have our own religion, a religion that belongs to our own times, and teaches us the morality of our own times.'

"Parts of what is at present called religion have become so intolerable that people are unable to conceive freedom without getting rid of a great deal of it."

SEVEN RESCUED FROM NEAR DEATH IN SNOWSTORM

Denver, Colo., December 5.—(AP)—Trapped yesterday in a blinding snow storm on the summit of Bethroud passage, about 60 miles west of Denver, with the mercury below zero, Dennis Tilden, a stage driver operating between Denver and Steamboat Springs, and his six passengers, among them two women, were rescued today, after spending the night in a board shack.

The rescue party arrived with a team and sled. The horses were able to drag the automobile stage over the summit of the pass and down to Empire, Colo., and safety.

Frantic efforts by Tilden and four passengers had enabled the party to proceed but 11 miles through the great snow drifts from morning until late last night while the women fought to escape freezing. They were Mrs. Fred McMahon and her aged mother, Mrs. Anna Markel, of Denver. Mrs. Markel is an invalid and is in a serious condition following the exposure.

Beck Gives $5,000 To Clear

: GIFT MAKES POSSIBLE NEW BUILDING PROGRAM :

Old Ladies' Home of Debts

Lewis H. Beck, one of the best-known business men and philanthropists in the south, recently presented a check for $5,000 to the Atlanta Old Ladies' home, it became known Saturday.

The Atlanta Old Ladies' home, established 22 years ago, is regarded as one of the most worthy charities in the entire city. Despite this fact, it has been a struggle for years to keep it going as it should and although everything trustees and officials could do was done, the institution got into debt.

Some time ago the necessity arose for paying of every debt the institution owed. The check given by Mr. Beck will wipe out every vestige of indebtedness of the institution.

$90,000 Is Promised.

There is a man in Atlanta who, for sufficient reasons, cannot allow his name to be used, has promised to complete, at a cost of $60,000, the new home which is under way for the old women. This offer was made with the proviso that every debt of the institution must be paid in full not later than December 20. It is this condition that Mr. Beck's check makes possible of fulfilment.

When the new building is completed it will provide a home for at least 150 old women and there are 500 now waiting for admission on the applicants' list.

The check for $5,000 was handed Beaumont Davison, president of the board of trustees of the home, and Joseph McCord, secretary-treasurer, last week. Now, Mr. McCord asks that everyone who has any claim, no matter how old or how small, against the home apply for payment at his office, 416 Candler building, before December 20. All claims that prove correct will be paid in full and a receipt taken.

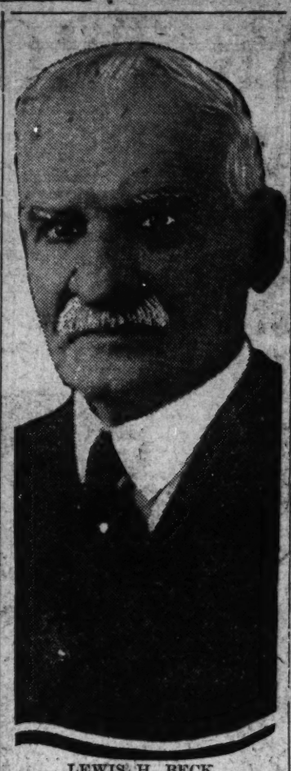

Then, when the last debt is paid, the unnamed giver will send his workmen to the new home and as fast as the work can be done, it will be completed. About $40,000 already has been expended on the home and with the additional work to be done, it will be one of the most perfect institutions of its kind in the country. It will be given, free of all incumbrance, to the city of Atlanta and to the old ladies' home in perpetuity.

Was Struggling Youth.

In explaining why he made his donation, Mr. Beck recalled his own boyhood days. The story he told Mr. Davison and Mr. McCord was of a boy born in a simple cabin in rural Georgia, living his early life in a constant struggle against poverty.

The boy's mother, however, a noble woman, had a prophetic vision of the future, and one day she told her young son, Lewis, that she knew some day he would have wealth, more money than he would know how to easily spend. And she prayed then that he might be given the ability to use his money wisely and well. The boy on that occasion told his mother that if he ever became rich, he would give of his money to establish a home for old women.

Today that promise is redeemed. Lewis H. Beck has given his money, and by so doing, has made possible the building of a great home for old women which shall be open to all worthy persons free of all debt and without incumbrance of any kind.

GEORGIA—FULTON COUNTY.
TO THE SUPERIOR COURT OF SAID COUNTY:

The petition of A. Lapping, E. Lapping and H. Lapping, all of said state and county, respectfully shows:

1. That petitioners, their associates, successors and assigns, desire to become incorporated for the full period of twenty years, with the right of renewal at the expiration of that time, under the name and style of

THE LAPPING COMPANY.

2. The principal office and place of business of said corporation shall be in the city of Atlanta, Fulton county, Georgia, but petitioners desire the privilege of establishing such branch offices as may be necessary in the conduct of their business.

3. The capital stock of said corporation shall be the sum of $5,000 to be divided into shares of the par value of $100.00 each, with the privilege of increasing said capital stock from time to time upon an affirmative vote of its outstanding stock to an amount not exceeding $25,000.00, and they desire the right for such corporation to begin business when ten per cent of its capital stock shall have been paid in. Petitioners desire the right to pay for said capital stock in cash or property suitable to the uses of the corporation, the same to be taken at its fair market value, said value to be fixed by said stockholders.

4. The purpose and object of said corporation is pecuniary gain to its stockholders.

5. The particular business to be engaged in by said corporation is that of buying, selling, exchanging, manufacturing and repairing jewelry, jewelry supplies and fixtures; and to do and perform any and all other acts that may aid any of the foregoing purposes or which are necessary in the conduct of said business.

6. Petitioners desire the right to sue and be sued; to plead and be impleaded; to have and use a common seal; to make all necessary by-laws and regulations; to buy, hold, own, lease and sell real estate and personal property; and to execute notes and bonds as evidence of indebtedness incurred or which may be incurred; to borrow money, execute notes, mortgages and loan deeds to secure the same, or execute other forms of liens under existing laws.

7. Petitioners desire for said corporation all rights, powers, privileges and immunities that are usual and incident to like corporations under the laws of the State of Georgia.

Wherefore, petitioners pray to be incorporated under the name and style aforesaid with all the rights, privileges and immunities hereinbefore set forth.

B. L. MILLING,
Attorney for Petitioners.

LASSEN PEAK ACTIVE, BELCHING FORTH SMOKE

Redding, Cal., December 5.—(AP)—Lassen peak, the only active volcano in the continental United States, is again in eruption with a two-day display of smoke after several months of inactivity.

Yesterday morning the peak belched forth a huge column of smoke, which continued for several hours until 2:30 p. m. It was plainly visible from here and attracted the attention of motorists and train tourists.

At sunrise this morning observers reported that the atmosphere around the peak was clear, but an hour later a column of smoke was seen to rise from the crater. It continued in volume, assuming large proportions and lasted for several hours.

The disturbance does not compare with the eruptions of 1914-1915 when the mud and rock flowed down the mountain side. For several years the peak has emitted smoke columns at intervals.

CHARLES DEERING ESTATE AT MIAMI TO GO ON MARKET

Miami, Fla., December 5.—(AP)—Miami real estate has claimed another victim, in the form of a famous showplace in this section. Long a site of interest, the famous 220-acre estate of Charles Deering, aged capitalist, will go on sale December 15 as the city's latest realty project.

The estate in Miami's Buena Vista section, rivalled that of the late James Deering, a brother of the present owner, located at Cocoanut Grove, and for years has been one of the most complete and extensive tropical gardens in this country.

The real estate project calls for the placing of the property, with its 4,000 feet of bay frontage, on the market as a most modern business and residential section.

MACON PASTOR GIVES FAREWELL SERMON

Macon, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—Rev. Osgood F. Cook, pastor of the Vineville Methodist church who has been assigned to Albany, will preach his farewell sermon to his congregation Sunday morning. He will leave here on Thursday for his new pastorate.

Rev. J. N. Peacock, of Albany, comes here on December 13.

During his four years' pastorate here Rev. Mr. Cook has taken an active part in civic affairs. He is a member of the civitan club; is a member of the board of trustees of Wesleyan college and a member of the local board of the Methodist Orphans' home.

BELGIANS TO REDUCE ARMY OF OCCUPATION

Brussels, December 5.—(AP)—The Belgian army of occupation will very soon be reduced from 15,000 to 7,000 men, concurrently with limitation of the occupation zone between Aachen, Esch, Geilenkirchen and Montjoie.

The population seems apathetic over the withdrawal. Larger numbers of young Germans are enlisting in the richswehr in view of the reoccupation of the region by the German army.

Ohio Senator Seeks To Amend Rules of Senate

Washington, December 5.—(AP)—Two amendments to the rules of the senate designed to prevent filibusters, especially in the closing days of a session, have been prepared by Senator Fess, republican, Ohio.

Upon their introduction they will be referred to the rules committee before which several amendments are pending.

Under the first of Mr. Fess' proposed amendments no senator could speak more than twice in the same day on any one question without leave of the senate and during the last six days of a session no senator could speak more than 30 minutes upon any question without obtaining the unanimous consent of the senate.

The second proposal of the Ohio senator is that senators in debate must address themselves to the subject under consideration and that if they fail to do so they may be called to order by either the presiding officer or any individual senator. They then could not proceed without sanction of the senate.

HONORARY DEGREE OF M. D. PRESENTED TO GENERAL ALLEN

Washington, December 5.—(AP)—Major General Henry T. Allen, who commanded the American forces of occupation in Germany, was presented an honorary degree of doctor of medicine by the University of Frankfort at ceremonies today at the German embassy.

The degree, in recognition of the drive conducted by General Allen in this country for relief of German women and children, was conferred by Baron Maltzan, the German ambassador.

BY BEN COTHRAN

With the 1925 prep football season now history, it is time for the announcement of the eleven most outstanding prep football players in Atlanta. As is usually the case each year, there are many men to consider for each position, every-one of whom deserves careful consideration.

At each of the schools at the beginning of this last season, there was a scarcity of material, but hard work on part of the coaches, and brilliant play throughout the season have brought out a number of stars for each position on a football eleven.

We have seen all of the Atlanta schools play, and after much deliberation and consideration of the qualities of each player, the accompanying team was selected.

University is first with the number of players on the team, having come through with three men, two of them linesmen and the other a backfield man. G. M. A., Tech High and Boys' High each placed two men while Marist and Decatur High each had one.

Marist, undefeated, and University, which only lost one game this year, were the two outstanding teams among the preps this year. Marist had more veterans playing on its team than any other team, and developed one back who stands foremost among other teams, Brooks, big back, bore the brunt of the Marist attack and made a good job of it.

U. S. B. Lands Three.

At University, which battled through an eight-game G. I. A. A. schedule, and lost only to Riverside, three men sand out as the best in their respective positions.

Tech High, with most of the men of last year's 1924 Southern championship eleven gone, fought through a long, hard schedule to lose finally to Boys' High for the first time in seven years.

The other schools were in the same boat with Tech High but as was said above, outstanding men have appeared, and it now becomes the duty of this correspondent to tell why certain men were picked above others.

Sam Colvin, former all-state end in Virginia, was picked for his ability to stop most plays coming around his end, and his speed in getting down under punts. In the Tech High-Boys' High game, it was he who recovered the Smithie fumble that gave Boys' High its chance to score. Colvin was picked above such men as Payne, of Tech High, and Hamm, of University.

Pugh Outstanding.

At left end we placed Pugh, of G. M. A. Pugh was the G. M. A. player who scored the touchdown which enabled the Cadets to win from Boys' High. He has been one of the outstanding defensive players among the prep teams this year, and was picked from such men as McLeskey and Davenport, of University.

Although playing at end throughout the year, Captain Red McLeskey, of Boys' High, was placed at tackle. He is a fine defensive player, and can break through the line in time to stop plays before they have reached the line of scrimmage. He was picked from men as O'Bear, of Tech High, and Williams, of Marist.

To Captain Frank Spear, of University, goes a tackle position without any argument. It was very seldom that a play went over his side of the line, and like McLeskey, is a sure, hard tackler.

Becky Speaks, stocky little guard at University has been a hard worker throughout the season, and has been responsible for many of the gains by U. S. B. backs through the line. Maddox, of Tech High, and a former junior high player, was given the other guard position. He, like Speaks, is a hard working lineman and very fast at coming out to form interference. This pair was selected from men like Turner, of Boys' High, and Timmons, of U. S. B.

Rainey Best Center.

"Fats" Rainey, of G. M. A., is one of the best all-around centers that has been seen in Atlanta this season. He is calm and as steady as a rock, not making a single bad pass throughout the year. On defense he is a tower of strength, and played havoc with opposing backs in the G. M. A.-Tech High game. He is also a good kicker, doing the punting for the Cadets this season.

When it came to picking an all-prep backfield, it was the cause of much deliberation. There was a scarcity of good quarterbacks, and a wealth of halfbacks and fullbacks.

To Dickie Butler, of University, is given quarterback, as he is without a doubt the best in the city. He has shown good field generalship throughout the season. He can run, pass or punt equally as well and performed at all of these this year.

Lanier Loses Prep Title To Riverside Cadets, 21-13

BY TAYLOR F. GLENN.

Macon, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—A heavier and more seasoned eleven from Riverside Military academy, of Gainesville, Ga., invaded Centennial stadium here this afternoon and defeated the Poets of Lanier High, 21 to 13, to capture the G. I. A. A. football championship for 1925. The game was seen by 5,000 people.

The north Georgia Cadets sent a team on the field that outweighed the local eleven 15 pounds or more to the man, and after about the middle of the second quarter, were able to keep the play in enemy territory a major portion of the time.

The Poets unleashed an attack in the first quarter that came near wrecking the Cadet artillery but found itself humbled before it could make much progress. Twice in the first few minutes the Lanier eleven got within striking distance of the Riverside goal, once on the six-inch line, but a fumble at one time and the stubbornness of the invaders held them back both times.

Cadets Pile Up Lead.

After that, and until well in the third quarter, the Poets were strictly on the defensive, while the Cadets were rolling up three touchdowns to establish a margin that a belated Poet attack was not to overcome.

Mickey and Vernon Smith, playing a brilliant defensive game, threw Cadet backs for losses or no gains time and again, but the persistent and determined drive of Bethea, Duckwall and Wright would not be stopped.

Lanier "solved" Riddle early in the game, and it was only on three or four occasions that the star Riverside halfback, probably one of the best in the south, was able to get away for anything that resembled a gain.

Poets Fail Twice.

After Lanier had failed twice to take the ball over for a touchdown in the first quarter, Riverside took advantage of the breaks to turn Lanier's misfortune into a six counter.

Duckwall, who hadn't been able to get away for more than 10 or 15 yards' gain until this time, took the ball toward the close of the first period to chase down the field for 60 yards and a touchdown. Riddle kicked for the extra point, to place Lanier at the little end of a 7-to-0 score.

Riverside's second touchdown came early in the second period, after Riddle, Duckwall and Wright had worked the ball down the field from the Lanier 40-yard line on a series of line bucks, end runs and forward passes. On the last play, Riddle took the ball and went off right tackle for nine yards to cross the Poets' goal line, and he also dropkicked for the extra point, to make the score 14 to 0.

Poets Score Finally.

Lanier edged in a touchdown before the Cadets could score again, marching the ball down the field in the third quarter with a suddenness that completely overwhelmed the Cadets' defense.

Burnett recovered Duckwall's fumble on his 49-yard line. Linwood Mallard failed to gain, but sneaked through center on the next attempt for 15 yards. Corbin followed with an end run that netted 12 yards and put the ball on Riverside's 26-yard line.

Corbin passed to Vernor Smith for 10 yards and Corbin followed with an off tackle spurt that netted three yards. Mallard got five yards through guard and Corbin followed with three more to make it first down. Mallard got two more and it was Lanier's ball on Riverside's three-yard line. Captain Brewer Corbin got one yard over center, and Garrett followed with another. Corbin knocked off the yards needed for the touchdown. Smith kicked for the extra point. The score was 14 to 7.

Riverside's third and final touchdown followed a series of short and long end runs which placed the ball on Lanier's six-yard line, and from that point Riddle took it over for the counter. Riddle drop-kicked for the extra point.

Lanier's final score came early in the fourth quarter. Knickerbocker kicked off to Mickey Heard, who stopped the ball in his own 44-yard line. Corbin failed to gain, but went around end on the next attempt for nine yards. Mallard went over for two yards and first down, and then Corbin passed to Smith for 20 yards, the lanky Lanier end racing down the field for 20 yards to place the ball over the goal line. He failed to kick for the extra point, and the score ended 21-13.

Lanier had fought gamely, but the powerful driving jolts of the Cadets had been too much for them to stop.

FINE HORSES SHIPPED TO SALE

Lexington, Ky., December 5.—(AP)—More than 200 thoroughbred trotting horses valued at $250,000 left here yesterday on a special train of nine cars for New York where on Tuesday they will be sold at auction.

Seventy-one of the trotters belonged to the Walnut Hall stock farm.

C. W. Leonard, of Fayette county, made 45 of the shipments, among them being Chester Peter, famous stallion for which Mr. Leonard a few years ago refused $40,000.

SMITHIES TIE MIAMI HIGH

Miami, Fla., December 5.—(Special.)—The Smithies of Tech High school, Atlanta, fought a scoreless battle with Miami High school Saturday afternoon at the new stadium at Coral Gables. Handicapped by the warmth of the afternoon and the mud on the field, the Smithies were sluggish in the first quarter of play, and their territory was repeatedly invaded by the Stingarees.

It was not until the last half that the Smithies showed any remarkable signs of fight, and then plunged the Floridians' line for big gains. It was impossible for the Smithies to put over their aerial attack on the Stingarees, as the ball was loggy and wet.

The Smithies were outclassed and only their fighting spirit kept them from suffering at the hands of defeat.

Arriving at a late hour Friday night the Smithies were not in shape to meet the Stingarees who have not had a road trip for more than a week. The Smithies, however, will be afforded an opportunity to prepare themselves during the next two days for the second tilt with the Miami High school, which will be played Monday afternoon at Dallas park.

As the game ended the Atlanta boys had found their stride, and were plunging their way toward the Stingaree goal.

Aerial attack after aerial attack was broken up by the Floridians. Cross bucks and other trick backfield formations tried by the Atlanta team failed as the ball was fumbled.

MACON GETS G.I.A.A. TOURNEY

Macon, Ga., December 5.—(AP)—The board of directors of the G. I. A. A. at a meeting here tonight awarded the annual basketball tournament to Macon. It will be held here February 24, 25, 26 and 27 in the city auditorium. Sixteen teams will compete.

Commercial High, of Atlanta, and Darlington acamedy, of Rome, were dropped from the association, but in their places Moultrie High and Sixth District Aggies, of Barnesville, were added.

The directors formally awarded the football championship to Riverside Military academy.

WEST LOSES IRISH CLASSIC

Chicago, December 5.—(AP)—One of the classics of the middlewest football season, the annual Thanksgiving day battle between Notre Dame and Nebraska, was lost in the matching of gridiron dates at the schedule meeting of western conference and other football coaches here today. After long effort, the two teams agreed to play at Lincoln on Novrember 6, two weeks earlier than usual. Nebraska accepted an invitation to play a return game with the University of Washington at Seattle on Thanksgiving day.

Dartmouth Gets Four Men On Composite All-Eastern

New York, December 5.—(AP)—Dartmouth, as the east's outstanding eleven during the 1925 season, carried off the bulk of honors in the all-eastern teams compiled by the Associated Press from the opinions of 10 prominent coaches along the Atlantic seaboard.

In this consensus Dartmouth places four stars on the first team, twice as many as any rival college, while Andy (Swede) Oberlander, backfield ace of the Big Green forces, has the distinction of being the only unanimous choice of the coaches.

Oberlander's teammates on the mythical first team, are Captain Parker at tackle, Mike Tully at end and Carl Diehl at guard, while Henry Sage gains a place at end on the second team, giving Dartmouth five representatives altogether out of 22 men picked.

Tryon Next to Oberlander.

Eddie Tryon, Colgate captain and backfield ace, with eight votes, and Ed McMillan, Princeton captain and center, with seven ballots, ranked next to Oberlander in popularity. Jake Slagle, Princeton star, received votes for every position in the backfield but was favored most in the fullback position.

One of the most significant features of the poll was the unanimity among the coaches in their opinions on the backfield men. Only sixteen backs altogether received votes as evidence of the outstanding caliber of ball carriers.

Syracuse and Princeton each with two players, were the only colleges besides Dartmouth to place more than one man on the first team.

How Teams Line Up.

In the second eleven, Pennsylvania, Columbia and LaFayette were the only teams placing more than one man, tions in several positions bringing in a larger representation. The make-up of the first and second elevens follows:

First Team—Ends, Tully, Dartmouth; Hansen, Syracuse; tackles, Chase, Pittsburgh; Parker, Dartmouth; guards, Diehl, Dartmouth; Sturhahn, Yale; center, Mc-Millan, Princeton; quarterback, Foley, Syracuse; halfbacks, Oberlander, Dartmouth; Tryon, Colgate; fullback, Slagle, Princeton.

Second Team—Ends, Sage, Dartmouth; Thayer, Pennsylvania; tackles, Joss, Yale; Sprague, Army, and Wiburg, Columbia (tied); guards, Carey, Cornell; Skubin, N. Y. U.; Mahan, West Virginia, and Cothran, LaFayette (all tied); center, Robinson, Pennsylvania; quarterback, Pease, Columbia; halfbacks, Keefer, Brown; Kirkleski, LaFayette; fullbacks, Ames, Washington and Jefferson, and Kruez, Pennsylvania (tied).

Sports Essential to Life In College, Sanford Says

Athens, Ga., December 5.—(By the Associated Press.)—There are five reasons why intercollegiate athletics are essential to the proper college life of today, Dr. S. V. Sanford, president of the Southern conference, told representatives of that organization during his impromptu address, in which he defended the principle of college sports and replied to critics of such sports.

The five reasons as enumerated by Dr. Sanford were as follows:

"1—Athletic contests improve the physical condition of the students. In the early days of athletic sports, students trained for the season only, but now they train for all time. Students have been taught true lessons of loyalty that demands constant training in season and out of season.

"2—Athletic games improve the morale and manners of the students and the public. These contests teach men how to make sacrifices, how to command, how to obey; they teach them to be temperate in all things; to know the value of team-work, to be energetic, to be courteous and fair under all circumstances. They give the public its finest lessons in clean sportsmanship for the manners of a people are made on the grounds where the games are played. The respect shown for the sportsman's code is as refreshing an example of the progress of the race as was the gentleman's code exemplified by the knights in the age of chivalry.

"3—Athletic games increase the loyalty of the students to the college. I think our most loyal alumni are those who have represented the college on the athletic field. They are the men who have been willing to give something while in college. In the last session of the Georgia legislature there were 55 alumni of the university. They were all loyal. It cannot be denied that the most self-sacrificing, the most aggressive were the athletes . . . those who had taken part in competitive contests.

"4—They serve to create and foster an institutional solidarity afforded in like degree by no other agency. To some this may seem like a humiliating admission, but it is certainly a fact that athletics have in many institutions constituted practically the only band for common interest. How large an auditorium is needed to care for the alumni who return at the annual alumni reunion at commencement, but where is the stadium that can accommodate the alumni who return at 'home-coming'—the annual football game?

"5—They afford a laboratory training for the development of character such as is not afforded elsewhere in the life of the undergraduate."

Michigan Meets Minnesota Twice in '26

Chicago, December 5.—(By the Associated Press.)—A momentous deadlock in the football schedule meeting of athletic directors of the western conference was broken tonight when Michigan agreed to play Minnesota twice in the 1926 football season, in order to insure the required four conference games of Minnesota.

Such a return game arrangement has never before been experienced in the Big Ten. With the ice broken after an all-day debate, the directors quickly got down to matching dates for next fall's football games.

The first game will be played at Ann Arbor, October 16, and the second one at Minneapolis, November 20.

DISTANCE RACE IS WON BY GEORGIA

Birmingham, Ala., December 5.—(AP)—The University of Georgia won the bulk of all honors in the Birmingham Athletic club annual invitation road race here today. The Georgians captured the general meet trophy, the Southern conference cup and the Southeastern Amateur Athletic union title. Mississippi A. and M. won second place in the general meet and Southern conference dash. Mississippi college took the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic association trophy over Birmingham-Southern.

Georgia Tech won the fourth place honors and one fifth place, while Auburn captured two third places and one fourth place.

Individual honors were won by Luney Smith, Alabama, who for the second successive year won the three-mile even in 16:09 1-5. W. Tate, Georgia, was second, and Walter Morrow and Cliff Morrow, of Auburn, were fourth and fifth.

GEORGIA TRACK BILL ANNOUNCED

Athens, Ga., December 5.—(AP)—University of Georgia athletic authorities tonight announced the following track schedule for 1926: April 10, Tech relays at Atlanta; April 17, Clemson at Athens; April 24, open; May 1, Auburn at Auburn; May 8, Tech at Athens; May 15, conference meet with North Carolina at Chapel Hill; May 22, A. A. U. meet at Birmingham.

JOE CANTILLON TO MANAGE L.R.

Little Rock, Ark., December 5.—(AP)—Joe Cantillon, former manager and owner of the Minneapolis team of the American association, has signed a two-year contract to manage the Little Rock Travelers of the Southern association, it was announced here late today by Colonel R. C. Allen, president of the local club.

Drastic Rule Effective Next Year

Athens, Ga., December 5.—(By the Associated Press.)—Southern conference delegates started home tonight after closing what leaders termed one of the most memorable annual sessions in the four years of conference history. Complete agreement was reached among representatives of the far-flung organization on almost every question considered. Argumentative skirmises occurred occasionally upon various proposals for changes in the constitution and by-laws of the conference, but differences were quickly ironed out and the meeting wound up its affairs tonight with all delegates satisfied that southern collegiate athletics have been placed on a firmer foundation than ever before.

Taking a step in advance of many other conferences, the southerners today went on record as being unalterably opposed to invasion of professionalism into the collegiate football field. Leaders stated that action along this line will take the form of amendments to the by-laws when the next annual conference meets.

Bars Pros From Coaching.

Not only will professional athletes be ostracised from participating in college football, but no college football player who afterwards engages in a professional football game will be allowed to officiate at any football game in which a conference institution is represented and no member of the conference will employ as a member of its coaching staff a man who has engaged in professional football games.

After unanimously voting for these rules, the conference instructed its executive committee to draw up by-laws incorporating the sense of their action and these will be adopted at the next annual meeting. Dr. W. D. Crenshaw, of Georgia Tech, was the author of the resolutions aimed at professional football players. The conference today devoted considerable time to discussion of a new set of athletic regulations adopted by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools at its meeting in Charleston, S. C. These regulations restrict football practice to two hours, limit to five the days an athlete may be absent from classes on account of intercollegiate contests and specify that freshmen teams may play only one game away from the home campus each season.

Other Features Discussed.

The association's rules will apply to all but four members of the southern conference, to all members of the S. I. A. A. that hold membership in the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools and to a number of junior colleges and high schools.

The conference went on record as opposed to the association rule limiting freshmen football teams to one game on the home campus.

Boxing, wrestling, indoor and outdoor track games and other features of collegiate athletics were discussed by the conference, which reiterated its policy of wise regulation so that athletics would be continued in its proper place among college activities on the one hand and prevented from drifting into professionalism on the other.

Prior to today's session rumors had been more or less widespread to the general effect that there was a probability the conference might deem it advisable to create territorial divisions or possibly form a "Big Ten" of southern college athletics. These rumors were dissipated, however, when adjournment found the subject unrecognized among the matters discussed, and the far-flung area of the conference remained intact.

In connection with the disagreement between the Southern conference and Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools in matters pertaining to legislation of the latter organization, it was explained by Dean W. D. Hooper, of the University of Georgia, retiring president of the academic body, that the association had adopted the new and straight freshman regulations in order to further the academic standards of its membership.

Too Many Theories.

At this Coach Bocock, of the University of South Carolina, aimed a vigorous criticism.

"I am not a professor," Bocock said, taking the floor. "I am a coach. I teach athletics. You gentlemen (referring to members of the association) are teachers of academic things and use too much theory. I think it high time that you realize this—that the evil you are trying to correct is not as great as you have theorized it to be. You are using the wrong methods to correct this evil."

The South Carolina coach termed the association's action as being a phase of "the constant conflict between theorists and practical men."

The regulations adopted by the association at Charleston included: That freshman football teams be allowed to play not more than one game away from home during a season; that football practice shall not consume more than two hours a day of any student's time; that a student shall not be allowed to "take up" more than one branch of athletics during a year; that a student be allowed only five days absence from classes during each session.

The conference considered the association's ruling that a college athlete could not engage in more than one branch of athletics during a season as particularly severe—the most drastic, some representatives declared, since the ascetic one year law was adopted. The effect such a ruling would have on some college athletics, these critics observed, would be devastating, as, for instance, Vanderbilt's basketball team, which is partially made up of football players. Vandy athletes declare if such a regulation stood their quintet would be "shot to pieces."

Wade Is Silent.

Before adjournment it was announced through a resolution adopted by the conference that in voting last night to allow the University of Alabama to play a Pacific coast team at Pasadena on New Year's day, its by-laws had not been amended, but rather had only been "suspended." No indication was forthcoming late Saturday from Coach Wade, of Alabama, as to his decision regarding the possibility of such a contest. At Tuscaloosa, it was announced the matter was entirely in Wade's discretion.

No new members were elected by the conference, although Furman and

Alabama Bills Vanderbilt To Strengthen Schedule

Nine Strong Opponents Signed

BY BOB MATHERNE

University, Ala., December 5.—(Special.)—Eight members of the Southern conference and one member of the S. I. A. A. will be played on the gridiron in 1926 by the Crimson Tide of Alabama, twice conference champions, it was announced here today by Wallace Wade, athletic director.

All conference teams played this year will be played again in 1926, while the extra one is Vanderbilt. Vanderbilt takes the place of Birmingham-Southern on Alabama's schedule, and is to be played the second game of the season in Nashville. Union University of Tennessee, who has furnished the opposition for the past three years in the initial game, has been dropped and Millsaps college has been substituted.

All in all, it is a heavy menu for the Crimsons. No intersectional tilt is on the bill merely because the Crimsons could not accept any of the numerous offers made to them. No northern team offered them an early date and it was impossible for the Crimsons to accept a date late in October or November. But many offers were made to have Alabama perform in the north, and one came from the far west. You just ought to see the stack of telegrams filed away in Coach Wade's desk.

Practically every leading southern team of this year with the exception of Tulane, North Carolina and Washington and Lee is listed on the schedule, and it is understood that North Carolina came near being there. The Crimsons take on Vanderbilt at quite a hazardous time, but it could not be helped. This game is to be played under a home-and-home agreement which will bring the Commodores to Birmingham in 1927.

Alabam will play two games at Tuscaloosa, three in Birmingham, one in Nashville, one in Atlanta, one in Montgomery and one in either Meridian or Starksville, Miss. The place of the latter game has not been decided, although it is to be played at one of the two places.

Opening against Millsaps on the campus, the Crimsons will be forced to round into condition early for the Vanderbilt eleven which is to be played in Nashville on October 2. After Vanderbilt there is no looking back, the Crimsons are just in for it.

Sewanee follows Vanderbilt at Birmingham. In other words, Sewanee will have the Crimsons rather on the recline if there will be any when they meet and the oracle might bellow forth again about a Sewanee victory. Anyway, the second game favors Sewanee. Then comes the Mississippi Aggies in either Meridian or Starksville.

Following the Aggie clash, Alabama plays at Tech Flats against the Tornado and returns for home-coming day against Louisiana State. After L. S. U., the Crimsons tackle Kentucky in Birmingham, followed by Florida in Montgomery, and Georgia on Thanksgiving day in Birmingham.

It may look right easy but there's lots of doubtful games in that list. Remember that Hubert, Mack Brown, Buckler, Gillis, Hudson, Camp and Jones will be missing!

Here it is :

September 24—Millsaps on campus.
October 2—Vanderbilt at Nashville.
October 9—Sewanee at Birmingham.
October 16—Mississippi A. and M., place undecided.
October 23—Georgia Tech at Atlanta.
October 30—L. S. U. on campus.
November 6—Kentucky in Birmingham.
November 13—Florida in Montgomery.
Thanksgiving—Georgia in Birmingham.

19 EPWORTH TEAMS READY

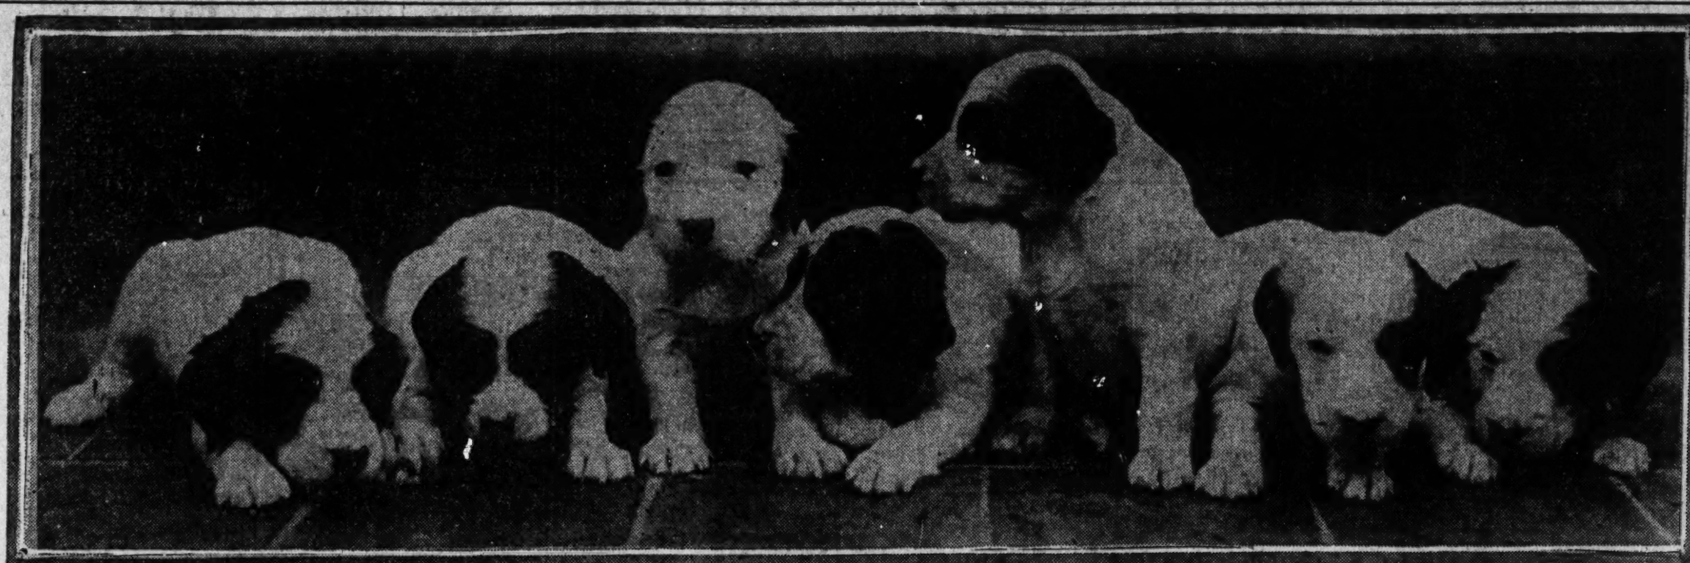

The different basketball teams in the Epworth League Athletic association are working hard getting into shape for the opening of the 1925-26 season which will occur December 14. All of the games will be played on the basketball court of the Wesley Memorial church.

Park Street Methodist Epworthers have become very enthusiastic over basketball. Two weeks ago they entered a boys' and a girls' team, and this week they have entered another boys' team.

Entrance of the second boys' team for the Park Street church gives the league 19 teams to date, and the officials are expecting several other teams next week. They are sure of having 20 teams start. These teams will be divided into three other boys' leagues and one girls' league. This will give 240 boys and girls a chance at the indoor game.

As things stand now the league will have to play games on Monday, Friday, and possibly Thursday evenings. There will be four games each night.

CHAPTER 3.

THE PLAYERS all dressed in a large banquet room. When I entered I called them together and told them:

"My father saw me play for the first time today and he's tickled about our winning. He wants to buy all a drink. Now, my father is a temperance worker. He doesn't suspect that any of you ever took a drink in your lives. I have been telling him what a lot of fine fellows you are, so when you step to the bar order something soft."

They all promised they would and in due time they arrived in the barroom. My father was standing at one end of the bar. I stood beside him and all the players lined up. The bartender went down the line, asking each man what he would have to drink. The bartender's look was one of puzzled wonderment as each player ordered lemonade or pop or sarsaparilla or milk, but he never cracked a smile.

My father was as awe-stricken as the bartender. He looked down the bar at the array of soft drinks, gazed at the silent line of men sipping them and finally leaned over to me and asked:

Even Father Surprised.

"Don't any of these ball players ever take a drink?"

"No, certainly not," I answered.

"Saints an' ages, an' what a foine lot o' young men!" commented my father.

I continued working in the mines through the week and playing at Lehighton on Saturday afternoons. When the baseball season ended, I went along with my mining, driving mules and picking up coal in the black tunnels. The next spring Webb Clauss came to Moosic and told me he wanted me to be his regular catcher and live in Lehighton. He also wanted O'Hara, another miner, who pitched for the Moosic team, to come with me. O'Hara and I were to be the battery of Lehighton. We both accepted.

Clauss had promised us each $75 a month. Clauss could not pay all of this. He had an agreement with the merchants of the town that they were to pay part of his players' salaries and the players were to earn the other part by working when they were not playing ball. Clauss explained to us that he would pay us $35 a month out of the merchants' fund and that he would get us jobs where we could earn the other $40 to make our total $75. This arrangement suited us.

Got Job Painting.

When O'Hara and I got settled in Lehighton, the jobs were ready for us. I was a painter's helper and O'Hara became a plumber's apprentice. When not playing ball the Lehighton battery was painting and plumbing.

Having my father's full approval, I went right ahead with my mind free. He was satisfied that I was engaged in an occupation that earned more for me than mining ever could and that I was associated with sober and industrious men who spurned liquor and behaved themselves.

I stayed in Lehighton through the season of 1890. I did the catching and O'Hara did the pitching. O'Hara never advanced but that was not his fault. He hurt his arm and the injury ended his career. O'Hara might now be listed with the pitching stars of all time had he escaped injury, for he had much speed and an excellent curve ball. He was also unusually intelligent.

Sees Gamble of Game.

The O'Hara case impressed me with the gamble that baseball is. A player never knows when his career will be stopped. An injury seemingly slight and the kind that the layman would pay little attention to, can halt a baseball career. It is a precarious business, no matter how carefully the player may look after himself.

In 1891 I received an offer from Louisville, then in the American association. I jumped at the chance to play big league ball. Who wouldn't?

My position with Louisville was not certain. I was signed to play shortstop and first base. I had never played either position. In Moosic and Lehighton I was always a catcher. I wanted to play big league ball and it made no difference to me where I played as long as I got a chance to play.

As a member of the Louisville club I was not a howling success. I was a weak batter. My fielding was not exceptional. When I say that I did not go big with Louisville, I am placing myself rather low, for Louisville at that time was a weak team. If a man had a chance anywhere in the big league, he had it at Louisville. But while I did not burn up the league at Louisville, I never lost hope and I kept on trying. While not good I was just about good enough to hold on and that, in the end, proved good enough, for I did not stay with Louisville many seasons.

MISSOURI VALLEY ABANDONS GOLF

St. Louis, December 5.—(AP)—Decision to abandon golf as a conference sport, awarding of various athletic events and a more definite ruling on professionalism resulted from today's meeting of Missouri Valley officials here.

The faculty representatives, in rejecting golf as conference sport, gave no reason, but said individual schools would be permitted to hold individual tournaments.

A. U. Takes 19-0 Victory From Talladega Eleven

Dark-skinned warriors of the gridiron bearing the flaming scarlet of Talladega, swept ends and ends at Spiller field Saturday, but the colorful crowd of Atlanta university, in the less spectacular gray jersies engineered a smash line attack and came off the field with the long end of the 19-to-0 score.

The game was the colored gridiron classic of the season. It brought to a close the season of both schools.

From the first whistle until the last the A. U. crowd rushed the Talladega boys off their feet. But it was a good game, nevertheless. There was always a threat to A. U. in the sweeping end runs that were sprung by Poole and Harris, the Talladega halfbacks. They might have taken air down the grid, but for the ability of one Joe Green, star of other days as well for A. U., who made the Talladega halves lose as much ground as they gained on these sprints across the field.

Harris was the only reason A. U. didn't score a couple of more touchdowns. He bruised up several A. U. players and smeared up many other A. U. plays.

The startling bit of backfield stuff for A. U. in its scoring was produced by McPherson, who scored two of A. U.'s touchdowns. The third touchdown was pushed over by Stanley, A. U.'s fullback. McPherson, quarterback and second man in a powerful tandem, couldn't be stopped. DeLomore was another A. U. back who strutted mean stuff frequently.

A. U. made its first touchdown in the first quarter by a steady drive down the field that ended when McPherson plunged the last two yards. The try for the point failed. The second touchdown came in the second quarter after an intercepted forward pass and a 30-yard run to Talladega's four-yard tape. Stanley rushed the ball over. Again the kick was wide, hitting one of the goal uprights. The final touchdown drive came in the last quarter and was steady from midfield over the line. Green kicked goal for the extra point.

'RED' MAY PLAY IN ATLANTA

Montgomery, Ala., December 5.—(AP) A conference between officials of Cramton bowl, the chamber of commerce and Assistant Manager Pickens, of Chicago, to bring "Red" Grange, world's fastest back, to Montgomery ended Saturday night with announcement by Mr. Pickens that a definite answer to proposals of the officials would be made Tuesday.

Mr. Pickens stated he would confer with his chief before he arrived at a decision. A game in Montgomery, Birmingham or Atlanta, within the next few weeks remains a possibility, it was announced.

Junior High Basketeers Draft Schedule for Season

The Atlanta Junior High School Athletic association held a meeting in the city hall Saturday morning for the organization of the basketball league for 1926. The schools represented were Bass, O'Keefe, Brown, Smith and the Decatur junior high schools.

The opening game of the 1926 season will be January 13, following one day behind the Senior High date. The games will be played on Wednesday and Friday afternoons.

At the meeting several officials were mentioned and the representatives turned several of the names over to President Warren C. Maddox with instructions to employ them if possible.

The Spalding official basketball was adopted as the official ball, and will be used by all of the teams.

Three of the schools have started practice for the coming season. The Joe Brown team went to work last week with 40 candidates out for the coveted positions. The team will have as coach Mr. Gorham, who handled the team last year. He will have two boys back from last year's squad to start with. Sellars, who played the position of running guard on the regulars, can be counted on to take care of his position in great style.

Toney at Guard.

Toney will be back for a guard position. He was a substitute guard on the team last year, and should be much better after his experience of last year.

The Hoke Smith Junior team will be under Coach Mosher and he will have two of last year's team back as a nucleus. The first call was made last Monday afternoon and some 50 boys were on hand for a tryout. Friday the squad was cut to 35. Bluestein and Humans, the two boys that played such good games at the guard positions, were on hand and are trying hard to hold their positions. Coach Mosher says that he has several boys that look promising and that he expects to have a better team than last year.

Out at the Decatur Junior High school the boys have been practicing for the past two weeks, and are getting into good shape. Mr. Camp will have charge of the coaching this year and has a good chance to put out the best team that they have ever had. He has several of the last year squad back and with the experience they received last year, will prove a stumbling block for all teams.

Decatur does not have the boys to pick from that the Atlanta schools do and they always put up a game fight in every game. This team is the only team that can boast of having a basketball court of its own, and this year several improvements have been made that make it 100 per cent better.

Bass Team Ready.

The William A. Bass team will get under way the first of next week. Coach H. H. Holt will have charge of the coaching of the team and will be assisted by Mr. James who was recently added to the physical department. Coach Holt will have one of last year's regulars back and will have to build a new team. This boy is John Bridges, who played as a forward last year. About 50 boys are expected to be out the first day and there will be quite a few of them that will no doubt show some ability at the indoor game.

Coach Langston will have charge of the Daniel O'Keefe team this year. He has made a call for candidates for the first of next week. O'Keefe lost all of last year's championship team. They have Pierce Sudderth in school but he will be promoted to the senior high school the first of the year. This is the only boy they might have had back. Coach Langston will have to start from the bottom and put out a lot of hard work to get ready for the opening of the season.

The following schedule was adopted by the officials Saturday:

January 13—Brown at Bass; Smith at Decatur; O'Keefe off.
January 15—Decatur at Brown; O'Keefe at Smith; Bass off.
January 20—Bass at O'Keefe; Brown at Smith; Decatur off.
January 22—Bass at Decatur; O'Keefe at Brown; Smith off.
January 27—Smith at Bass; Decatur at O'Keefe; Brown off.
January 29—Bass at Brown; Decatur at Smith; O'Keefe off.
February 3—Brown at Decatur; Smith at O'Keefe; Bass off.
February 5—O'Keefe at Bass; Smith at Brown; Decatur off.
February 10—Decatur at Bass; Brown at OKeefe; Smith off.
February 12—Bass at Smith; O'Keefe at Decatur; Brown off.

OVER MILLION SEE BIG TEN GAMES

Chicago, December 5.—(AP)—Upward of 1,230,000 fans paid about $2,250,000 during the football season just closed to see games in which one or more of the Western conference teams participated. The figures are compiled by the Chicago Tribune.

Illinois topped the west with an attendance of 379,639, including 85,000 at Ohio State, which set a national mark. From its battles Illinois earned $335,000. The actual increase in attendance over last fall was 153,595.

Michigan topped all the schools financially because of an arrangement by which they retained nearly all the $105,000 proceeds of the Wolverine-Navy game. Michigan's receipts were approximately $390,000.

Of the estimated $2,250,000 conference teams drew, about $200,000 became the property of outside schools. Penn got about $125,000 for its fight with Illinois, and Notre Dame took $45,000 for its appearance against Minnesota. The estimated receipts follow:

Michigan, $390,000; Chicago, $348,000; Illinois, $335,000; Minnesota, $225,000; Ohio, $175,000; Iowa, $165,000; Wisconsin, $156,000; Northwestern, $145,000; Indiana, $66,000; Purdue, $56,000.

Waynesboro Staging Event

BY JULIAN GRIFFIN.

An annual event that will attract hundreds of famous sportsmen from all over Georgia, the south at large and distant sections of the United States, will take place in Waynesboro, Ga., beginning tomorrow, when the 24th annual field trials of the Georgia Field Trials association open. The trials will last four days.

Among the prize-winning dogs that will be entered from Atlanta will be: Mike Milligan, owned by Trammell Scott; Short Change and Captain Jack, owned by Scott Hudson; Joyeuse Dollar Bill and Joyeuse Jake, owned by J. K. Ottley, in addition to Atlanta dogs owned by Bob Woodruff, Homer McAfee, Dr. C. C. Howard, Al Mathis and Gus Ryan.

Some of the celebrities who will gather for the occasion will be Ty Cobb, Georgia's greatst gift to the baseball world; Jack Darden, manager of the Baltimore Orioles, and other men of equal fame in various lines of endeavor.

Augusta will send, in addition to Cobb, Hugh Saxon, Dr. Wilder, Charley Houston and others. Among those attending from Monticello will be Dr. Belcher, C. L. Pope, C. J. Jordon.

Belcher Is President.

The Georgia Field Trials association is the third oldest organization of its kind in the United States. The officers of the association are: Dr. F. S. Belcher, of Monticello, president; Simeon Bell, of Waynesboro, vice president, and Dr. E. M. Wilder, of Augusta, secretary.

The governing board of the association consists of Ty Cobb, of Augusta; Al Mathis, of Atlanta; Trammell Scott, of Atlanta; Hugh Saxon, of Augusta, and Harry Kirkover, of New York. The membership list includes about 300 names.

Dogs from all parts of the country will be eligible to compete in the open all-age stakes and the open derby. Cash prizes will be awarded in these events.

Trophies Awarded Members.

The membership stakes, open only to dogs owned and handled by members of the association, will include the puppy stakes, the derby stakes and the all-age stakes. Trophies will be awarded winners in these events.

Judges for the events will be T. Benton Kink, of Knoxville, Tenn.; Dr. Phillips, of Cincinnati, Mr. Ray, of Louisiana.

This is the biggest sporting event of the year for Waynesboro and is considered one of the biggest of the state. The Waynesboro Rotary club will entertain the field trial men with a banquet Tuesday night and other forms of entertainment will be planned to supplement the priceless opportunity for discussions by the country's leading men who are gathering in a common cause—the love of man for a dog.

FAIN ELECTED V. M. I. CAPTAIN

Lexington, Va., December 5.—(AP)—Two elevens not encountered this year appear on the 10-game, 1926 football schedule of Virginia Military institute, announced by Graduate Manager B. B. Clarkson today. The Flying Squadron will renew relations with Davidson and Richmond, these two teams taking the places of Emory and Henry and Lynchburg.

Seventeen members of the football team were awarded monograms at the regular meeting of the athletic council, and John M. Fain, Jr., left end of Bristol, Va., will captain the 1926 Flying Squadron. Fain, a regular wingman for the past two years, will replace another Bristol product, Snail Caldwell, as leader of the Cadets.

The following players were awarded varsity monograms: P. E. Caldwell, W. R. White, K. C. Harmeling and J. M. Fain, Jr., all of Bristol, Va.; H. K. Kulp and C. T. Moorman, Roanoke, Va.; A. W. Deitrich, Sayre, Pa.; J. A. Willis and J. C. Smith, Jr., Charleston, W. Va.; N. B. Barkley, New Orleans; J. S. Mondy, Richmond; O. W. Gfroerer, St. Elmo, Tenn.; J. O'Berry, Tampa, Fla.; K. A. Rugh, Bolivar, Pa.; E. M. Yates, Flint Hill, Va.; L. D. Kelly, Longview, Texas, and P. A. Kearney, Phoebus, Va.

The 1926 schedule follows:

September 18, Wofford at Lexington.
September 25, Richmond at Lexington.
October 2, Georgia Tech at Atlanta.
October 9, Roanoke at Lexington.
October 16, Virginia at Lexington.
October 23, North Carolina State at Richmond.
October 30, Davidson at Lexington.
November 6, North Carolina at Chapel Hill.
November 13, Kentucky at Charleston, W. Va., or Lexington, Ky.
November 25, V. P. I. at Roanoke, Virginia.

BELGIANS WIN BIKE RACE

New York, December 5.—(AP)—Alphonse Goozens and Gerard de Baets, the Belgian team, tonight won the six-day bike race in Madison Square garden through a desperate sprint in the last 20 minutes when they lapped Reggie McNamara and Franco Georgetti.

MAURER AND KILGORE STAR AS PETRELS BEAT ROLLINS

Campbell Also Lugs Oval For Big Gains in Victory, By 16-0 Score, in Miami

Miami, Fla., December 5.—(Special.)—The Stormy Petrels of Oglethorpe university, Atlanta, Saturday afternoon swamped Rollins college, of Winter Park, 16 to 0, in the initial clash in the new Coral Gables stadium. Fighting in a sea of mud, the Petrels outclassed the Floridians with driving plays. Maurer broke loose on several plays for 15 to 35-yard gains and Kilgore smashed his way through the Rollins line time after time for 10 and 20 yards.

Rollins showed fight all through the game.

In the third quarter, Kilgore, in a series of line bucks and off-tackle plays, delivered the ball to the one-yard line, and the Petrels were held there for downs.

In the third quarter Maurer caught Rollins napping and ran for 35 yards and was brought down on the one-yard line. Kilgore took the ball over.

Rollins in the first quarter driven back down the field and in attempting to punt out into open territory was blocked for a safety.

Campbell Is Sensation.

"Nutty" Campbell mothered the ball in several sensational get-aways. He broke loose from the Rollins huddle for 10 and 20 yard gains on the slippery field.

Rollins' perfectly executed aerial attack, Wilson to Seeds, wrought havoc in the Petrel ranks and threatened downfall as Seeds took the pigskin for a 10 and 15 yard ride.

Seeds, on guard plays, took the Petrels by storm. The aerial attack of the Petrels was unsuccessful, while a cross buck was employed to advantage. Maurer on crossbuck formation took the pigskin around right end three times for seven, nine and five yards.

Robertson Substitutes Many.

In the second half Coach Robinson began replacing men. Maurer was taken out for the second time. In the third quarter the entire backfield was replaced after the two touchdowns and two safeties had been made.

A slippery ball and field provided plenty of thrills for the 3,000 spectators as the players squirmed and struggled in the muck. The temporary stands at the stadium swayed as Maurer made his Grange dashes down the field time after time. His name was passed from lip to lip. He was the hero of the day sharing honors with Captain Bob Kilgore, whose line plunges were received with applause by the enthusiastic audience.

Jim Garber, former Atlantan, and leader of the Coral Gables orchestra, declared it Oglethorpe night at the country club where both teams were feted Saturday night. Maurer and Kilgore were the center of attraction on the floor as well as on the field.

Coach W. A. Alexander, of Georgia Tech, head linesman, ankle deep in mud, was one of the popular attractions of the afternoon.

Speedy Basketball Team Is Forecast for Mercer

Macon, Ga., December 5.—With the smack of toe on pigskin still echoing in their ears, 10 members of the Mercer university football squad have bade adieu to the gridiron for this year to report to Coach John M. King, new basketball mentor, for the first practice of the season.

Phoney Smith, John Parks, Kay Tipton, Wallace Butts, John Herndon, Fred Forrester, Glen Davis, Jack Rogers, Heidt Neal and Bill Brunner were the men to discard the gridiron togs for the lighter costume of the basketeer after two days of rest between the close of the football season with the Marquette game in Milwaukee Thanksgiving day, and the official opening of the cage season Monday.

Although practice has been held for the non-grid men for the past two weeks, some of the best basketball players at the university have been kept from coming out for practice because of football duties.

No Vacation Planned.

No Christmas vacation will be given the indoor Bears this year, Coach King said, for the team leaves in the midst of the holidays for the trip north and the first game of the season with the Loyola university five in Chicago December 31.

The loss of "Crook" Smith, Red Simmons and Sid Ellison, the great Tennessee triumvirate, and the bulwark of strength for the three S. I. A. A. championship teams that Mercer has turned out in the past four years, has been difficult for students and Macon basketball fans to overcome, but Coach King has six letter men on which to start building his 1925-26 team.

Captain Jakey Dunn, Tom Nalls and Bobby Pinkston, forwards; alternate-Captain Malcolm Green, center; and John Parks and Oscar Long, guards are the old men back this year. Dunn, Green, Parks and Long were members of last year's championship quintet, while Nalls and Pinkston, second baseman and captain of the baseball team, were letter men on the 1923 team.

Smith To Succeed Brother.

To reinforce these men, Mercer has "Phoney" Smith, who is expected to take over the forward position held for four years by his brother, the great Consuello. Smith is a fast floor man and is even a more deadly shot than his brother.

Although Smith, who was captain of last year's freshman team, is probably the best prospect from the 1924 Cub five, several other players are considered well fortified in the competition for places on the varsity.

Wallace Butts, end on the football team, and all-G. I. A. A. guard on the G. M. C. basketball team in his prep-school days, is looking good in the few practices he has been in this week. Lovett, forward, is another member of the Baby Bruin five who may make trouble for the old men.

Speed and pass work will be employed to take the place of height and weight on this year's varsity team, Coach King has announced. Mercer has always had tall men and long shots, and pass work was in a measure sacrificed for long distance shooting. This style of play could be afforded with an all-star team like that of last year, when every man on the five was an accurate shot, even to Sid Ellison, the stationary guard.

The 1925-26 team will be composed of midgets compared to Smith, Simmons and Ellison, all three six-footers and above. Malcolm Green is the only man on the squad who even approaches the much-coveted 72 inches and Captain Dunn and "Phoney" Smith, forwards, are not big men by any means. Parks and Long, the two guards, are men of average height and build.

Mercer supporters still hope that smiling Buncie Skinner, all-S. I. A. A. forward of last year, will report for practice. It is rumored that Skinner, who is enrolled in the Mercer Law school, is not contemplating playing basketball this season.

The schedule for the 1925-26 season as arranged to date follows:

December 31—Loyola university in Chicago.
January 1—DePauw in Chicago (tentative).
January 2—Notre Dame in South Bend, Ind.
January 4—Northwestern in Evanston, Ill.
January 5—Marquette university in Milwaukee, Wis.
January 7—Vanderbilt in Nashville, Tenn.
January 13—Marquette university in Macon.
January 16—Auburn in Macon (tentative).
January 20—Atlanta Athletic club in Atlanta.
January 23—Tulane in Macon (tentative).
January 29—Chattanooga in Chattanooga.
January 30—University of Tennessee in Knoxville, Tenn.
February 1—Birmingham Athletic club in Birmingham.
February 2—Howard college in Birmingham.
February 10—University of Florida in Macon.
February 12—Centre in Macon.
February 15—The Citadel in Macon.
February 19—Atlanta Athletic club in Macon.

Two games each with Georgia Tech and the University of Georgia have been tentatively scheduled. The Jackets and the Bulldogs will probably meet the Bears in one game each in Macon, with Atlanta and Athens being the scene of the return games.

'RED' CROSSES GOAL LINE TWICE

Philadelphia, December 5.—(AP)—Mr. "Red" Grange, Wheaton's widely-known iceman, aided at crucial moments by other members of the Chicago Bears, defeated the Frankford Yellow Jackets, 14 to 7, in a national league professional football game here today.

It was the second appearance in Philadelphia of the galloping ghost of the gridiron, his first being last month when a member of the Illinois football team and its brightest star.

Approximately 30,000 spectators sat through a drizzling rain at Shibe park to watch the western tornado go through his paces in the mud. The field was too deep in mire for Red to electrify the crowd with his spectacular runs, but he kept trying and the Bears' two touchdowns were scored by the phantom. His longest run was one of 15 yards in the first period and in the fourth he made one of ten which took the ball to within striking distance of the Yellow Jackets' goal. After two tries, Red slid across the line for his second tally. In the first quarter, a 25-yard pass to Grange took the ball to the five-yard line and on the first play after the teams had changed goals in the second period, Grange shot through tackle for his first touchdown.

Grange withdrew soon after this and did not go on the field during the third period. In the middle of the fourth, after the Yellow Jackets had tied the score at 7-to-7, he was back and soon scored for the second time.

Grange carried the ball fifteen times from scrimmage for a total of 45 yards, his first two efforts resulting in slight losses. His second longest run was for 10 yards. He caught the only forward pass thrown to him for a gain of 25 yards, and also snapped one to Mohardt for a gain of 35 yards.

Five Exhibition Baseball Games Billed Here

12 S. S. TEAMS BEGIN PLAY TUESDAY

Twelve teams will get their baptism of fire this year, in a basketball way, when the Sunday School Athletic association opens its season Tuesday night at 6 o'clock at the Y. M. C. A.

Among the teams only one will be a new team in the association, it being South Pryor Presbyterian.

The officials for the games are Sam Glassman, referee for the first game, and Roy Mundorf, who will umpire. These two men will alternate umpiring and refereeing for the rest of the games.

The prettiest sponsor will be chosen to toss up the first ball, starting the season.

All teams that are not ready to play within three minutes of their scheduled time will forfeit their games.

Games will be played on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

There have been five leagues formed and the teams in each league are as evenly paired as possible.

Some change has been made in the schedule and the leagues, as previously announced, but all teams that were originally scheduled to play on the opening night will play.

Jackson Hill Baptist and Inman Park Baptist have the honor of playing the first game in the 1925-26 season.

The other games will follow this one just as fast as possible, and there will be three and one-half hours of basketball.

The schedule for next week's play is as follows:

Tuesday Night, December 8.

Jackson Hill Baptist vs. Inman Park Baptist (American league), 6 p. m.
Oakhurst Presbyterian vs. Floding class of Central Presbyterian (National league), 6:20 p. m.
Calvary Methodist vs. Fortified Hills Baptist (Southern league), 7:05 p. m.
Westminster Presbyterian vs. West End Presbyterian (Coolidge league), 7:20 p. m.
Jackson Hill Baptist Feds vs. St. Paul's Wesleyan Class of St. Paul's Methodist at 8:10 p. m.
South Pryor Presbyterian vs. Anchor Feds of Baptist Tabernacle (National league) at 8:30 p. m.

Thursday Night.

Grant Park Baptist vs. Confederate Avenue Baptist (Federal league) at 6 p. m.
Pep Class of Baptist Tabernacle vs. Grace Methodist (National league) at 6:20 p. m.
Druid Hill Baptist vs. Epworth Workers of Epworth Methodist (Southern league) at 7:05 p. m.
T. N. T. Class of Baptist Tabernacle vs. Anchor Class of Baptist Tabernacle (Coolidge league) at 7:20 p. m.
Triple-E Class of Second Baptist vs. Underwood Methodist (American league) at 8:10 p. m.
Jackson Hill Baptist vs. West End Agogas of West End Baptist (American league) at 8:30 p. m.

Some of the teams have not as yet paid their referee fees, etc., and before any team will be allowed to participate all of these matters will have to be attended to.

The leagues will be composed of the following teams:

Coolidge League.

T. N. T. Class of Baptist Tabernacle, Anchor Class of Baptist Tabernacle, Westminster Presbyterian, West End Presbyterian.

National League.

Grace Methodist, Oakhurst Methodist, Anchor Feds of Baptist Tabernacle, Floding Class of Central Presbyterian, South Pryor Presbyterian and Pep Class of Baptist Tabernacle.

American League.

Jackson Hill Baptist, Inman Park Baptist, Underwood Methodist, Triple-E Class of Second Baptist and West End Agogas of West End Baptist.

Southern League.

Druid Hill Bapist, Epworth Methodist, Calvary Methodist, Loyalty Class of Central Baptist and Fortified Hills Baptist.

Federal League.

Jackson Hill Feds, Confederate Avenue Baptist, Gordon Stret Presbyterians, St. Paul's Wesleyan Class of St. Paul's Methodist and Grant Park Baptist.

WADE TO MEET WASHINGTON MAN TODAY

Tuscaloosa, Ala., December 5.—(AP) The faculty athletic committee of the University of Alabama, will meet here tomorrow to decide whether the football team will accept the invitation to play the University of Washington in the Tournament of Roses on New Year's day at Pasadena, Calif., it was announced tonight by President Denny.

Coach Wallace Wade was on his way to the university tonight to confer with the officials. Coach Wade left Athens Ga., where he had been attending the southern conference after obtaining permission of that body to participate in a post-season game.

Jack Benefiel, graduate manager of athletics at the University of Oregon who is handling arrangements for the game, will also be in Tuscaloosa tomorrow to discuss the matter with the officials.

No contract has been signed yet, President Denny stated tonight.

COLGATE REJECTS HUSKIES' INVITATION

Hamilton, N. Y., Dec. 5.—(AP)—Colgate's undefeated football team will not meet the University of Washington as a representative of the east in the Tournament of Roses on New Year's day at Pasadena, Calif. Rejection of the invitation was announced by W. A. Reid, graduate manager, today.

George Barton Cutten, president of the university, said:

"While appreciating the invitation Colgate feels compelled to decline since post-season games are contrary to the policy of the university. We recognize, of course, that such a trip and such a game would give Colgate additional prestige as far as our football team is concerned and would be beneficial from the standpoint of the financial returns to the athletic association, but the policy of Colgate has been to treat all athletic games as a sport. The athletic authorities, the alumni council and the administration of the university are united in the opinion that Colgate should not make this trip."

GRANGE PLAYS IN N. Y. TODAY

New York, December 5.—(AP)—Red Grange will make his metropolitan debut at the Polo Grounds tomorrow afternoon when the Chicago Bears tackle the New York Giants in a National league game. Officials of the New York club today reported that the ticket sale already had reached 50,000. Ten thousand tickets will be put on sale at the grounds tomorrow. Grange will face a formidable team of former all-American stars.

At one place in East Africa a population of 30,000 has decreased in four years to 3,000 because of the loss of cattle due to the tsetse fly.

Conference Bars Pros. Not Yet Incorporated. 'Bama Strengthens Schedule

THE SOUTHERN CONFERENCE has voted to disown those coaches who play professional football. They are out to down the gory monster, which has appeared every place but in the Southern conference. They are out to kill professional football before it eats into the vitals of the greatest of all college sports—football. They have adopted a rule whereby any college football player who plays professionally will not be allowed to coach a Southern conference team or to officiate in a Southern conference football game. Not only that, but the rule as written prohibits a Southern conference eleven from playing anywhere against a team employing such a coach or where such an official is employed.

Just how this rule is to be interpreted is problematical. If it applies to the situation as it now stands then the Southern conference is going to lose some very valuable men, among them Don Miller, freshman coach at Georgia Tech; Jim Crowley, backfield coach at Georgia, and Earl Neale, head coach at Virginia. Crowley and Miller have signed contracts to play professional football, and it is believed Bill Fincher, line coach at Tech, would not be averse to scraping up a few dollars playing professionally this winter.

THERE is an impression that the rule has not been made so as to apply to those coaches and officials who now are in good standing, but the wording of the rule is plain enough. If enforced to the letter as brought to Atlanta by the Associated Press it would affect those men now employed.

The rule now is a rule and that only. It has not yet been incorporated into the by-laws of the conference and will not be until next fall. That fact also may stand as a protective barrier for those who have dabbled with football professionally. In writing the new addition to the by-laws some provision probably will be made to take care of the situation.

THE AMOUNT OF STEAM being let off around the country over professional football seems so unnecessary. Try as we can we have not been able to see professional football, which is played on Sunday, as a menace to the college game. It long has been a matter of ethics on the part of the professionals to keep their hands off the college men until they have completed their three years of football at school. Their own rules are sufficient to protect the collegian's amateur standing.

ALABAMA UNIVERSITY has decided to get into the Southern conference with its football team. Displaying astonishing bravery and, perhaps, confidence, the complete schedule for next fall was announced Saturday and there are eight conference games scheduled. Some are not against overly important elevens, but some of them are. At any rate no one is going to be able to say that Alabama played a weak schedule.

Howard and Birmingham Southern, two old favorites, are missing from the list of gridiron opponents, but in their place is Millsaps. The rest of the schedule is conference, embracing Vanderbilt, Sewanee, Mississippi A. & M., Georgia Tech, Louisiana State, Kentucky, Florida and Georgia. The undertaking may fly back and hit the Crimson Tide in the face, even if there are some weak teams scattered among the stronger ones. It is a hard matter, as often has been proven, for a football team to attain top form and carry it through a row of opponents. Sewanee and Mississippi A. & M. may turn out to be just rough enough to prepare the Tide for a good, sound thrashing when the Alabama warriors reach Atlanta.

making a perfect job of it. He was the high-point scorer of the Bluebird team, making most of their touchdowns. He was picked over "Little Buck" van Houten, of Marist, another versatile backfield man.

Cook, Brooks, Halfbacks.

Cook, of Tech High, and Brooks, of Marist, were picked for the halfback positions. Pete Ford, of Boys' High, no doubt deserved an all-prep berth, and if he had played the football in the other games that he played against Tech High, there would have been no doubt as to giving him one. However, he only played about half the season, leaving school during the middle of the fall and coming back late in the season.

Buster Cook, o Tech High, was one of the hardest-working Smithie backs, and gained a lot of yardage for them. He scored most of the Tech High touchdowns, and got away for several long runs. Brooks, of Marist, was given the other half. He played fullback on the Marist team, but can run an end as well as he can hit a line. He was called on to do both this year, doing a large part of the ball carrying for Marist. He and Cook were picked from men such as For, Waugh, of Tech High, and Martin, of University.

Fullback position is awarded to Jack Jackson, outstanding Decatur High star. Jackson has carried the greater part of the Decatur attack this year, running the ends, hitting the line, and off-tackle, besides doing all the kicking. He was picked after the consideration of such men as Sorrels, of G. M. A., and Parshall, of Tech High.

TARHEELS MEET NAVY, HARVARD

Chapel Hill, N. C., December 5.—(AP)—The University of North Carolina 1926 basketball schedule, announced here tonight by Graduate Manager Charles T. Woolen, indicates that the Southern titleholders have an unusually heavy program this season.

Twenty games are on the regular schedule, including a number of contests with Southern conference teams. The northern trip of last year will be repeated.

The schedule follows:

February 20—Duke at Durham.
February 23—Davidson at Chapel Hill.
February 25—Washington and Lee at Chapel Hill (pending).
February 26-March 2—S. I. C. tournament at Atlanta.

DELANEY GETS BERLENBACH THIS WEEK

New York, December 5.—Within a week the rafters of Tex Rickard's new arena will ring with the roar of 22,000 fight fans at the first of a series of world's championship bouts—Paul Berlenbach, of Astoria, N. Y., versus Jack Delaney, of Bridgeport, Conn., for the light heavyweight title.

The new Madison Square Garden will be sold out for the affair and if the bout is not illuminating as an example of the manly art of self-defense, the spectacle as a whole will be worth the prices of admission, which are high.

There will be the new ring, with its cork floor, which some boxers may prefer for diving purposes. There will also be an electric round indicator, in the form of a chandelier, lighting up to show what round it is from the first to the fifteenth. Another innovation will be huge clocks, each with a single hand, which will make a complete circuit in four minutes, with bells ringing at the start and completion of each round. As for the bout itself, it is a peculiar thing that every effort is being made to ballyhoo Berlenbach as a good fighter and worthy opponent for Delaney. This despite the fact that the slovenly Dutchman is the world's champion, while the French-Canadian never won a title.

Sports writers are being taken to Berlenbach's camp, where the champ's good points are stressed by his astute manager, Dan Hickey. It is being claimed for plastering Paul that he has become fast, rangy, and a right-hand puncher. Until a lot of fans see for themselves, they never will believe this. Berlenbach always has been slow, flat-footed and a left-hand hitter, exclusively.

Little is being said about Delaney, whereas it usually is the case that the challenger is the one who is "smoked up" before a bout that is not a "natural." In ring parlance, a "natural" is a fight as obvious as that which follows the meeting of a couple of stray bulldogs.

Jack is said to have completely recovered from his recent illness, and to be more than fit at his Connecticut training quarters.

other South Carolina colleges were proposed by members for election, as were other colleges in North Carolina—Davidson and Duke; and in Louisiana, Loyola college. Several other colleges had indicated their desire to become conference members, but it was decided by the executive committee not to enlarge the enrollment at this time.

Dr. S. V. Sanford was reelected president of the conference. H. N. Edmunds, of the University of South Carolina, was named vice president, and the entire personnel of the board of directors was reelected.

Site of Training Camp For Crackers Not Settled; N. Y., Senators Meet Here

BY ROY E. WHITE.

While thousands of football fans over the country are talking about which of their favorite football stars have been placed on the all-American, the all-state, all-eastern or western, all-southern, and all-elsewhere eleven, thousands of other fans are more concerned about the baseball prospects of the Atlanta Crackers during the coming season, and will be glad to learn that President Michalove, of the Atlanta Baseball club, is busily engaged in rounding out an exhibition schedule that will give Atlanta fans plenty to talk about during the remainder of the "stove league" sessions, which will continue through the winter and on until the spring games during the latter part of March.

Five games have been scheduled for Spiller field during the spring exhibition series according to Michalove. The Atlanta Crackers will figure in two of those games against major league competition.

The first of the games bringing big league players to Spiller field will be played on April 2 and 3 between the New York Yankees and the Brooklyn Dodgers. Following that two-game series the Crackers will make their initial spring appearance against Ty Cobb and his Detroit Tigers, and following that game the Crackers will play the Cincinnati Reds.

Giants Play Senators.

The New York Giants and Washington Senators will play a single game series on Spiller field, April 8. It will be the first appearance in Atlanta of the Washington club, which has won the American league pennant two successive years. It will also mark the first appearance on Atlanta soil of Muggsy McGraw's Giant outfit that won the National league title for four years in succession.

There are other games being booked for local fans on Spiller field before the opening of the Southern league during the middle of April, but none of the others have closed the dates definitely. According to the announcement such teams as the St. Louis Cardinals, Baltimore, Indianapolis and Boston Nationals are the other major league teams being sought for exhibition games in Atlanta.

Brooklyn and New York decided to play a two-game series in Atlanta in preference to playing in some small towns. The Cracker baseball lot is in a much better condition than any other in the southern states and the accommodations are much more convenient here than elsewhere.

Cracker baseball fans are wondering just where the 925 pennant-winning Crackers will iron all of the kinks out of their arms, but that is one of the secrets that Dan Michalove is keeping from the public just now, but he has come out with the news that the Crackers will do the major part of their training on Florida soil. Winter Park, last year's training camp of the Crackers, is putting forth every effort to again have Atlanta train there, but two others are just as anxious as Winter Park to have Bert Niehoff and his Crackers train in their community. Lake Wales and Brooksville are among the others that are being considered in the three-cornered race.

Brooksville, the home of "Uncle Wilbus' Good, is only about 40 miles from Tampa and is after the Crackers. The inducement that Lake Wales is sending out is a brand-new athletic field and new convenient hotel quarters, but Michalove has not made up his mind at present.

News from various Cracker players is that every member of the 1925 championship crew that has not been traded or sold is anxiously awaiting his transportation to the training camp. Some are already in Florida, Manager Bert Niehoff is in California along with other members of the team, while Red Smith is selling insurance in Atlanta.

POWER QUINTET PLANS CAMPAIGN

With only one of last season's regulars missing from the lineup, the Georgia Railway and Power company basket tossers are preparing to take up their march of victory through the amateur ranks where they left off last year. The squad has been rehearsing for several weeks, and probably will make its initial bow of the season late in December.

Bill Fincher, former Tech football and basketball star, is again on deck as coach of the power company hopefuls, and hopes to turn in a record that will eclipse even that of last year, when the team lost the championship of the city league by a single point.

Captain Jesse Fincher, Joe Finklestein, well-known J. P. C. performer; Bullock, Harwell, Chatham, Senkbeil, Matson and McLennon are among members of last year's aggregation who are back in harness. Among the most likely looking newcomers are Campbell, Smith, Allred, Kirkpatrick, Carter and Murray.

Manager Roy Harwell yet has a number of open dates and wants to book some out-of-town engagements. He may be reached in care of the Georgia Railway and Power company.

A new 100-kilowatt station is under construction at Herzogstand, Bavaria, which will enable crystal set owners to hear the programs throughout all Germany, says Scientific American. This will be the most powerful broadcaster in the world. The second largest German broadcaster will be Koenigswusterhausen, rate at 50 kilowatts.

Rosa Ponselle's Sister Wins Fame in Metropolitan Opera

SIX CURTAIN CALLS FOLLOW TRIUMPH

New York, December 5.—(AP)—Years of study and comparative obscurity on the vaudeville and concert stages came to a triumphal fruition this afternoon when Carmela Ponselle, daughter of an ice dealer of Meriden, Conn., took her sixth curtain call from a Metropolitan opera house audience.

Her younger sister, Rosa Ponselle, soprano, of the Metropolitan company, was prevented by a sudden indisposition from attending her sister's debut.

Carmela's triumph came at the end of the first scene of the fourth act of Verdi's Aida, a scene in which she had held the stage alone, depicting through her singing and acting the despair and jealousy of Amarnis, Egyptian princess, at the portals of the hall of judgment, while the one she loved, Radames, sung by Martinelli, was being condemned to imprisonment alive in the tomb of Phta.

Carmela's contract with the Metropolitan followed upon a concert last spring on the Metropolitan stage with her sister, in which the two were united on a concert stage for the first time since Carmela had stepped aside that Rosa might have the opportunity of studying for operatic work.

The two sisters had sung in choirs and in concerts, but there was money enough for only one to enter upon the years of study necessary to prepare for the opera stage. Carmela continued in concert work and vaudeville, and Rosa, securing an engagement with the Metropolitan, scored her big success with Caruso on November 20, 1918, singing in "La Forsa Del Destino."

Music Club Lieder Concert Delights Large Audience

Elena Gerhardt, long famed as queen of the world's lieder singers, brilliantly maintained the lofty artistic standards of the Atlanta Music club in her recital at the Atlanta Woman's Club auditorium Saturday afternoon.

Her concert was the second one of the music club's "series intime" and was the last concert to be presented during 1925, the series not being resumed until the appearance of the Flonzaley quartet, January 23.

Miss Gerhardt's program was pleasingly balanced to illustrate the full flower of the classic period of German composition, in a group by Brahms, the best of the modern period as represented by the works of Hugo Wolf, which comprised her final group, and the high points of English and American achievement in a middle group devoted to songs in English.

The audience, which was even larger than the one which greeted the first concert of the series intime last month, especially registered its approval of the six Brahms offerings, greeting them with salvos of applause to which the singer responded with a seventh of his compositions, a haunting serenade, "Vergebliches." Her selection for the encore after her English group was "To Celia," by George Munroe. The final encore number seemed to strike the most responsive chord in her hearers, however, when she sang Schubert's "Serenade," the one made most familiar in Atlanta through the several presentations of "Blossom Time." It was Atlanta's first experience with the song in its original German and Miss Gerhardt's interpretation was magnificent.

The artist has a mezzo-soprano voice of great range and power and a fine degree of sympathy and temperament which made the songs full of meaning even for those members of the audience who were not familiar with the language in which the lyric were written. Carroll Hollister, her accompanist, was more than adequate in his support of the singer.

Nazimova Says She and Bryant Never Married

Hartford, Conn., December 5.—(AP) The Hartford Courant says today that Alla Nazimova, tragedienne, has disclosed that although she and Charles Bryant, formerly her leading man, lived together for 14 years as man and wife, they never married.

The admission of a shattered romance apparently has been made to save the man she loves from possible prosecution for perjury and bigamy.

Bryant was married in New Milford, Conn., last month to Miss Marjorie Gilhooley, of Elizabeth, N. J.

In applying for a license he averred he had never been married. Later, when it seemed he might face arrest because it was thought he had been married to Nazimova, Bryant insisted that his statement in getting a license was correct.

In 1912 there was an announcement in New York that Bryant and Nazimova had been married.

"He spoke the truth," Nazimova told the Courant when asked if Bryant was single when he married Miss Gilhooley.

"What is there to say? Everything that can be said, has been said. Why should the matter be stirred up further? Mr. Bryant did not perjure himself. He is now happily married. Why bother with the matter?

"All that has happened since Bryant was married the other day has greatly hurt me. I have been living at the top of a volcano. I am worried to death. For the last several days I have been hunted like an animal in the woods. It hurts me to talk about this matter. I cannot talk about it. What is it all except something to worry a woman mortally to death."

PRESBYTERIAN BUDGET FOR 1926 IS APPROVED

Atlantic City, N. J., December 5.—The budget for the Presbyterian church in the United States for 1926 totaling $15,000,000 was approved by the general council here today after a two-day session in which demands totaling $18,000,000 were passed down. The 1926 budget corresponds for the most part with that of 1925. Apportionment in the 1926 budget is as follows:

National missions, $4,331,040; foreign missions, $3,351,400; Christian education, $1,448,866; ministerial pension, $1,082,780; American Bible society, $77,340; Federal Council of Churches, $20,624.

This, together with appropriations fo $1,344,000 each for the woman's department of national missions and the women's department of foreign missions constitute what is termed the fixed budget. A supplementary budget totaling $2,000,000 and bringing the entire budget of 1926 to the $15,000,000 mark of last year was apportioned as follows:

National missions, $840,000; foreign missions, $650,000; Christian education, $281,000; ministerial pensions, $210,000; American Bible society, $15,000; Federal Council of Churches, $4,000.

TWO ARE SUGGESTED TO SUCCEED HANEY

Washington, December 5.—(AP)—Responding to a request by President Coolidge that he present the name of a democrat and a republican for the place, Senator McNary, republican, Oregon, today indorsed Frank L. Shull, republican, and Marshall N. Dana, democrat, as satisfactory candidates for member of the shipping board from the northern Pacific coast.

The man selected will take the place of Commissioner Haney, of Oregon, democrat, who is serving under a recess appointment, because of a disagreement over board policies, the president some time ago asked Mr. Haney to resign, but he declined to step aside until a successor should have been confirmed by the senate.

Georgia Cotton Club Boys Win Trips to Chicago

Georgia boys, growers of unusual yields of cotton, are off to Chicago to enjoy the sights of the big city. Left to right: S. D. Truitt, county agent in Hancock county; Alton Baugh, Hancock county club winner; D. H. Upshaw, agricultural agent of the Georgia railroad, who gave the boys the trips; Eugene Elder, Hancock county winner; Henry Williams, 11-year-old Troup county boy, who picked over 1,600 pounds of cotton from one acre; Eugene Baker, agricultural agent of the Atlanta & West Point railroad.

Athens, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—Two years ago when there was so much pessimism about the growing of cotton under boll weevil conditions, the Atlanta and West Point and associate line, the Georgia railroad, with confidence in the possibilities of growing cotton profitably regardless of the boll weevil, chose the medium of encouraging the cotton club boys under the leadership of the State College of Agriculture.

After a conference with G. V. Cunningham, state boys' club agent, a prize trip to the national boys' and girls' club congress held in connection with the international live stock show in Chicago was offered to the boy along these lines producing the largest yield of cotton on an acre of land.

The result was that 425 boys enrolled in 1924 in the cotton clubs of that territory. Charles Frank Greene, of Troup county, won the trip with a yield of 2,860 pounds seed cotton, that ginned out 1,012 pounds lint cotton. This gave him a profit of $203.80.

So successful was this contest that the railroad in 1925 increased its offer to two of these trips, one for each line. Five hundred and sixty boys enrolled in this contest from the following counties along the lines: Richmond 31, McDuffie 28, Warren 12, Hancock 47, Bibb 2, Baldwin 30, Greene 15, Morgan 90, Newton 108, Walton 84, Clarke 30, Fulton 10, De Kalb 15, Campbell 5, Coweta 16, Troup 11, Wilkes 42, Rockdale 14.

The following were the successful boys in this contest: Eugene Elder, of Hancock county, on the Georgia railroad, who produced 1,530 pounds seed cotton at a profit of $105.76. He was tied with a like yield by Alton Baugh, of the same county, so the railroad gave him a trip also. On the Atlanta and West Point line, Henry Williams, a 11-year-old boy produced the winning yield of 1,789 pounds seed cotton at a profit of $116.98.

The prizes offered have not only stimulated cotton club work among the boys along these lines of railroad, but has been a strong contributing cause to the stimulation of enrollment in other sections of the state, agriculturists state.

The winners of the contests are now in Chicago, the guests of the railroad, and in addition to attending the international congress are seeing the sights of that city.

POOR CONSTRUCTION BLAMED FOR CRASH OF NAVAL COLLIER

Norfolk, Va., December 5.—(AP)—Weakness of construction and design and not weather conditions caused the naval collier Orion to buckle and nearly break in two off Cape Henry Wednesday night, Commander L. J. Gulliver, captain of the vessel, declared today before the board of inquiry appointed to investigate the damage to the ship and its cause.

Commander Gulliver's testimony before the board was taken by naval officials as bearing out the belief in some quarters that the mysterious total disappearance of the collier Cyclops with all hands in 1918, was caused by virtually the ship action as that which put the Orion out of commission and which it is now generally believed will send her to the scrap heap.

"The commanding officer," Commander Gulliver declared, "is firmly of the opinion, and this view is shared by the officers of the Orion that a ship structurally sound would have experienced no trouble under the sea conditions prevailing when the ship buckled. No one felt the slightest apprehension that the condition did not warrant the ship from continuing on her course."

Commander Gulliver related the incidents in connection with the sailing of the Orion, heavily laden with coal, while storm warnings were being displayed along the coast on Wednesday, and then launched into praise for the officers and men of his crew.

RUDYARD KIPLING GREATLY IMPROVED, PHYSICIAN REPORTS

Burwash, Sussex, England, December 5.—(AP)—Rudyard Kipling's improvement was maintained today and the prospects of his recovery are more hopeful. Lord Dawson, the king's physician, who is attending the noted author, made this statement to the Associated Press prior to his return to London tonight. He had spent a considerable time with the patient.

Sir John Bland Sutton, one of Kipling's personal friends, paid him a visit, but not in a medical capacity.

The fact that Kipling is suffering from broncho-pneumonia and not the ordinary lobar pneumonia, gives additional hope for his ultimate recovery. In this form of the disease the bronchial tubes are affected, and not the lung tissue proper, which is the most dangerous form of the disease.

QUITMAN BODY PLANS DEVELOPMENT WORK

Quitman, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—The chamber of commerce is following the plan of having a special committee assigned to conduct its activities for each month and for December the committee includes Turner Brice, who is president of the body; W. M. English, vice chairman; W. R. Knight, D. B. Holwell, I. A. Byrd and J. E. Morris, Jr.

Next Tuesday evening a general meeting will be held at dinner and plans for development work will be discussed.

REV. OLIVER C. SIMMONS DIES IN EAST POINT

East Point, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—Rev. Oliver C. Simmons, 76, pioneer Methodist minister, died tonight at the residence, 405 West Forrest avenue.

He was a member of the North Georgia conference of the Methodist church, south, for 49 years and was in active ministry for 37 years. He was superannuated 12 years ago. He was prominent and active in all affairs of the church until his last illness.

He is survived by his widow, three daughters, Mrs. Sauls Peacock, of Eastman; Miss E. Simmons and Mrs. C. M. Watson, of Atlanta; three sons, M. M., S. C. and John A. Simmons, and one brother, D. W. Simmons, of Rome.

Funeral services will be held Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock from East Point Methodist church, with interment at Greenwood cemetery.

Atlanta Romance Filming To Begin Next Wednesday

Wednesday morning—weather permitting—Tracy Mathewson's motion picture camera will begin to click. Miss Pearl Bessent, Slim Brolund and others concerned will do their stuff, and the filming of "An Atlanta Romance" will be on its way.

This motion picture, to be photographed entirely in Atlanta, with all the players Atlanta residents, is being produced under auspices of The Constitution, and just as soon as all scenes have been completed and the positive film made from the negative, it will be turned over to the Howard theater for a week's run.

The first location has not been decided upon. Two scenes from the film are so arranged that either of them may easily be photographed first, but decision as to this will be made today and announcement probably will be made Monday as to just where the scenes will be produced. Players will gather at The Constitution office Wednesday morning and will proceed in automobiles to the spot picked by Slim Brolund, eccentric veteran comedian, in whose hands completion of "An Atlanta Romance" lies.

Miss Bessent, beautiful Atlanta girl, who will take the leading feminine role opposite Slim, is enthusiastic over her first appearance on the silver sheet.

Each day announcement of locations to be filmed will be made through The Constitution and the picture will be rushed to completion just as rapidly as weather will permit. Good sunshine is necessary, of course, to correct photography of a motion picture.

TENTED VILLAGE ERECTED TO SOLVE HOUSING PROBLEM

Miami, Fla., December 5.—(AP)—Crowded living conditions here today prompted the construction of a tented village on a five-acre tract of city property by the Miami postoffice and the American legion in conjunction.

Postal employees, the number considerably augmented by the increased volume of mail, will occupy 20 tents ready for occupancy within a few days. Legionnaires, regardless of post affiliations, will erect 30 tents at once for their own accommodations, and more will follow as the need arises. Every convenience will be provided to make the tented city the solution to the high cost of living problem here.

POULTRY ASSOCIATION ELECTS NEW OFFICERS

Columbus, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—At the annual meeting of the Chattahoochee Valley Poultry association last night officers for 1926 were elected as follows: John S. Jenkins, president; D. O'Grady, first vice president; D. C. Prim, second vice president; H. C. Luttrell, third vice president; H. A. Alexander, honorary vice president; W. O. Reich was reelected secretary-treasurer.

Directors, W. O. Webster, S. D. Wright, D. T. Ingram, C. R. Humber, A. T. Maund and J. F. Beall.

SWEARING IN RADIO PROGRAM TRACED TO TWO MACAWS

Washington, December 5.—(AP)—Occasional flashes of profanity, uttered in Portuguese, which have enlivened several broadcasting programs of Station WRC here recently have been traced to two chattering macaws in the Pan-American Union building.

Latin-American concerns have been broadcast from the building and the birds, sitting nearby, without the required sense of propriety, injected their remarks without the knowledge of the broadcasting director. Their vocabulary, however, is comparatively mild, and as it is limited to Portuguese, no serious results have been noted.

LOUISVILLE G. O. P. DENIES CHARGES IN ELECTION SUIT

Louisville, December 5.—(AP)—Entering a general denial to all charges contained in the democratic election contest and reiterating their contention that Joseph T. O'Neal's nomination as head of the democratic ticket was illegal, the republicans filed their answer to suit in circuit court today.

The democrats, charging fraud and corruption, are contesting the election of November 3, at which the republican city ticket, headed by Arthur A. Will, now mayor, and the Jefferson county ticket, with a few minor exceptions, were elected. Thirty-four suits are pending.

Judge Lafon Allen and D. W. Edwards, chancellors in the election contest suit, previously had decided that O'Neal's nomination was legal. The republicans renewed their assault on his nomination, and asked that the votes credited to him be thrown out.

NEGRO APPOINTED ASSISTANT DISTRICT ATTORNEY OF U. S.

Springfield, Ill., December 5.—(AP) William C. Matthews, negro, Washington, D. C., arrived today to be assistant United States district attorney. He was sent by the department of justice after a disagreement between District Attorney Williamson and Senator Deneen over appointment of a permanent assistant.

Senator Deneen favored the appointment of a Springfield man, but Williamson, backed by Senator McKinley, desired that a Gillespie, Ill., man be named.

When the district attorney advised the department at Washington that he would not accept the Deneen candidate, he was notified that his office would have to do without an assistant. Later, however, the department sent Matthews, who will remain until the rush, due to the next term of court, is ended.

MERCER RADIO STATION WANTS LONGER WAVE

Macon, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—Undaunted by temporary refusals for an increase in wave lengths for WMAZ, radio broadcasting station of Mercer university, Dr. Claude Russell Fountain, director of the station, has announced that the work of seeking an increase for the station will be carried on in the future on a much larger scale.

Mercer's station is at present broadcasting with wave length of 261 meters. It seeks any increase above that number which it may obtain. Dr. Fountain, builder and director of WMAZ, states that it is difficult for all receiving sets to get the station early when the wave length is so low.

Atlanta Radio Exposition Will Open Monday Night

Atlanta's 1925 radio-electrical exposition, the biggest event of its kind in the history of the south, will open at the auditorium at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon.

The exposition, backed solidly by the Atlanta radio, electrical and allied trades, will continue through the week closing Saturday night. Continuous programs will be conducted in the crystal studio erected on the stage of the auditorium.

Among the features never before offered the radio public by any exposition outside of New York will be the personal appearances of Graham McNamee, announcer of WEAF, New York, who was awarded the title of "World's Best Announcer" for 1925, and Reinald Werrenrath, noted American baritone.

Other national and local radio attractions will be George Dewey Hay, announcer of WSM, Nashville, Tenn, "The Solemn Old Judge;" Ernest Rogers, known as "Old King Tut;" Johnny Persons, announcer for WGST, the Georgia School of Technology station; Ernest Floyd, announcer at WDBE, the Gilham-Schoen-Ludden and Bates station, and A. B. Robinson, assistant announcer at WSB.

The Ray-O-Vac Twins will be a daily attraction throughout the week. The twins have been a sensation at leading expositions of the year.

Nearly a thousand musicians and other entertainers, well-known in Atlanta and other cities, will present the daily entertainment programs. Mr. McNamee, who talks to millions of listeners nightly as spokesman for the American Telephone and Telegraph chain of stations, will be in personal charge of the crystal studio at the auditorium on Monday and Tuesday afternoon and night.

George Hay, of WSM, will be guest announcer in charge on Wednesday and Thursday night. Ed McConnell, of the well-known team of Ed and Grace McConnell, will be chief announcer Friday and Saturday, presenting himself and "Mama" in their familiar specialty.

The exposition announces the distribution of $2,000 in prizes in the form of complete new radio receivers, loud speakers, batteries, tubes and accessories to visitors. A grand opening prize of a complete console type receiver will be awarded Monday night. A right-tube superheterodyne, special console model, will be awarded on the closing night Saturday. Many other receivers and accessories will be distributed by individual exhibitors.

More than sixty booths, filled with every item connected with radio, will be on display from 2 until 11 o'clock at night. A special entrance on Gilmer street and a section of the gallery has been set aside for colored visitors.

Reinald Werrenrath, who will arrive Thursday morning, will be presented at the crystal studio at 8:15 o'clock Thursday night. His coming has attracted widespread attention among Atlanta music lovers.

NAPIER RETURNS FROM CHATTANOOGA RAILWAY HEARING

Attorney General George M. Napier returned to his office Saturday after spending the greater part of the week in Chattanooga attending the hearing on a proposal by that city to condemn street right-of-ways through property of Georgia, consisting of railroad terminals, owned in that city.

Mr. Napier made no comment on the hearing, stating that he felt it improper for him to advance any views on a matter waiting decision in the courts.

Next week the attorney general probably will appear in Fulton superior court to defend Dr. Peter S. Bahnsen, state veterinarian, in mandamus proceedings brought by the county of Colquitt to compel the state to bear the expense of tick eradication work in that county, necessary for lifting of a cattle quarantine now in effect.

Balkite Trickle Charger

Balkite Battery Charger

For charging Radio "A" 6-volt batteries. Entirely noiseless—it can be used while the set is in operation. If the battery should be low, you merely turn on the charger and operate the set. Charging rate 2.5 amperes. Price $19.50

Balkite "B" Replaces "B" batteries and supplies uniform plate current from the light socket. With its use your "B" current supply is always exactly what is required. Has no bulbs. Fits any set requiring not more than 20 milliamperes at 90 volts—practically all sets of 5 tubes or less, and most 6 tube sets. Fits in your present dry cell compartment. Price $35

Balkite "B" II The same popular model as offered last year. Same as Balkite "B" above, except it will fit any set including sets of 8 tubes or more. Price $55 provides "A" current from the light socket— $10

This charger may be connected to any 6 volt radio "A" battery of 30 ampere hour capacity or more and left permanently on charge. Used in this manner it converts your "A" battery into a permanent "A" power unit that operates from the light socket and automatically furnishes full current to the "A" circuit at all times.

With any smaller battery [4 volt or small 6 volt] this charger may be used as an intermittent charger of the usual type, or as a trickle charger if a resistance is added to cut down the charging rate to the needs of the set.

When used as a trickle charger, as an added convenience, some owners add a switch which cuts out the charger during operation. Switches of this type also turn on Balkite "B" when the set is turned on, thus providing an entirely automatic current supply for both circuits.

The Balkite Trickle Charger is 5½ in. long, 2¾ in. wide, 5 in. high. It may be put in the usual dry cell compartment. Charging rate .4 to .5 amperes. Current consumption 1/10¢ per hour. Operates from 110-120 AC 60 cycle current. Special model for 50 cycles.

Noiseless—No bulbs—Permanent

Like all other Balkite Radio Power Units the Balkite Trickle Charger is entirely noiseless in operation, and is a permanent piece of equipment, with no bulbs or moving parts, and nothing to replace, break or get out of order. Balkite Radio Power Units provide uniform constant current for both "A" and "B" circuits. Whatever type of set you own Balkite Radio Power Units will serve it. Sold by leading radio dealers everywhere.

FORD RUBBER-GROWING EXPERIMENT A SUCCESS

Henry Ford's experiment in growing rubber trees in Marion county, Florida, for future automobile tire rubber, is proving a success, despite the fact that a tender variety of trees was used and that perhaps they would be hardier in another year if they had been planted on higher ground instead of in the rich "hammock" land. This is the opinion of the nursery men who accepted the trees from the Ford agency in Ocala and set abem out under commercial treatment.

By commercial treatment is meant that the trees have received only the care that a large grove would get. All nine of the trees that were sent to the Ford agency here are alive. In the five months they have been in Marion county, they have grown from the size of a lead pencil and a few inches high, three-quarter caliber, or about the size of a broom stick, and several feet high.

They were placed in the low, "hammock" land, and at the end of five months were full of sap when a recent frost touched them. They were not injured, but in the opinion of the Wartmann Nursery company, which is caring for them, but the nurserymen believe that if the baby trees had been planted on higher ground they would perhaps not have grown so rapidly, but now would be in a more dormant condition for the winter.

It would be very easy for the nursery to give the trees special protection, but it is the object of the experiment to determine the commercial possibilities of thousands of acres of rubber trees, and in that case they could receive only such care as the nine now get.

There are thousands of acres, high and dry, in Marion county that would be ideal for a rubber plantation. No fertilizer would be needed. None has been used in the experiment.

Marion county is in the heart of the garden belt of Florida, and is the county where the tomato crop vies with the orange and grapefruit. There is a variety of soil, the lime deposit land, the high rolling pine land and the muck or peat. As it takes from six to eight years for rubber trees to reach the age when the sap is gathered for rubber, it is expected that Henry Ford's nine trees will fully determine the exact nature of soil best suited for such plantations in this county.

FORMER ATLANTAN EXPIRES ON VISIT TO NEW MEXICO

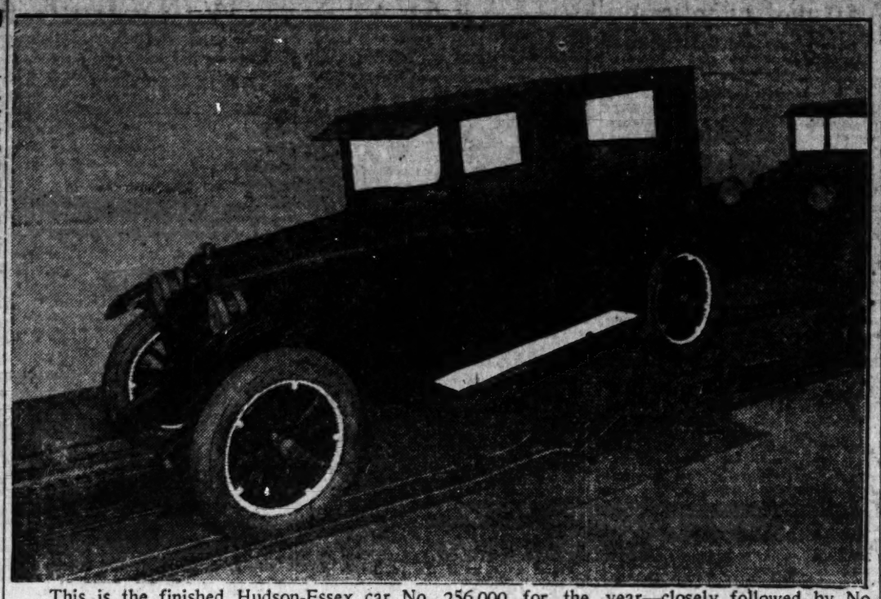

News of the death Tuesday in Deming, N. M., of Wheeler Shropshire, former Atlantan, was received Saturday in Atlanta.

Mr. Shropshire, who was president of the Southwestern Coca-Cola company, of Phoenix, Ariz., was on a business trip to Deming at the time of his death. He was born and reared in Atlanta, and for many years was connected with the Atlanta and West Point railroad.

Mr. Shropshire was the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Shropshire, Sr. He is survived by his widow, who was Miss Florence Parsons, of Shreveport, La.; one sister, Mrs. J. S. Colyar, of Rome, and five brothers, Julian C., of Atlanta; Frank W., of Shreveport; Edward F., of Kansas City; Clyde, of New York, and Ralph Shropshire, of Washington.

Funeral services were held in El Paso, Texas, where Mr. Shropshire had lived 10 years prior to his removal to Phoenix.

Hudson - Essex Doubles Its 1924 Record

This is the finished Hudson-Essex car No. 256,000 for the year—closely followed by No. 256,001. This is twice as many cars as Hudson-Essex built in all of 1924. Hudson-Essex has broken another record for volume business. Officials announce their production of motor car No. 256,000 for the year 1925 important because that is just twice the number of Hudson-Essex cars made in 1924, which was itself far in advance of any previous Hudson-Essex year.

Arrangements Complete For Big Auto Meeting

Everything is all set and the members and guests are waiting until 6:30 o'clock Monday evening, December 7, to tip the lid off the greatest annual meeting and celebration ever held by the Atlanta Automobile association. E. G. Beaudry, general chairman on arrangements, called his committee together during the past week for a final check-up of plans, and reports everything in splendid shape.

The nominating committee, of which R. N. Reed is chairman, will make its nominations and recommendations for officers for the association at the short business session at 5:30 o'clock, immediately preceding the festivities and banquet, and these new officers for 1926 will be elected by the membership. Brief reports will also be rendered by the retiring president, and the executive secretary, covering the activities of the association during 1925.

The outstanding feature of the annual meetings and celebrations of the Atlanta Automobile association is the elaborate and extravagant entertainment provided. A ban is put on speech-making, and with the exception of the short business session, preceding the celebration, the evening is given over to jollification and entertainment. No pains or expense have been spared this year to secure the very best talent available, and the committee having in charge arrangements for the meeting, promise an entertainment which will excel anything previously attempted by the association. Accompanying the entertainment will be an elaborate course dinner, which will be served promptly at 7 o'clock.

Owing to the growth in membership during the past year, the association found it necessary to stage the meeting this year at the Biltmore hotel. Judging from the large number of reservations for tickets that have poured into the executive offices during the past week, the large capacity of the banquet hall of the Biltmore will be taxed.

The retiring officers of the association are: T. K. Johnson, president; C. M. LeRoux, first vice president; R. N. Reed, second vice president; C. W. Dobbs, third vice president; F. L. Brandes, fourth vice president; J. B. Moore, fifth vice president; J. M. Becker, secretary, and E. G. Beaudry, treasurer.

The annual report of the president, which has just been mailed out to the members of the association, sets out at length many splendid achievements of the association during the year, and deals particularly with those activities of direct benefit to the automotive industry, bringing out clearly the financial value of an association of this kind to those engaged in any line of automotive industry. The outstanding accomplishment of the association during 1925 was its work at the summer session of the Georgia legislature, when it killed six bills of a very dangerous character to the industry, and assisted in securing the passage of four bills of very definite financial value to the industry and automobile users.

Don't believe all you hear; you are fortunate if you can believe all you say.—The Progressive Grocer.

TWO AUTO CONCERNS ENLARGE QUARTERS

Lease transactions have been announced by A. S. Adams-Cates company, of building at 522-24 Peachtree street, together with the garage building in the rear, for Charles P. Byrd to the Martin-Nash Motor company. This building contains about 30,000 square feet of space and will be occupied by the used car department of this company.

An enormous increase in the business of the Martin-Nash Motor company necessitated the use of their entire building at the corner of Peachtree and North avenue for the regular business and it is of interest that this company led the entire United States during the month of November in percentage of sales increase of Nash cars, officials stated.

For the DuPree estate to the Olds Motor Works, for the use of its southern distributing branch, the five story building at 112-114 West Peachtree street containing over 45,000 square feet of space. T. K. Johnson, branch manager and president of the Atlanta Automobile association, states that this move was necessary to take care of the rapidly increasing business in this district. The building will be completely renovated and will be one of the handsomest automobile establishments in the city. The total considerations of these two leases amount to about $100,000.

ADDITIONS MADE TO CADILLAC PLANT

Three million dollars are being spent by the Cadillac Motor Car company for additions to its manufacturing and retail facilities in Detroit.

Ground was broken yesterday at the company's Clark avenue plant as the first step in a new expansion program entailing this outlay for buildings and equipment.

The new development will include assembly and administration buildings at the plant and additions to present retail sales and maintenance buildings at Cass avenue and York street and on East Jefferson avenue.

Previous developments in the present schedule have been the recent completion of new brass, aluminum and iron foundries covering seven acres of ground and the installation of new manufacturing equipment, the two requiring an outlay of $5,000,000. The added plant facilities are for the purpose of increasing output.

Announcement of the company's plans was authorized today by Lawrence P. Fisher, Cadillac president.

The new administration building will release space in the manufacturing buildings now occupied by the general offices; and the new assembly unit, 750x125 feet in size, will facilitate a complete rearrangement of the interior of the manufacturing buildings for increasing production.

"Every month since the introduction of the new Cadillac," Mr. Fisher states, "production records have been mounting and surpassing all previous records in Cadillac history. Every department has been working overtime. Night forces have been added in many departments. In October we produced 3,200 cars, the largest number ever produced by Cadillac in any one month. More unfilled orders are on hand for the new car than at any previous time in our history.

"The new plant of our company was built in 1921, gathering into one location the operations which had been carried on in 77 small shops scattered throughout the city. It was thought at that time facilities were adequate for expansion for a number of years. However, building operations have been constantly in process since that time.

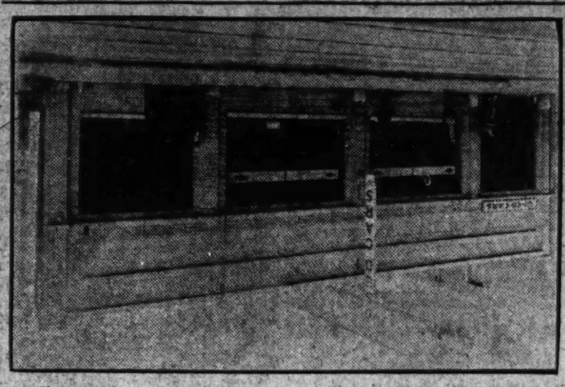

"The new foundries, which were built particularly for closer control of quality in castings, are ample for a 100 per cent increase in output. The Cadillac plant is situated on a triangle between the Michigan Central and New York Central tracks and now covers 53 acres of land."

Boys' Corn Yield Spur Dads To Try For $1,000 Prize

Ashburn, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—The results of the Turner County Boys' Cotton and Corn club farming has, figuratively speaking, "set the woods on fire." Ambition has taken hold of the older generation to come somewhere near the per acre production of the boys both in cotton and corn.

With the $1,000 prize offered by an Atlanta bank to the farmer who will make the most corn on five acres of ground, and the accomplishments of J. B. Davis, prize winner of the Turner County Corn club who produced 85 bushels of corn on one acre at a net cost of 23c per bushel, has put courage into eight Turner county farmers, with more to follow, to enter for the $1,000 prize to the farmer in each district who will make the most corn on five acres. The goal of each bank is to have 100 contestants.

BRINKERHOFF WITH STANDARD TRUCK

W. H. Binkerhoff, dean of motor truck district men, has joined the Standard Motor Truck company, of Detroit, as eastern district sales manager.

Mr. Brinkerhoff is a veteran of the old wagon days, when he was employed by the Studebaker company. He quickly sensed the future of motorized transportation, and diverted his activities to the new industry.

Today his acquaintances in the motor trade include the largest and smallest dealers in every important city in the east, including the New England states. He served continuously with one company for thirteen years before joining the Standard organization.

The appointment of Mr. Brinkerhoff is another step in the expansion plans of the Standard Motor Truck company. Standard heavy duty trucks have been serving American industry for almost fifteen years. The Fisher Fast Freight, a 11-2-ton speed truck, was introduced early this year to meet the demands of faster hauling.

The Fisher Fast Freight has been accorded hearty approval by hundreds of users, in overseas countries as well as in America, and Mr. Brinkerhoff will acquaint the eastern market more fully with the merits of this truck.

MOHAIR VELVET

The Superior Fabric for Closed Motor Car Upholstery

EXPERIENCE has taught thousands of motorists that mohair velvet, and particularly Chase VELMO, the Perfected Mohair Velvet, is the most beautiful, comfortable and durable upholstery fabric for closed cars.

Chase VELMO is a first quality, rich, deep pile Velvet woven from mohair fleece—two and one-half times stronger than wool; much stronger than cotton.

Long after the beauty of ordinary fabrics (not made of mohair) has vanished, VELMO looks as good as new.

You settle back in luxurious ease on cushions of VELMO—as soft and yielding as those of your favorite easy chair. Comfort is yours in all seasons and for every mile you travel.

Both men and women admire the soft, velvety surface and lovely colors of VELMO—enjoy the dignified elegance it lends to a car.

When re-sale time arrives, VELMO proves a real investment. Because the upholstery has not depreciated the car commands a far higher price than one with low-cost, travel-worn upholstery.

VELMO is standard equipment on many closed cars; but, if necessary, specify VELMO for your car and pay $20 to $60 more for this—the finest upholstery material. When you re-sell or turn in the car you will, no doubt, receive $50 to $150 more for it. No other fabric affords you this extra value to such an extent as does VELMO.

Remember the trademark name, "VELMO," identifying the product of Sanford Mills where standards have been rigidly maintained. These mills have refused to produce inferior mohair velvets which could not be guaranteed as is VELMO—the superior fabric for closed car upholstery.

Mohair, from which Chase VELMO is made, is the silky, lustrous, snow-white fleece of the Angora goat, from far off Turkey.

Through countless centuries mohair fabrics have been prized for their beauty and durability. Today Chase VELMO is recognized as an aristocrat of the textile world and the supreme achievement in the art of mohair velvet weaving.

VELMO upholstered motor cars, when re-sold, invariably bring higher prices. You are allowed from $50 to $150 more for your closed car because dealers save the cost of re-upholstering.

MILLIONS INVESTED IN NEW HUPMOBILES

An investment of $32,000,000 has already been made by the public in Hupmobile Eights, says O. C. Hutchinson, general sales manager of the Hupp Motor Car corporation, though the car has not yet been on the market a year.

This fact, Mr. Hutchinson points out, is another record for the car which, from the beginning, became the largest selling straight eight in the world.

"When Hupp decided, two years before the car actually appeared, to build a straight eight, it based its decision on the advantages of the eight-in-line principle in its smooth power, flexibility and inherent freedom from vibration," he says. "Smoothness of performance at all speeds, all-around reliability and an economy of operation unknown to the eight-cylinder field were features toward which our engineers and manufacturing departments built. They also strove to bring to the public, through these and other features, a new conception of really fine motoring, combining comfort with speed; captivating beauty of appearance and line; powerful, hair-trigger pick-up; steering and braking of unsurpassed ease—with the dependability, long life and economy with which the name Hupmobile has been indeliby associated. Actual road tests by the company, together with the records the car has already made in the hands of thousands of owners, have proved that the features we desired have been built into the car.

"The $32,000,000 which buyers have already invested in this car in less than a year is only the beginning. The year 1926 will be an even larger one for the eight, which simply means that the car will go right on breaking its own records, which are, likewise, records for the entire industry."

GWINNETT COURT OPENS ON MONDAY AT LAWRENCEVILLE

Lawrenceville, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—Gwinnett superior court, of the Piedmont circuit will convene here Monday, December 7 for a two weeks' grind. Judge W. W. Stark, of Commerce, will preside, with Solicitor General P. Cooley, of Jefferson, looking after the state's interest. There are several important cases expected to come up for trial.

It is thought that Glenn House and Guy Anderson will be brought to trial, charged with the killing of Officer Webb near Norcross sometime ago.

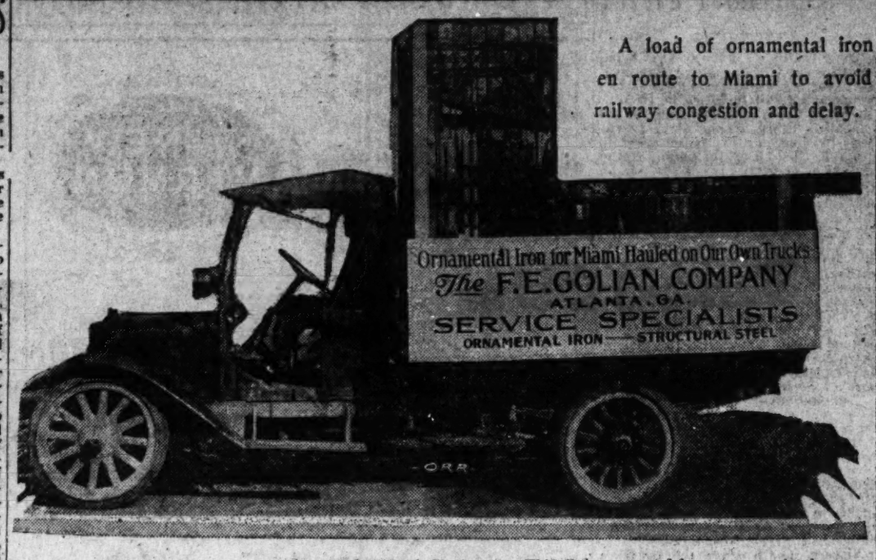

LAWRENCEVILLE FIRE THREATENS BLOCK

Lawrenceville, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—Fire was discovered between the ceiling and roof of the two-story brick building in the business center on Perry street here this afternoon about 6 o'clock and except for the prompt work of the fire department, would have probably resulted disastrously. The second story of the building is owned and occupied by attorney Isaac L. Oakes and the ground floor by Jackson's Grocery and the Strand theater.

Considerable damage was done by water to the occupants of the building. The roof and under section was damaged by fire which endangered the entire block.

The extent of the damage has not been ascertained at this time. It is thought that fire was caused by wiring or flue.

Freight Shipped to Miami by Truck

A load of ornamental iron en route to Miami to avoid railway congestion and delay.

Atlanta progress and enterprise are exemplified in the inauguration by one of our large establishments of a truck service direct to various Florida points from Atlanta.

The F. E. Golian company, pioneers in the ornamental and structural steel manufacturing in Atlanta, is one of the largest organizations turning out this class of work south of Washington and east of Cincinnati. This illustration shows the firm shipping a truck load of ornamental iron direct to a client in Miami, thus enabling an important building undertaking to be completed within a time limit.

The history of this concern reads like a romance in the realm of industry. Beginning with a very small shop in Atlanta in 1917, in the period of eight years the company has risen to the rank of one of the foremost ornamental iron concerns in the country. The most beautiful and ornate designs of every conceivable description are turned out at the shops in Oakland City and the output is distributed throughout the south, in many sections of the north, west and southwest. In fact, geographical lines are disregarded and the distribution is national wherever artistry and the highest class of smithcraft, whether in iron or bronze, is sought.

COAST LINE BEGINS WINTER TOURIST TRAIN

The Florida Special, the Atlantic Coast Line's famous winter tourist train, will be inaugurated from New York Monday, December 7, southbound, and from Miami, northbound, December 9, it was announced Saturday.

As in previous years, the Florida Special will be composed exclusively of the latest feature Pullman sleeping cars, library observation and dining cars. The dining car service will be a feature, each car having a seating capacity of 48 persons (the largest type diner in use on American railroads), and stewards and crew especially selected for this duty on their records for efficiency. On account of this large capacity and by limiting the number of passengers carried to the regular Pullman accommodations there will be an overcrowding at meals. All passengers being served promptly.

The announcement of inauguration of the Florida Special, is especially noteworthy this season as it will operate over the newly-completed double track of the Atlantic Coast Line between Richmond and Jacksonville. Every mile of this double track is guarded by electric automatic block safety signals and a goodly portion also equipped with electric automatic train protection devices which will stop the train even though block signals are not seen by the engineer. This gives the Atlantic Coast Line the only road to Florida so equipped and enables it to handle the enormous volume of traffic brought about by the unaparalleled prosperity in the south and Florida, it is said.

The Atlantic Coast Line is now operating into Florida 19 tourists trains per day, nine from the east and ten from the west, five of the western trains being operated through Atlanta, i. e., "Flamingo," "Dixie Limited," "Dixie Flyer," "Dixie Express" and "Southland."

The "Flamingo" and "Dixie Limited" are operated from Atlanta in the morning, arriving at Jacksonville in the afternoon, giving a daylight trip between Atlanta and Jacksonville.

GEORGIA REALTORS ATTEND STATE MEET

The Georgia Association of Real Estate Boards will hold its fifth annual convention in Atlanta on December 9-10, according to announcement by A. S. Adams, president of the Atlanta real estate board.

Headquarters for the convention will be at the Ansley hotel and several functions to be given by local realtors in honor of visiting real estate men also will be held in that hostelry, it was stated.

The gathering of members of the state real estate association in Atlanta during the coming week will bring into this city prominent realtors and business men from all sections of Georgia. Elaborate plans have been made for the entertainment of visitors by Dana Belser, J. R. Smith, John J. Thompson and Jesse Draper, who were named chairmen of various sub-committees by President A. S. Adams.

President Josiah Flournoy, of Columbus, head of the state association of real estate boards, who will preside at the annual convention, has addressed a call to all members eligible to admission, urging them to attend the gathering here December 9-10.

A full program of the meeting and other detailed information concerning the convention will be found on the real estate review in another section of this issue.

CARPENTER FAVORS ANNEX TO CITY HALL

Alderman J. L. Carpenter Saturday announced that he favors a plan to retain the present city hall, purchase all other property in that block, erect an annex and give it the new name of City Hall square.

This plan, he said, he preferred in place of that sponsored by Councilman C. G. Allen and other members of council to float $2,000,000 in bonds for erection of a new municipal building joining the Fulton county courthouse.

POSTOFFICE ROBBERS GET $20,000 STAMPS

Stillwater, Minn., December 5.—(AP) Burglars knocked off the dials of three vaults in the Stillwater postoffice early today and escaped with approximately $20,000 in stamps and cash.

JORDAN LINE EIGHT IN BIG PRODUCTION

With production on the new Jordan line eight running at 65 cars a day, October shipments from the factory this year ran way ahead of October a year ago, showing an increase of 140 per cent.

November will show an increase of 190 per cent over November a year ago, according to Edward S. Jordan, president of the Jordan Motor Car company.

"It is very evident from even a casual view of the situation that the public in this country wants the same things in a motor car that Europe has had for years. They want light weight, economy, unusual comfort, speed, easy handling and smart lines.

"Smaller cars are coming fast in the United States because of this demand which has been brought about by the ever increasing traffic even in the smaller cities and towns.

"Jordan sales used to be concentrated almost entirely in the larger cities but with the advent of the lighter, lower priced models an entirely new market has been tapped in towns of from 5,000 to 25,000."

URBAN LEAGUE WEEKLY BULLETIN

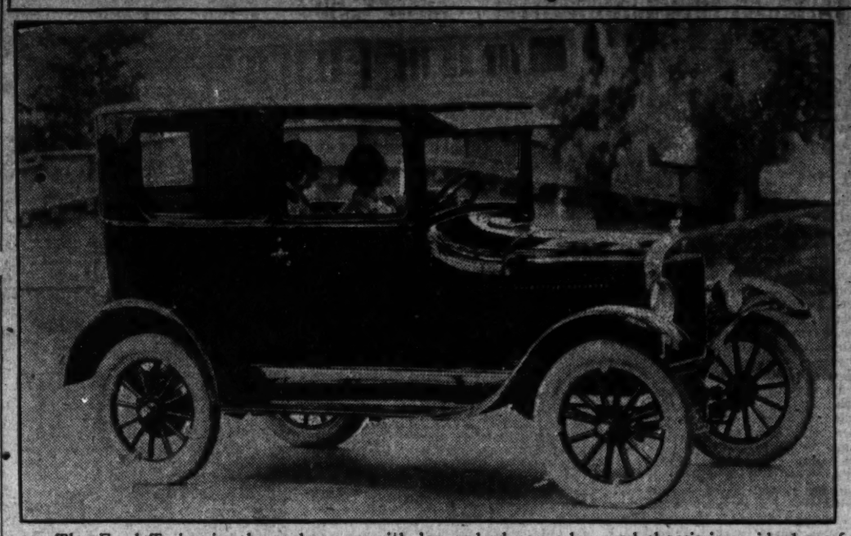

A recent fire completely destroyed the main building of the Teacher Training and Industrial Institute at Athens, Ga. This institution was founded by Judia C. Jackson Harris, who is the present principal. Few women of any race group have contributed more, single-handedly and alone, in the face of well nigh unsurmountable difficulty, to the educational progress of a community, than has this woman. She went into a community actively hostile to her purpose and program, but by reason of demonstrated merits and worth of the institution she came to establish, and through the concrete results of the work of her graduates, she was able to convert the community and make her erstwhile enemies her staunch friends and supporters. The fact that the building was destroyed suggests almost tragedy in the educational life of the colored people of this particular community as well as a most unfortunate experience in the life of the founder. All people interested in giving the negro youth a chance to be educated and in maintaining the influence of an agency of community contact may find an opportunity here in contributing toward the replacing of this building. On behalf of negro education and in the interest of a servant of people, whose life for 20 years has been on the altar of sacrificial service, we send out this appeal.

The contest among quartettes of the city which is being sponsored by the Fine Arts Study club will be held at Liberty Baptist church, Thursday night, December 10, promptly at 8 o'clock. Six college in the city will participate also four quartettes. Among them we mention the Georgia Railway quartette, the Rigoletto quartette, the Graduate quartette and others. The admission will be 15 cents.

W. C. T. U. PRESIDENT HAS MOVED TO MACON

Macon, Ga., December 5.—(Special.) Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, state president of the W. C. T. U., has moved from Eastman to Macon and will open state headquarters of that organization here, it is announced.

Tudor Ford Ideal Family Closed Car

The Ford Tudor in channel green with lower body on a lowered chassis is an ideal car for family use. With generous room for five adult passengers, the Tudor has been redesigned to incorporate many new features of comfort and roadability, including the placing of the gasoline tank under the cowl where it may be filled from the outside, one-piece ventilating windshield, lower seats, improved control and larger, more powerful brakes.

BIGGEST DRIVE-AWAY BY WILLYS-OVERLAND

Continuing their high sales record of an average of more than 1,000 cars a month since January 1, the Chicago factory branch of Willys-Overland and its dealers established a new mark when they held the largest single day's drive-away in Chicago automobile history recently.

Dealers under the Chicago branch, who had gathered to celebrate their part in the Willys derby, national sales contest of Willys-Overland, drove away from Chicago 401 automobiles with a total retail valuation of more than $500,000. A cash payment of $348,921.71 was made by the 529 dealers in attendance to cover this huge drive-away of cars which marks a continuation of exceptional sales in Illinois territory for Willys-Overland.

President John N. Willys was on hand to take part in the festivities, which were held in municipal pier and bore all the markings of a real derby day, designated as "Willys Day" in honor of Willys-Overland's head. That the meeting was an indication of the unusual dealer success in this territory is shown by the registration figures in Illinois, which rates Willys-Overland third in the number of cars registered in the state and with the same position in Cook county.

More than 11,000 automobiles were delivered to Chicago dealers in the period from January 1 to November 1, with a total retail value of more than $14,000,000. Willys-Overland's September and October deliveries from the Chicago branch totaled 2,202 automobiles this year, representing an increase of practically 300 per cent over the corresponding period of 1924.

EAST POINT WOODMEN ELECT NEW OFFICERS

East Point, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—At the regular meeting of the Woodmen of the World, East Point camp No. 702, Friday evening, the officers for the coming year were elected. A large crowd attended the meeting, and after the election refreshments were served. The installation will take place in about a month.

The following were elected: C. D. Owens, consul commander; O. B. Smith, banker; W. H. Byers, advisor lieutenant; C. H. Thompson, clerk; E. W. Petty, escort; R. F. Edwards, watchman; H. J. Jenkins, sentry, and two managers, P. B. Erwin and J. M. Harkins.

This is one of the youngest camps in the state and has a strong membership.

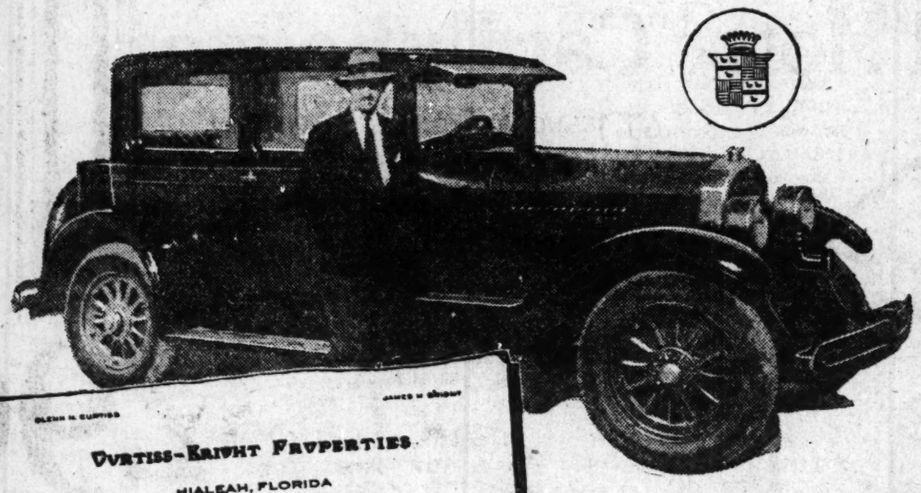

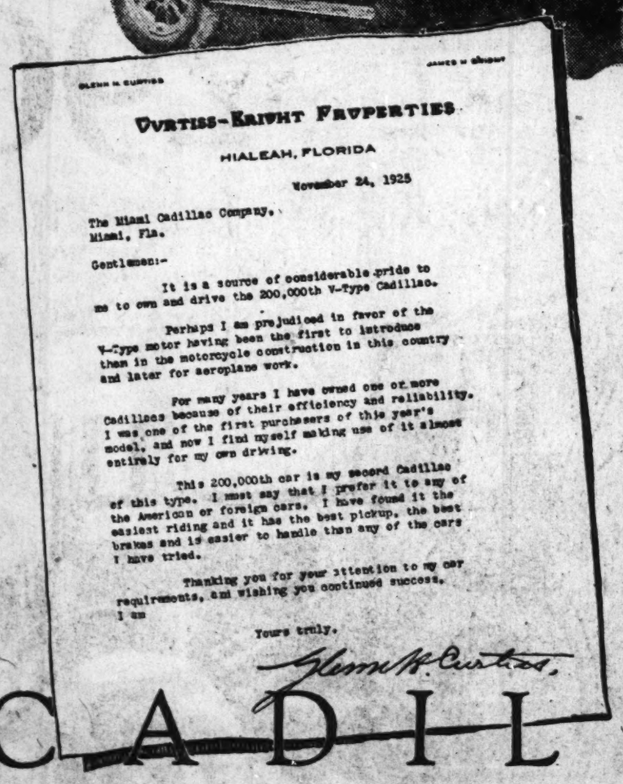

Aching Joints Neuritis Lumbago Rheumatism

With applicator attached to cork, just brush "Heet" over the pain area, whether in knees, hands, shoulders, feet, legs, back, neck or body. Instantly, you feel this harmless, glorious, penetrating heat draw the pain right out of the aching or swollen joint, muscle or nerve. Besides, "Heet" scatters the congestion and establishes a cure.

"Heet" contains two soothing, penetrating ingredients, too expensive to use in ordinary liniments or analgesics. "Heet" is a clean, fragrant liquid; doesn't stain, blister or irritate the skin. Druggists guarantee each 60-cent bottle.—(adv.)

200,000th 90-degree Cadillac Bought By Glenn H. Curtiss

GLENN H. CURTISS JAMES H. ARMOUR

CURTISS-KNIGHT PROPERTIES

HIALEAH, FLORIDA

November 24, 1925

The Miami Cadillac Company,
Miami, Fla.

Gentlemen:-

It is a source of considerable pride to me to own and drive the 200,000th V-Type Cadillac.

Perhaps I am prejudiced in favor of the V-Type motor having been the first to introduce them in the motorcycle construction in this country and later for aeroplane work.

For many years I have owned one or more Cadillacs because of their efficiency and reliability. I was one of the first purchasers of this year's model, and now I find myself making use of it almost entirely for my own driving.

This 200,000th car is my second Cadillac of this type. I must say that I prefer it to any of the American or foreign cars. I have found it the easiest riding and it has the best pickup, the best brakes and is easier to handle than any of the cars I have tried.

Thanking you for your attention to my car requirements, and wishing you continued success, I am

Yours truly,

Glenn H. Curtiss.

In common with the great majority of the world's leading aeroplane manufacturers and experts, Mr. Curtiss feels that the V-Type engine possesses in a marked degree the compactness and dependability which are absolutely necessary for aeroplane use.

Obviously, therefore, he chooses a Cadillac—and as his letter shows, is gratified to get the 200,000th car. Cadillac is pioneer of the world-famous V-Type principle—which, in the new 90-degree Cadillac, is developed and perfected to its highest and finest pitch.

See the new 90-degree Cadillac for yourself. A demonstration will reveal qualities of motor car performance beyond anything you imagined possible.

STUDEBAKER CHIEF TALKS ON FINANCING

In answer to the criticism of automobile time sales, A. R. Erskine, president of the Studebaker Corporation of America, says:

"Without desiring to justify the abuse of credit, the automobile industry must vigorously use and defend it against unwarranted attack.

"The whole business structure of the nation and our present standard of living are supported by credit, and principally by consumer credit.

"Credit to consumers and time payments are made operative by our finance companies, rediscounting through our banks and trust companies, which normally supply commercial credits. Combined, these financial institutions comprise the greatest banking system ever created, and supply machinery for the conduct of business and credit which is a marvel of efficiency and effectiveness.

"Manufacturers, merchants and financiers fully realize today, as never before, that the wheels of business cannot be kept turning, on a broad scale, without mass consumption.

"That credit must be available to consumers as well as to producers and distributors of the products of industry and agriculture. Mass consumption is necessary to support mass production and high wages, and mass credit is the Atlas which holds up all of them.

"The United States is primarily an industrial country. Our citizens who live in the great industrial regions north of the Ohio and Potomac rivers prosper when the plants are operating and suffer when they are not.

"The automobile industry ranks first among all manufacturing industries in the United States; $2,000,000,000 of capital is invested in it. Its wage and salary rolls amount to nearly $600,000,000 annually, and over 3,000,000 persons are employed directly or indirectly by it.

"It discovered and applied quantity production and doubled the wage standard of the country. It was the chief instrumentality in developing the high standard of living we enjoy today. Its benefits to the country are incalculable.

"Samuel W. Reyburn, president of the Associated Dry Goods corporation, recently said:

"'Those who adhere to a false idea of thrift, and frown upon the sound economic principle of paying for things as they use them, inflict unnecessary denial upon themselves. The truly thrifty man is the man who organizes his buying in line with his resources, present and future, not the man who hoards for the sake of hoarding.

"'Decent, satisfactory, comfortable living, always within one's means of present and future fulfillment of obligations, is necessary to success in any business or calling, and credit is necessary to such a standard of living.

"'No thoughful man should go hopelessly into debt for luxuries. But the use of credit in living and in business is the use of the chief instrument for success, because establishment of credit means establishment of the capacity to keep promises, and of the right to the standard of living that capacity entitles one to.'

"Post-war prosperity of the United States has amazed the world. We are getting along pretty well today. Savings bank figures disprove claims that the automobile is absorbing all of the money in the country.

"Figures supplied by the comptroller of the currency show for the decade from 1914 to 1924 the number of savings banks decreased from 2,100 to 1,603, but the number of depositors increased from 11 to 14 millions, the total deposits from 4,900 millions to 8,400 millions and the average amount per depositor from $444 to $605.

"Life insurance policies outstanding increased during the same decade from 39 to 86 millions, the amount of insurance from 21 to 64 billion and the average policy from $545 to $742.

"Who wants to go back to the pre-war conditions of output, wages and standard of living?"

YARBROUGH CO. SELLS MENTZER PARTNERSHIP

Rumors that there would be a change in the distributorship for Studebaker cars for Atlanta were allayed Saturday by an announcement coming from the Studebaker corporation of the retirement from their service of M. S. Mentzer, who for the past five years has been identified with the Studebaker corporation as manager for their Atlanta branch.

"This retirement," said Mr. Mentzer, "does not mean that I am giving up the Studebaker, for I have just completed arrangements that give me an interest in the Yarborough Motor company, who have been distributors for Georgia for the past several years. Mr. Yarborough still holds the controlling stock in the company and will continue to direct its business, there being no change in the personnel of their present organization, other than my addition to the firm."

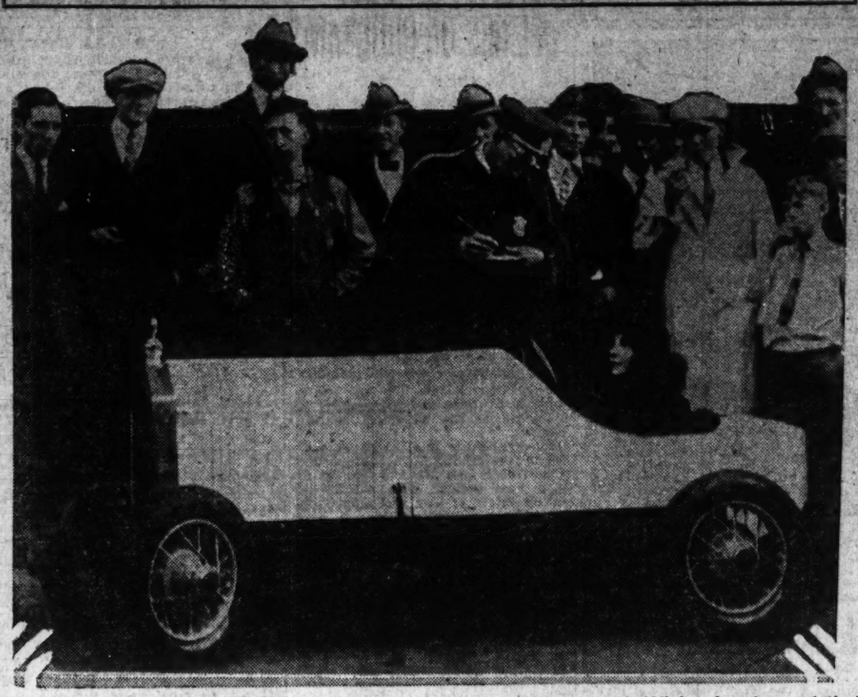

Mr. Mentzer's loss to the Studebaker corporation is keenly felt by them, for under his direction in the southeast their growth in the last few years has been nothing short of phenomenal; and, according to factory officials, his retirement from their service would never have been permitted had it not been the desire of Mr. Mentzer for some time to have an interest in a business that would enable him to give up his duties of traveling.

10 CENTS PER POUND IS PAID FOR HOGS

Thomasville, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—The next cooperative hog sale for Thomas county will be held here on Wednesday, December 9. County Agent Pat Ward, is expecting a fine showing of hogs at that time.

Camilla reports a sale there this week of Mitchell county hogs which was quite successful. There were three heavy carloads of hogs that were sold at $10.30 per hundred on a basis of No. 1. They were bought by the Hall Commission company, of Moultrie.

Frank Wickersham's Greased Lightning

Miss Francis Porter, of The Constitution staff, didn't take Frank Wickersham's word that this miniature car would exceed all speed laws, and the cameraman happened along just as Officer McGill had cornered the "culprit" and the result is shown above. This little car actually runs and is one of ten built by the Stearns-Knight Motor company as an experiment. It is on display all this week in the showrooms of the Atlanta Stearns company, 46 East North Ave.

UNIFORM INVOICE ADOPTED BY FORD

The little matter of "bills" is now worrying big business, although not in the same sense that it has always qualified as the bane of existence of the average householder. In domestic life, the butcher and baker present their gentle reminders of obligations and, if the bank account is still going strong, the incident is happily concluded. There is no particular dismay aroused if the "invoice number" on the statement for shoes for the pride of the household is at the top or bottom of the page. Nor is any particular loss of time occasioned by the fact that the "F. O. B." indication may be a bit obscure.

Automobile manufacturers, steel producers and hundreds of other huge organizations, however, have discovered that virtually years of time and millions of dollars are literally thrown away annually because of the individuality expressed in the make-up of the bills they receive. So big business has made a move to remove all unnecessary expense in connection with paying its bills. That move is expressed in the uniform invoice.

Investigation by efficiency engineers has disclosed the fact that one type of invoice form entirely covers the field. It was evolved after some years of study by the Ford Motor company. The makers of Ford cars, dealing with practicaly every type of concern devised an invoice form that incorporated the individual needs of every business, and passed it along to the concerns with which it was in contact for their use. It now appears that the form will come into general use throughout the entire country.

"In keeping with the idea of service," a statement by the company explains, "we have been passing on to the organizations with which we are in contact a condensed form of invoice which means the same kind of a saving for those firms as in ours. The saving begins when the invoice is first typed by the seller and continues even after it is filed away by the customer. Time is saved in at least a dozen points of handling; paper is saved which would amount to an amazing total for a year in a large organization; postage is greatly reduced and delays cut. Another vital factor is the reduction of the danger of error, in itself a conclusive argument."

WAPLES TO SPEAK AT WRITERS' CLUB MEETING THURSDAY

The Atlanta Writers' club will meet Thursday night at 7 o'clock in the banquet hall of the Atlanta Woman's club. Professor A. M. Waples, of the Georgia School of Technology, will speak on "Writing Advertisements." Miss Frances Woodberry will sing, and a few select manuscripts will be read.

Reservations may be made by noon Wednesday with Mrs. Simmons, Hemlock 0225.

GLASSMOBILE, AN IDEAL EQUIPMENT, DISTRIBUTED HERE

The Southern Motor Equipment company, 214 Spring street, distributors of automotive equipment, have announced their distributorship of Glassmobile for the southeastern territory.

Glassmobile is a glass window for open cars, the newest development along this line and an article which established itself in favor with the motoring public from the minute of its introduction. A set of Glassmobile window panels immediately converts an open car into a closed job, with all the comforts and conveniences of the latter and the desirability of the former. The popularity of the equipment is best evidenced by the fact that 13 prominent automobile factories in this country have adopted Glassmobile as standard factory equipment and equip cars at the factory for distribution throughout the country. These manufacturers include the most prominent concerns in the country.

In bringing Glassmobile distribution to the southeast the Southern Motor Equipment company has introduced a product which will find marked favor here. The supplanting of celluloid or bagging glass window curtains is a feature which has long been desired. However, Glassmobile is in no wise an enclosure, or winter top, or a cold weather proposition. It is as affective in summer as in winter, requiring only a few minutes to erect and maintaining a rigid, handsome appearance. When the need for protection has passed the panels are carried in a shallow container in the car, out of the way and entirely convenient.

Glassmobile is built on a patented construction plan which prevents warping or sagging and its installation requires no change in the car's top and does not mar or scratch the finish. Scientific ventilation—the bugaboo of the average curtain—is achieved through a simple device which is highly desirable and entirely accurate.

Glassmobile is built to fit all makes and models of cars manufactured. Sufficient stock will be carried in the Atlanta distributorship to care for the rush of business which has already begun. The popularity of Glassmobile in Atlanta is an established fact and this popularity has come about without the stimulus of progressive sales promotion. Cars originally equipped at the factory have proven so convenient and desirable that a demand for Glassmobile was automatically created, and since the intial announcement of the local representation there has been an avalanche of business.

The officials of the local company are enthusiastic over the prospects and have announced their intention of developing the territory allotted them in an intensive fashion—which means Glassmobile representation throughout the southeast.

Pierce-Arrow Sales Show Permanency of Market for Big Cars

Pierce-Arrow's experience in building two types of motor cars is being cited throughout the automobile industry as a demonstration of the permanency of the demand for cars of large proportions, according to General Sales Manager L. E. Corcoran.

The Pierce-Arrow company devoted many years to the development of big, powerful cars. When the company added a line of more modestly proportioned cars a year and a half ago, it caused speculation as to what effect the lighter car would have on the big car sales.

"It may surprise some to learn that the success of our moderately priced car has strengthened the position of our larger car," says Mr. Corcoran.

"The fact is that there always has been and always will be a demand for a car of large proportions. A long wheelbase gives engineers an opportunity which is denied them in cars of short wheelbase. They possess superlative qualities of road comfort and luxury.

"The introduction of our series 80 enabled us to quadruple our sales and service points throughout the country. This brought our larger car within geographical reach of thousands of people who formerly were too far from a service headquarters to warrant owning a car.

"For that reason the sales of our larger Dual Valve Six models continue strong."

NEW CLASS OFFICERS TAKE PLACES TODAY

Judge T. E. Patterson, newly elected teacher of the Brewster Bible class of the College Park Methodist church, and recently elected officers of the class will be inducted into office this morning at special exercises, it was announced Saturday by S. T. Allen, class reporter.

Judge Patterson and the officers were named at a meeting of the class held last Sunday. They were named for the conference year.

The class is named in honor of the late Colonel P. H. Brewster, former teacher. It has grown from a small class to one of the largest in College Park.

In addition to Mr. Allen, officers of the organization who will be inducted today are E. P. Hunt, president; J. E. Baxemore, vice president, and E. C. Smith, secretary.

EUROPE WAKES UP TO AMERICAN MOTOR CARS

Europe has finally awakened to the American automobile, with results already observed in increased sales and in the promise of continued buying at a far greater rate than ever before, according to reports brought to Detroit by Sidney H. Diman, of Paris, European manager for the Paige-Detroit Motor Car company.

Until recently Europeans looked upon the American car as inferior to their home product; they regarded American quantity production merely as a means of obtaining larger output at low cost. They were, therefore, easily swayed by patriotic appeals that they should support their home industry.

However, now that American cars have demonstrated that they are as good as Europe's best, dollar for dollar, its people are quite willing to benefit in the reduced costs obtained under American methods.

Diman's forecast for greater buying applies especially to Germany, which for the first time in years is in position to take a large number of American cars. Until recently, the German government had enforced an embargo against the import of cars, but the restrictions have been lifted, with immediate results, Germany now being one of the best of European customers for cars made in America.

E. Freiherr von Spiegel, distributor for the Paige and the Jewett in Germany, who accompanies Diman, reports that the German people are eager to acquire American cars, which they hold in high favor.

Sven du Rietz, who represents the Paige company as distributor in Sweden, asserts that conditions there are equally favorable.

According to Diman, the demand for American cars is general. Business in Spain is improving, and even France, despite its frequent political and financial crises, is on a "business as usual" basis and is buying American made cars in greater quantities. A favorable outlook also is reported in countries from which comparatively little business has been expected, such as Poland, Greece and others.

SHRINERS COMPLETE CEREMONIAL PLANS

With arrangements for Yaarab temple's great "victory" ceremonial session on December 19 practically all arranged, applications for membership must be in the possession of Recorder George E. Argard on December 8. The list will be printed and mailed to all nobles on December 9 and the business meeting for election of candidates will be held at Shrine headquarters December 16.

The ceremonial will be in part a celebration of the raising of one million dollars to build Yaarab temple's new mosque, and as it will be one of the last events in the administration of Potentate Charles A. Bowen, his aides are planning to make it a big event in the history of the temple.

Official announcement of the ceremonial was sent to all nobles during the past week to urge them to present a large list of applications for membership. The announcement also carried official documents from the potentate, chief of which were that the minimum dues of all Shrine temples had been increased to $10 a year, with $2 extra as hospital assessment, and that an official Shrine publication would be sent to every noble, this journal taking the place of the Crescent.

STATE HIGHWAY BOARD CONCLUDES TWO-DAY SESSION

Confining its busines to routine administrative matters, the state highway board concluded a two-day session Saturday. The Saturday morning session was held at the offices in the capitol, when the Friday session was held at East Point.

A number of counties sent delegations asking allotment of additional mileage for the state highway system authorized under a bill passed by the last legislature, but the board took no action, having announced that it will allow all counties asking additional mileage until February 1 to file their claims.

All members of the highway, which consists of Chairman John N. Holder, Stanley S. Bennett and John R. Phillips, attended the meeting, as well as Chief Engineer W. R. Neel and Seward M. Smith, attorney for the department.

GOBAY STABBED, REFUSES TO NAME HIS ASSAILANT

H. E. Gobay, 36, of 260 Highland avenue came to Grady hospital late Saturday afternoon and asked for treatment for a knife wound in his side. He told doctors that he had been stabbed but refused to give any details of the stabbing.

Several stitches were taken in the wound and he was allowed to go home. Police had no report of the affair.

JEWS OF ATLANTA TO PAY TRIBUTE TO GREAT AUTHOR

A mass meeting will be held at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon at the Arbeiter Ring lyceum, 207 Capitol avenue, to celebrate the 60th anniversary of Dr. Chain Zhitlovsky, internationally known Jewish literary thinker and author. A number of Jewish literary and cultural societies have arranged the local celebration.

Friends and followers of Dr. Zhitlovsky all over the country are paying tribute to his achievements in the realm of thought and literature and meetings are being held in many cities throughout the United States and Europe.

School of Health.

At the regular meeting of the school of health at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon, two new truth students will be on the program. Exercises will be in assembly room No. 2, Atlanta Chamber of Commerce. Robert Bryan Harrison will preside.

'Y' LEADERS ARRANGE SERIES OF PROGRAMS

Featured on the program of the pre-holiday social of the Y. M. C. A. will be Augustus E. Constantine, mandolinist, and Miss Catherine Abbott, soloist. Both of these entertainers are well known in the city for their participation in the work of the Young People's Service leagues.

Miss Abbott will be remembered for her work in the "Gypsy Rover" and "Cherry Blossom" musical comedies given by the Y. P. S. L. of All Saints Episcopal church, of which she is secretary. Mr. Constantine also played in these comedies, but is probably better known for his entertainment work among inmates of local charitable institutions and particularly for his work at the Veterans' hospital, No. 48.

The religious and social committee of the Y. M. C. A. has secured Miss Abbott and Mr. Constantine for their first social. This will be the initial effort of any group of Y. M. C. A. members to conduct a social without the aid of secretaries. The committee is enthusiastically supporting this entertainment and hoping to show the possibility of social activities by and for young men which will be clean and wholesome and, at the same time, popular.

The social will be given from 8 to 10:30 o'clock on the night of December 12 in the auditorium of the Y. M. C. A. building at 75 Luckie street.

Father Who Beat Son 'Unmercifully' Placed Under Bond

Too vigorous adherence to the axiom, "spare the rod and spoil the child," landed Lon Wallace, 36, of 401 Highland avenue, in the police station Saturday on charges of unmercifully whipping his 15-year-old son, Albert. In a preliminary hearing in police court, Wallace was bound over to the state court under $300 bond.

Sobbing a story of alleged cruel mistreatment at the hands of his father, favors shown to his stepbrothers and sisters while he was made to enact the role of a male "Cinderella," young Albert appealed to the police early Saturday, and moved by his charges, Officers Higgins and Glover immediately assumed the part of "Prince Charming" and arrested the accused father.

Albert was mistreated Tuesday and ran away to the home of his aunt, Mrs. Ruby Donaldson, he said. Friday his father appeared and took him home, locking him in a room, he declared. "Then my father came in with a heavy strap cut from a machine belt. I was made to strip to my waist and he began whipping me. I screamed and begged him to stop but he kept on, and finally stopped when he got tired."

After that, he declared, he was forced to work in his father's rope factory but grew weaker and weaker. He eventually escaped and made his way to his aunt's home again, where his father called for him, but was told by his aunt that she would call the police, which she did, Albert said.

Wallace admitted whipping the boy. "He is unmanageable," he said, "at times, and perhaps I did whip him a little too much." He said the boy's growth is stunted because of frequent illness. Albert's mother died when he was seven years old and his father married a second time. There are six other children in the house, Albert told police.

Trolley Workers Ask Council Aid In Fixing Wages

Street railway employees of the Georgia Railway and Power company have addressed a communication to Mayor Sims, general council and the Georgia public service commission urging them to use their influence with officials of the company to enter into negotiations with the employees looking to adoption of a satisfactory wage scale for next year. The petition will be formally presented to city council Monday afternoon.

The communication probably will be referred to the special committee appointed by Mayor Sims last year to investigate traffic conditions and all recommendations of the report of the Beeler organization.

The communication sets forth that for several years past employees of the company, representing largely the street railway employees, had entered into an annual wage contract with officials of the company. Any time there was any question as to wages the matter had been submitted to an arbitration board and the findings of that body had never been questioned.

This year, the communication stated, the company has stated it cannot enter into any agreement establishing a new wage scale, or of even maintaining the present scale, unless given relief by the city and the public service commission.

The items of relief the company has demanded, as summarized in the petition included elimination of unnecessary stops; discontinuance of at least one of the unnecessary closely paralleling duplicate street car lines; relief from gross receipts tax and from street paving charges, and revision of car fares.

"This situation to the employees is serious," the communication sets forth. "Our present wage is barely sufficient to maintain our families. We would remind you there are employed by the Georgia Railway and Power company more than 2,000 persons and that this situation affects them and their families, constituting at least 10,000 inhabitants."

The communication bore the signatures of T. L. McBrayer, president; H. E. James, E. P. Dodd, J. F. Mann, J. W. Askin, G. W. Garner and H. Cousins.

VALUABLE STRAD FOUND IN GARRET OF ILLINOIS HOME

Urbana, Ill., December 5.—(AP)—An old broken fiddle, brought down from the garret to be repaired for their son to practice on, has brought Mr. and Mrs. Phil Menges an offer of $10,000 from F. R. Cherloski, Detroit violinist. On the back of the violin, which cost the Menges, $23 (is a label which reads "Antonius Stradivarius Cremona Sis Faciebat anno 1716," and in one corner in a circle containing a cross are the famous initials, "A. S.," which appear on all the mastermaker's violins.

$100,000 LAND SALE MADE AT BAINBRIDGE

Bainbridge, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—Bainbridge property and, Decatur county land was sold here today for $102,000. B. F. Jones, of Macon, sold the Mumnerlyn and Binford estates of 4,170 acres to the Hancock Lumber company, of Sparta, Ga., for $100,000, it is stated, while a city lot and small store sold for $2,000.

EAST POINT COUNCIL TO CONFER DEGREES

East Point council, No. 23, R. and S. Masters, will confer all of the cryptic degrees Wednesday, beginning at 6 p. m.

This will be the last work for this year. Grand council officers will be present to add to impressiveness of the work. Light refreshments will be served.

Raccoon Scores, But Policemen Take Him Alive

Decision of Call Officers Hughes and Norwood Saturday morning to capture a large raccoon alive rather than "kill a good scrapper" by shooting, led to the application of many bandages on the officers at Grady hospital after the battle royal was over.

The coon was discovered in vines covering the porch at 306 Peeples street, and Officers Hughes and Norwood answered the call. After a lively scrap in which the animal scored numerous slashes on faces and arms of the officers, he was taken alive and secured so that he could do no further damage.

On the return to the station house, Mr. Coon was locked in a cage, while the officers continued on to Grady hospital for plenty of iodine, bandages and precautionary measures against blood poison.

CHRISTMAS SAVINGS GAIN AT COLUMBUS

Columbus, Ga., December 5.—(Special.)—Approximately $335,000 will be paid out in Christmas savings by the banking institutions of Columbus and Phenix City within the next week, eclipsing the record established in 1924, when the aggregate sum soared to $300,000. Some of the checks were started through the mails Thursday and others will be released by banks Saturday.

This year's total would have climbed even higher, it is believed, had the unprecedented drouth the past summer not interrupted the regular depositing of many textile employees and residents of rural districts.

COLONEL BALTZELL NEW 22D COMMANDER

Colonel George E. Baltzell, on temporary duty at Fort Benning for the past three months, will arrive at Fort McPherson today to take command of the 22nd infantry. He will relieve Lieutenant Colonel William H. Patterson, who has been acting commander of the regiment since Colonel Dwight W. Ryther left.

"Send One Over"

A solid trainload of 104 Graham Brothers Trucks was shipped recently to six Dodge Brothers Dealers in Florida. Ten days after arrival every truck had been sold—and more were on the way.

This is an exceptional record—but it illustrates an important point.

Business men need no longer feel that they must devote valuable time to investigation of trucks before making their choice.

The remarkable record of Graham Brothers Trucks has reduced an important buying problem to the simple expedient of asking the Dodge Brothers Dealer to "send one over."

Miss Kelly Weds Mr. Alfred Swann At Home Ceremony

Newnan, Ga., December 5.—The marriage of Miss Evelyn Louise Kelly, of Newnan, and William Alfred Swann, of Tampa, Fla., took place at the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Stamps Kelley, in Newnan, on Friday evening, November 27. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. T. Irwin, pastor of the First Methodist church, in the presence of intimate friends and relatives at 7:30 o'clock.

Misses Pearl Fort, of Atlanta, and Sarah Kelley were junior bridesmaids while Miss Anne Kidd, of Milledgeville, acted as maid of honor. Miss Fort wore tan moire crepe trimmed in fur and lace. Miss Kelley was gowned in henna velvet and crepe Miss Kidd's gown was of brown satin with gold trimmings. They carried bouquets of pink rosebuds and white chrysanthemums.

James Ballard and John Watts, of Atlanta, were groomsmen, and Ballard Hudson, of Palmetta, acted as best man.

The house was attractively decorated in pink and white chrysanthemums, while the altar was banked in ferns and starred with baskets holding chrysanthemums and pink carnations.

The bride was lovely in her wedding costume of deep blue crepe richly embroidered in gold, and she carried a shower bouquet of orchids and valley lilies.

The favors to the attendants were silver bud vases.

An informal reception followed the ceremony and assisting in entertaining were Mrs. John R. Cates, Mrs. Alfred E. Kelley and Mrs. Edward H. Kelley.

Mrs. Edgar S. Kelley, mother of the bride, was gowned in black georgette crepe heavily beaded in jet. Miss Estelle Swann, sister of the groom, wore a gown of black georgette combined with red.

Mrs. Swann is a graduate of Lucy Cobb institute. Mr. Swann is connected with the Smith-Chevrolet Motor company, of Tampa, Fla. Future home will be in Tampa, Fla. The bride and groom left for Cuba for their honeymoon.

Miss Postell Weds Spence M. Grayson At Ceremony in Fla.

Of interest to friends throughout the state was the marriage of Miss Margaret Postell to Spence Monroe Grayson at St. James Episcopal church, Leesburg, Fla., on December 1 at 11 o'clock. The bride is the charming daughter of Mrs. John Postell, of St. Simons Island, Ga. Her father, the late John Postell, was of one of the oldest families in the state. His family have lived on St. Simons for the past three generations.

The marriage was performed by Rev. F. J. Wilson in the presence of both families and a few close friends. The ancient custom of ringing the bell was used as the bride and groom left the church.

Mr. Grayson is the eldest son of Colonel and Mrs. William L. Grayson, of Savannah. He is a graduate of the University of Georgia and a member of Kappa Alpha fraternity. He is senior member of the law firm of Grayson & Alexander, of Savannah.

The wedding march was played by Miss Grace Butler and "At Dawnin" and "I Love You Truly" were beautifully played during the ceremony.

The bride was beautiful in a cinnamon brown brocade satin dress with picture hat to match. She wore a corsage of bride's roses and lley lilies.

Mrs. S. E. Walker, of Leesburg, a sister of the bride, was hostess at a wedding breakfast at Lakeview hotel. Immediately aft the wedding the couple left for points in Virginia and New York, where they will spend several weeks.

Miss Jennings Weds DeWitt Phillips.

Elder and Mrs. R. H. Jennings, of Dawson, announce the marriage of their daughter, Alice Dealva, to DeWitt Phillips, of Tampa, Fla., which occurred at the home of the bride's parents on November 23. Mrs. Phillips was a member of the class of 1924 at Georgia State College for Women at Milledgeville.

Miss Whitfield Weds Willard Barnum.

A marriage of cordial interest to a large circle of friends is that of Miss Clara Mabel Whitfield to Willard Burch Barnum, both of Albany, which was solemnized at the First Methodist church of Americus at 3 o'clock Thanksgiving day. The Rev. H. H. Heisler, of Ellaville, a former classmate of the groom, performed the ceremony in the presence of a small group of relatives and close friends.

Preceding the entrance of the bridal party, Miss Maud Alice Barnum, sister of the groom, gave a violin selection, "Traumerei," accompanied at the piano by another sister, Miss Susie Lee Barnum.

The groom and his best man, Ernest Cameron, entered first and the bride was preceded by two attendants, Miss Alma Williams and Miss Pearl Bishop, both of Albany.

Following the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Barnum left for a short wedding trip. They will include several points in north Georgia and Tennessee in their itinerary, and will return early next week to Albany where they will make their home.

Miss Wheeler Weds Coleman Mobley.

The wedding of Miss Dorothy Allen Wheeler to Coleman R. Mobley was solemnized Wednesday evening, December 2, at 9 o'clock, at Trinity Methodist church.

There were no attendants. The bride and groom entering together were joined in marriage by Dr. S. R. Belk.

The bride was lovely in her wedding gown of pekin blue satin finished in gold lace and brown squirrel. A picture hat of rose gold metal cloth, with shoes and gloves to match, completed her costume. She wore a corsage bouquet of Ophelia roses and swainsona.

Only near relatives and a few friends were present.

Mr. and Mrs. Mobley will be home to their friends after December 10 at 147 Lawton street.

Miss Pless Weds Eugene M. Massey.

Cordele, Ga., December 5.—A marriage of cordial interest to a wide circle of friends was that of Miss Elizabeth Pless, youngest daughter of E. M. Pless and the late Mrs. Pless, of Cordele, and Eugene Miller Massey, of Macon, which occurred Saturday afternoon, November 28, in Vienna. Rev. T. W. Tippett, pastor of the Vienna Baptist church, performed the ceremony in the presence of relatives and a few close friends. The young couple are residing in Macon.

Art Division of Woman's Club To Sponsor Benefit Bridge

A benefit bridge party, sponsored by Mrs. T. A. Rippey and the art division of the Atlanta Woman's club, is arranged for Tuesday afternoon, December 15, in the ballroom of the Woman's club, from 2 until 4 o'clock.

Mrs Rippey has a committee of about 30 young matrons and girls. A lovely prize will be given to the young lady disposing of the greatest number of tables.

Mrs. Walter Wellborn, formerly Miss Julia Black, will assist Mrs. Rippey, as treasurer for the occasion.

A program will follow the card games, when several musical numbers will be rendered, under the direction of Enrico Leide, and several beautiful dances seen, directed by Mrs. W. C. Spiker, of the Potter-Spiker School of Dancing.

Mrs. James R. Little, chairman of the art division of the Atlanta Woman's club, will assist Mrs. Rippey. Those included in the list of Mrs. Rippey's assistants are: Mrs. Walter Welborn, Jr., Mrs. Lynn Howard, Mrs. Grady Black, Mrs. Rhodes Haverty, Miss Katherine Haverty, Mrs. George Weyman, Miss Aileen Harris, Mrs. McDougald, Miss Lucy Elizabeth Harper, Mrs. Trenton Tunnell, Miss Margaret Elder, Mrs. J. W. Speas, Mrs. Clyde King, Jr., Mrs. B. X. Yann, Miss Martha Boynton, Miss Catherine Candler, Mrs. William McCormack, Mrs. Ann Bates Walsh, Miss Pauline Ware and Miss Mary Brown Spalding.

Home Economics Department To Meet.

The regular monthly meeting of the home economics department of the Atlanta Woman's club will be held Wednesday afternoon in the clubhouse at 3 o'clock. Mrs. J. A. Carlisle, chairman of the department, will preside, and a most delightful and interesting program has been prepared for the afternoon.

The principal speaker will be Mrs. Ira E. Farmer, who has become famous for her humorous short talks. Mrs. Farmer is well known in club circles, being chairman of home demonstration in the Georgia Federation of Woman's Clubs, and a past president of the tenth district. The subject of her talk will be "The Woman of the Thirty-first Proverbs."

The usual attendance prize, bottles of mayonnaise donated most generously by the Henard Mayonnaise company, will be awarded, thus prompt arrivals are urged by Mrs. Carlisle.

The housewives of the city will be interested to know that the discovery contest will take place, and the discovery, submitted in writing and judged by a most capable committee to be the best will be given a wonderful cake, which is donated by the American Bakeries company.

Mrs. Carlisle also announces that cook books may be obtained at $2 per copy by calling Mrs. H. E. Jessup, Walnut 3301, and prompt delivery will be made. The books are also on sale at the Cole Book company and the Southern Book company as well as always at the clubhouse. All members of the department are urged to attend this meeting, and an invitation is also extended to all the club members.

Mrs. Melton Arranges Christmas Program.

The literature department of the Atlanta Woman's club met Thursday, December 3, Mrs. W. F. Melton, chairman, presiding. The program was a Christmas one. Mrs. J. B. McNelly, accompanied by Mrs. Marie Goodyear at the piano, rendered a lovely group of Christmas songs. Christmas greetings were given by the members instead of current events.

Mrs. Melton arranged a musical contest, the prize being awarded Mrs. Douglas Stephens.

Mrs. Roger Wilson gave a reading of "Dust of the Road," a one-act play by Kenneth Sawyer Goodman.

Mrs. C. Gainer Turner read the first chapter, written by herself, of an original story which other members of the class will complete. Mrs. C. V. Hohenstein will write the second chapter, which will be read at the January meeting; Mrs. W. A. Robertson will write the third chapter, to be read at the February meeting, and Mrs. Robert S. Morrow will write the fourth and last chapter, which will be read at the March meeting. Mrs. Turner did not name the story; but upon its completion, the class will select an appropriate name.

The next meeting of the literature department will be held the first Thursday in January.

Mrs. Dumas Is Hostess.

Mrs. N. B. Dumas was hostess Saturday evening at an informal dance at her home on Peachtree road, the occasion honoring a group of visitors and their friends.

Vocational Chairman

Mrs. R. I. Reid, efficient chairman of the vocational classes of the Atlanta Woman's club, who is doing splendid work in her department with the aid of her committees.

Flower Lovers Division To Meet.

The flower lovers division of the Atlanta Woman's club will meet Thursday morning, December 10, at 10:30 o'clock in the palm room of the club, when Mrs. John G. Russell, chairman of the landscape division of the committee, will direct a very interesting program.

Mrs. Russell will address the committee on "Planting Your Home Grounds." This lecture will include the directions for effective arrangement of trees and specimen plants, artistic grouping of shrubs, the selection of plants for sunny and shady and moist locations, together with the correct foundation plannings for homes of various materials and styles such as Spanish, southern or Dutch colonial.

A miniature home will be used, together with branches and foliage of various shrubs and trees, to illustrate the lecture and to demonstrate the arrangements.

Mrs. Russell is a graduate in her profession, holding a certificate both in landscape architecture and landscape gardening, and has traveled extensively over the United States and Canada, visiting nurseries and greenhouses, and studying their methods of propagation and plant culture. She is the only woman who has been granted a license to practice landscape gardening as a profession in the state of Georgia. She has designed and planted many beautiful gardens and home grounds in this state since she made this her profession.

All members of the club are cordially invited to attend this meeting, according to Mrs. E. P. Crenshaw, chairman of the flower lovers division of the club, and non-members may attend for a fee of only 25 cents.

Atlanta Beautiful Committee Sponsored by Woman's Club

The Atlanta Beautiful committee, sponsored by the Atlanta Woman's club, with Mrs. T. G. Delph, as chairman, will hold its regular monthly meeting Thursday morning, December 10, at the Woman's clubhouse.

The members of the committee are requested to come prepared to discuss the phase of civic betterment, in which they are most interested and to report any particular thing or place that needs attention, in order that this may be reported to the proper authorities and immediate relief given.

The city beautiful committee met with the city sanitary department who will cooperate in carrying on the necessary campaign for a cleaner and more beautiful city.

Cooperation has been given to the committee in several phases of work connected with making the city more desirable and beautiful. Mrs. Raymond H. Wolfe, representative from the Parent-Teacher organizations, will give an outline, at the meeting Thursday, of how the school children can best assist in the committee in the city beautiful campaign.

Cars will be provided to take the members over the various sections of the community next Thursday on an inspection tour and representatives from all organizations are urged to attend and take the trip.

Mrs. Ben Simcox To Carry On Prison Reform Work

Mrs. Ben Simcox, the newly appointed legislative chairman for the Atlanta Woman's club, will lose no time in putting forth every effort to carry on the very necessary work of prison reform in Georgia, which was advocated by the Woman's club during the last session of the legislature, when the club had the indorsement of numerous other organizations in asking for a state mental examiner for the prisons of the state, as the first step in a much needed reform.

Mrs. Simcox has studied the situation in Georgia with the greatest interest and in this connection brings out the following suggestions in furthering the efforts of the club in bringing about this reform:

The General Federation of Women's Clubs in Washington, D. C., gives us the following through Mrs. John D. Sherman: "People are beginning to find that real living lies in giving, and that genuine and lasting pleasure comes only to those who give most. For that reason we are making every effort to awaken an enthusiasm among the young women to give of their many talents to help us in raising the standards of living generally. It is the purpose of the general federation to encourage all women to organize, to read, to think, to investigate, to build up an intelligent army, able and ready to cope with the manifold problems of today.

"One of the problems confronting us at present is the condition of prisons and it is the deep desire of the Atlanta Woman's club to help carry the torch into the future in the line of prison reform. Prisons were first looked upon as a possible means of reformation, but prison management and discipline have not kept pace with mechanical improvements. The oldest form of forcible repression of crime was execution. Civilization advanced to transportation, or the establishment of penal colonies to which criminals were removed. A third and later form is the prison. It was primarily a place for the detention of persons charged with crimes until they were tried. It is only in comparatively recent times that the prison itself, has come to be regulated as a place of punishment. The name 'jail' is now generally used to designate the place where persons under accusation are kept, pending the determination of their guilt or innocence. Of all the institutions of this kind in the state of Georgia, the county jails are the most unsatisfactory, because prisoners of all grades, of all ages and sometimes even of both sexes are herded together. For over a century, the idea of reformation has played an important part in modern prison systems, but attempts have been made to improve the condition of the prisoner, to give more humane treatment, rather than to the reformation of the criminal; the problem of restoring the criminal to his place in society, or saving him from himself, being a later work.

"We point with pride to the activity of the president of the Atlanta Woman's club, Mrs. Norman Sharp, and her assistants, whose efforts to help solve this universal problem have crystallized into a resolution or act, the gist of which is to have a scientific segregation of 'prisoners according to their mental development, or viciousness of character.' This was indicated in the resolution adopted by the Atlanta Woman's club, asking for a state mental examiner in the prisons, which received the indorsement of the state prison commission, through Judge T. E. Patterson who states in his message on the subject to the club that 'one of the faults of the state penitentiary system is that there is no effort to, and no way to, segregate the prisoners according to their mental development or viciousness of character.' It is easy to decide in a moment that a feeble-minded offender of the law should not be placed in the same cell with a depraved maniac, nor a juvenile 'first termer,' be thrown in with 'lifers' and professional crooks, but this is done, and is the reason our jails and convict camps have been called schools of crime. Grades of crime are acknowledged by the state, but only half way acknowledgement is made of the grades of criminals.

"The first steps of the Atlanta Woman's club may take time but they will not be allowed to become passive or seem feeble as long as there exists such a great need for such steps to be taken. The date of the biennial session of the Georgia legislature gives us time for study and consideration and the committee is compiling information and disseminating it so that when the proper time comes we will be able to sponsor the cause with all the force that is needed."

St. Philip's Auxiliary Will Hold Bazar.

The Young Woman's auxiliary of St. Philip's cathedral will hold the annual bazar Wednesday, December 9, at Jacobs' store, corner Broad and Alabama streets, opposite Rich's. Exquisite hand-made articles and novelties will be on sale.

Mrs. Cheney Employed To Fill Camp Fire Secretaryship

The board of directors at their meeting on December, accepted with regret the resignation of Miss Helen Bagley, who has been connected with Camp Fire during the last year as assistant executive. Miss Bagley has taken a position at Camp Fire executive in Battle Creek, Mich.

At the meeting of the board of directors Tuesday, December 1, Mrs. Anita D. Cheney was employed as office secretary for the Camp Fire Girls of Atlanta. Mrs. Cheney has had excellent experience as secretary to the director of attendance of the Oakland public school, in Oakland, Calif., and was in close touch with the recreational work of the city. Mrs. Cheney will be the guest of honor at the guardians' meeting on Thursday, December 8.

The committee of awards met on Wednesday, December 2, for the purpose of testing the girls who rank and pleted the requirements for rank and the following girls became wood gatherers: Kate Christiansen, Christine Wing, Mary Lizzie Wade, and Hattie May Price, of Pryor Street school; Rosa Fannie Burnam and Emily Perkerson, of William Bass Junior High; Jane White, Fary Frances Davis and Betty Jones, of Ponce de Leon school, and Theresa Hamby, of Bolton school. The next meeting of the committee of awards will be held on the first Wednesday in January.

Guardians' Meeting.

The guardians' meeting will be held Tuesday, December 8, at Camp Fire headquarters. The program will be in charge of the program committee, headed by Miss Virginia Wade, and refreshments will be in charge of Mrs. Annie Mason Linn.

The girl's council will meet on Monday, December 7, at 2:30 o'clock at Camp Fire headquarters, 415 Chamber of Commerce building. It is to be a luncheon meeting in charge of the president, Miss Elizabeth Rymski.

The guardians' training course will have its examination Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock at Camp Fire headquarters. All those who have taken the course and who pas sthe examination will receive a certificate from Camp Fire national headquarters in New York city.

The girls in any group in which every member bought and dressed a doll and returned it to the Camp Fire office by noon, December 5, will receive a local leather honor. All dolls must be returned to the office this week. A few unsold dolls may be purchased from Camp Fire headquarters by anyone desiring Christmas dolls.

Hoke Smith Camp Fire group held a candy pulling on Thursday, December 3, during recess times in order to make their Camp Fire dues. Eleanor Rafter was elected as the Hoke Smith representative to the girls' council. Plans were made for a hike to be taken at the close of school, 12 o'clock, Thursday, December 10. Each girl is asked to bring one egg and three strips of bacon.

Groups Make Plans.

William Bass Junior High group had a candy pulling on Thursday, December 3. From the receipts they are planning to give a donation to the auditorium fund of the William Bass school.

The Sadahe Camp Fire group of Decatur had a delightful time filling a basket on Thanksgiving eve and delivering it to a poor family of little children whose mother is an invalid. On Thursday the group met and dressed dolls for Christmas, at the Ponce de Leon school with their guardian, Miss Connie Carswell.

The Ormewood school group went out to the Scottish Rite hospital at their last meeting. They carried flowers, scrap books and A, B, C books for the children. Marie Peeples and Elise Vaughn told stories to the crippled children.

The Bolton Camp Fire girls had their election of officers for the coming year and passed on the new members whose names were presented before the group. Jeffie Yok was elected president; Virginia Donehoo was elected vice president; Dorothy Rogers, secretary; Catherine Chambers, corresponding secretary; Louise Carter, scribe; Margaret Rogers, treasurer. The following girls were approved to be taken in at the next council fire: Dorothy Holbrook, Marie Warten, Emily Taylor, Louise Carter, Mary Merl Bennett. There was a flag raising held at Bolton school on December 4, in which the Camp Fire Girls and Boy Scouts took part.

The Okeewapo group of O'Keefe Junior High has finished filling out the girls' registration cards.

Joe Brown Junior High Camp Fire Girls had an interesting meeting at which Gwendolyn Hall and Frances Jarrell presented an original Camp Fire song which they had composed.

Decatur Junior Club Meets To Make Plans for Booth

On December 1, at 3:30 p. m., the Decatur Woman's club met in the Sunday school room of the First Presbyterian church, in Decatur, This was the second regular meeting since the junior department was organized. Martha Murdock, president, presided. After the club had sung America, the adoption of a club song was discussed. It was decided that a song wound be formally adopted at the next meeting. Plans were made for a miscellaneous booth to be prepared for the Decatur Woman's club store, which will be opened on December 11 and 12 at the old Piggly-Wiggly stand on Sycamore street. This booth will sell commodities both afternoon and evening on both days. Mrs. Roy Jones, president of the Decatur Woman's club, was present, and gave suggestions for the booth.

The club will give a barn dance at an early date. It was agreed to postpone the next regular meeting of the club until the regular meeting date after Christmas.

After the regular business Mabel Oglesby gave an interesting reading.

The president read the committees for the year. These committees consist of program, house and membership. Those on the program committee are Corinne Arles, chairman; Virginia Cooper, Salina Stevenson, Elsie Beck. Those on the house committee are Mary Nelle Cooper, chairman; Elizabeth Jones, Christine Glausier and Susie Wade.

The membership committee consists of Dorothy Allen, chairman; Elizabeth Davis and Mabel Oglesby.

Business Women's Employers' Banquet.

The business women of the Y. W. C. A. held their annual employers' banquet at the Y. W. C. A. cafeteria on Thursday evening. The purpose of this banquet is that the girls and the men may have an opportunity to know each other outside the office; that the employer may have an opportunity to see how his employee uses her leisure time, and how the girls are endeavoring to better themselves, both for their jobs and for living a fuller and more useful life, and last, that the employers may have an understanding of what the Y. W. C. A. is trying to do, and to bring about a spirit of co-operation and friendliness between the girls, the employers and the association.

Miss Mildred Wells, president of the Business Girls' federation of the Y. W. C. A., presided giving a toast to the "Ideal Employer." Miss Wells stated that business girls did not expect their employers to be perfect, but did want consideration, and appreciation and friendliness. Mrs. W. R. Prescott, president of the Y. W. C. A. in Atlanta, greeted the guests with words of welcome. The girls have their own mandolin and guitar club, which played several numbers, and their glee club also performed. The glee club is giving a program at the Palace theater on Saturday, December 3. H. M. Root, of the Southern Baking company, gave a toast to the "Ideal Business Girls," bringing out that people in the business world had said a business woman needed "a tough hide," good looks, and efficiency, but that he thought the greatest contribution the woman had to make to the business world was her womanliness, and urged the girls that despite their "boyish bobs" that they keep true to their womanhood.

W. O. Foote made the address of the evening, his subject being "What We Work By." Mr. Foote said that we might start with the lowest idea of what we work by, and named the clock as the first thing some people worked by. In succession he named the pay envelope, necessity, the love of working and last the real service in doing something. He stressed the fact that the business world needs to be put on a basis of service.

Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Patterson, Mr. and Mrs. McCall and Mr. and Mrs. Hale, of the Associated press; Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Foster, of Reynolds & Reynolds; Mr. Evans, of the Hardwood Lumber company; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Davis, of the International Agricultural corporation; Mr. Dunlap, of Dunlap Insurance company; Mr. Fred Ragland, of Pyrene Manufacturing company; Mr. and Mrs. Browne, of A. & P. Co.; Dr. I. A. Branham and Miss Katherine Hollen, of the American Book company. About 75 guests were present, representing many businesses in the city.

Bessie Tift College Notes.

A most attractive program of the Mercer Glee and Instrumental clubs was given in Bessie Tift college auditorium Tuesday evening, under the direction of Dr. Burt Richardson and Roy L. Hurst.

Immediately after the concert the junior class entertained the singers with an informal reception in Tift parlors.

Lewis Beach's "The Goose Hangs High" will be presented in Bessie Tift auditorium Friday evening, under the direction of Miss Martha Condray, head of the expression department.

The Kappa Delta society entertained in the auditorium Saturday evening with a delightful musical and reading program.

The junior class sponsored the showing of the picture "Miss Bluebeard," featuring Bebe Daniels, in the college auditorium.

Kle Club Sponsors Splendid Entertainments

The Kle club, unit of B. P. O. E. No. 78, has sponsored several recent activities to raise money for charity. The bridge-whist on November 10 Mrs. F. Newcomer, chairman, was exceptionally well attended.

A regular Kle club dance, Mrs. J. J. Condon, chairman, filled the Elk's hall on November 7.

The Christmas charity stocking fund ball sponsored by the Kle club, with Mrs. J. J. Condon chairman, held at the auditorium on Saturday, November 28, was a great financial and social success.

Two more dances will be sponsored by this club at the Elks' home before Christmas, one on Tuesday, December 15. The other will be announced at this dance. The regular all-day social meeting will be held on Wednesday, December 9, at the home of Mrs. I. S. Moss, 85 Briarcliff Place, Hemlock 5191-W.

At this meeting drawings will be made for Christmas gifts to be distributed at the Kle club's Christmas tree party at the home of the corresponding secretary, Mrs. R. O. Hopson, the Wednesday after Christmas.

Miss McGriff Given Party.

Miss Estelle McGriff, whose home is at 72 Waddell street, Inman Park section of Atlanta, was delightfully entertained at a surprise birthday party on Tuesday evening, November 24.

On the Beach

What fun riding the breakers! In a becoming cap and bright, well-fitting suit one is sure of looking just exactly right. Slippers to keep sand flies from hurting tender feet—and a protecting rubber cape for comfort and for looks, too!

Where Golf's the Thing

Everybody golfs at Southern resorts. Or, if not golf, there's tennis, or some other outdoor game, that requires a snappy flannel sports costume. A riot of color! Flashing crimson and tan two-piece suit! How well it looks for a snappy game.

Presenting an Unrivalled Collection of the Newest Apparel for Southern Resorts

Dresses
Afternoon - Evening - Sports

Everything that is smart and new for wear at Southern resorts! A beautiful selection of frocks for every interesting occasion! Lovely, sheer chiffon—for dancing and evening parties. Flat crepes, crepes de chine, in bright, attractive colors for street or afternoon wear. Of course, for sports wool frocks, some two-piece, some straight line, are much in vogue.

"A-Fishing We Will Go"

It doesn't much matter what one wears on a fishing trip, provided it is attractive, comfortable, and serviceable. A sports frock of soft, light-weight wool, or a two-piece crepe dress, light and pretty.

Coats
Street - Evening - Sports

For sports wear the soft plaids and bright solid colors in coats are very smart. Even in the balmy Southern climate you'll need such a wrap—for there are evening fish fries and boating excursions when thin chiffons and georgettes are not enough protection from sea breezes. Your wardrobe will, of course, include an evening wrap, fur-trimmed, rich, and luxurious. Vivid colors are the last say in fashion of evening wraps.

"Underneath the Stars"

Oh, the thrill of dancing "underneath the stars!" Swirling chiffons, in soft, pastel shades, or brilliant crepe frocks, flared many ways. Trimmed with tailored pleating, or Frenchy combinations of flowers and ribbons—two-toned.

Beach Togs
Bathing Suits and Accessories

A smart, new bathing suit—and with it all the matching accessories. Slippers, and capes to protect one from sun and sand. Essential—all of them—to your fun at the beach.

For Continued Playtime

Every day is a continuous round of play and pleasure. There must be the perfect costume for every delightful frolic! And plenty of charming frocks in one's wardrobe means a playtime made doubly enjoyable!

Miss Florence Boykin Will Wed Gerald D. Griffin, of Miami, Fla.

Prominent and widespread social interest is attached to the announcement made today by Mr. and Mrs. Basil Manly Boykin, of the engagement of their daughter, Florence to Gerald Dunn Griffin, of Miami, Fla., formerly of Springfield, Mass.

Miss Boykin is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. M. Boykin and is a popular and admired member of the younger society contingent. She attended Washington seminary where she was a beloved member of the O. B. X. sorority.

The bride-elect's maternal grandfather was the late Major Wallace J. Barnard, a distinguished citizen of Georgia, and a Confederate soldier, serving the entire four years of the war between the states. Her paternal grandfather was Rev. Thomas Cooper Boykin a leader in the religious life of Georgia. Her great grandfather was Dr. Samuel Francis Boykin, of Columbus, Ga., who was a noted doctor and biologist.

Miss Boykin's mother was before her marriage, Miss Florence Barnard and has been active in the club life in Georgia for a number of years. She is a past president of the Atlanta Woman's club and is an outstanding figure in the city's social, civic and club activities.

The bride-elect's father is prominently identified in the business circles, being connected with the S. P. Richards company. Miss Boykin is the sister of Barnard, James and Allen Boykin.

Mr. Griffin is the eldest son of Barte J. Griffin and the late Mrs. Griffin, of Springfield, Mass. His mother was Miss Margaret Dunn, and he is related to many of the leading citizens of the state. His maternal grandfather was Michael Dunn, capitalist and prominent in the banking circles of Springfield. His paternal grandfather was Jeremiah B. Griffin, a leading educator. His father is engaged in educational work and is a pioneer in his particular field, that of business education. He is now engaged in the manufacture and distribution of education records, which are used in schools in the United States and England.

Mr. Griffin finished school in Springfield and later attended Notre Dame. He served 22 months overseas with the 26th division. Upon his return, he became identified with the realty circles of Springfield, and for the past year has been in the real estate business in Miami. He is a brother of Mrs. George S. Anthony, of New York city; Joseph Griffin of Sacramento, Calif., and Barte Griffin, Jr., of Melbourne, Fla.

Civic Club of West End Will Remember City's Poor at Xmas

The Woman's Civic club of West End will convene at 3 o'clock, December 9, in the club home, 265 Gordon street. No other regular meeting will be held during the month of December. Mrs. Arthur J. Merrill sent a request to the last meeting asking all members to remember the poor Christmas, as the club has done in the past. Articles of food that will not spoil, such as canned goods, may be brought to the club next Wednesday or may be taken to the home of Mrs. J. W. Mozley at any time, and she very kindly will care for them until they are needed.

Mrs. J. H. Savage requested that good used clothing, toys, or new clothing and toys be given the better films committee for needy school children of Atlanta. Mrs. Savage will receive these things at her home, 172 Gordon street, or will call for them if she is notified.

Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock the hospital committee will gather to make bandages for Grady. During the past month this committee, Mrs. C. S. Shipley, chairman, has made 2,615 bandages, collected 125 garments and $250 in money for the Needlework guild and sold poppies to the amount of $95 on Poppy day.

Miss Ann Bowie's class in public speaking will assemble at 2 o'clock Tuesday and those wishing to bring lunch to the hospital committee and work until time for Miss Bowie's class are requested to do so.

The club went on record last Wednesday, unanimously indorsing the action of the junior chamber of commerce in favoring better and cleaner dances in Atlanta.

An offering of clothing for needy school children was made the past week through the public welfare chairman, Mrs. W. W. Kilpatrick.

Mrs. D. O. Cogbill, treasurer, made a very satisfactory report of the financial standing of the club. The K. O. X. club is growing rapidly and its membership has decided to hold two meetings a month.

At the regular meeting last Wednesday, Mrs. Edward H. Smith, presided in the absence of Mrs. Arthur Merrill, president. Mrs. R. T. Connally opened the meeting with prayer and Mrs. P. D. Johnson, in behalf of the literary committee who sponsored the progam, introduced the speaker of the afternoon, Mrs. R. T. Connally, who entertained her audience with an intimate sketch of the life of Uncle Remus. Mrs. Hogan read a poem dedicated to Mr. Harris and composed by a West End woman, Mrs. Arthur Hale. Mrs. W. H. Hill, 222 Peeples street, was elected to membership.

Young Judean Clubs' Program.

The Young Judean clubs of Atlanta are putting on a very lovely Chanukah program Sunday evening, December 13, at the Y. W. H. A. club house. There will be a number of beautiful musical selections, a little sketch, "The Lighting of the Candles," and the central number of the evening will be a short playlet, "The Unlighted Menorah." Further details will be given later.

The clubs are also working on the Southern Interstate Oratorical contest to be held some time in January in New Orleans. Elimination contests are being held in the separate club groups, and the general Atlanta elimination at which will be chosen the one to represent Atlanta in New Orleans will be given December 16 at the Jewish Educational alliance. Everyone is cordially invited. Four speakers will represent the four senior club groups of Atlanta. A silver loving cup will be presented to the winner, who will then represent Atlanta in New Orleans.

Tickets for the Chanukah entertainment are now on sale, and can be gotten from any of the club leaders.

Recent Memorial Exercises Observed by War Mothers

The recent memorial exercises at Pershing Point observed by the War Mothers Service Star Legion was quite an impressive service. For the past seven years this occasion has been observed and flowers lovingly laid upon the beautiful monument erected by the war mothers in honor of the 143 heroes of Fulton county, who so willingly gave their lives that America and the whole world might be free.

Martial Music.

On this occasion martial music was furnished by the Tech High band led by their commandant, Major Woodward. The exercises were very impressive, Mrs. J. C. Mellichamp presiding. After the Lord's prayer and two verses of America, led by the band, Mrs. Sam D. Jones, president of the Atlanta chapter, was introduced and in a few inspirational words paid tribute to the dead and called upon the audience to remember not only their heroic deeds but also those who are almost worse off than dead in hospitals and homes. Marion Jackson, speaker of the occasion, paid a beautiful tribute to mother love, and the part that woman had taken in past wars, and her efforts for the future that there may be no more war. He regretted that America had not joined the League of Nations thereby vindicating the prophetic vision of Woodrow Wilson. As he ceased speaking the Tech High band hit up the inspiring tune of "Over There."

Mrs. Mellichamp begged the audience to see that this occasion grows in sweetness and solemnity as the years go on. The services were ended with prayer and the benediction of Dr. L. O. Bricker, of the Peachtree Christian church.

Floral Offerings.

Floral offerings were sent by many friends among them a magnificent one from the Georgia and Atlanta division of the disabled veterans, and a very handsome wreath brought by a large delegation of the Ladies' Memorial association with their president, Mrs. W. A. Wright.

Executive Board Of Baptist W. M. U. Holds Session

At the B. W. M. U. executive board meeting Tuesday, December 1, interest and discussion centered about plans for the readjustment of official work pertaining to the union's department of mission study. During recent years such an impetus has been given throughout the state to the study of methods and missions that the results have assumed enormous proportions. The duties of the chairman, who supervises this study, awards all seals, keeps all records and attends to all official correspondence, have grown in like proportions. Because of this additional work, the splendid superintendent of this department, Mrs. Taul White, finds that she cannot continue to devote sufficient time to the work to hold it to its present high standard of efficiency, and asks that she be relieved of the secretarial duties of the office. Acting upon this request, the board decided at its Tuesday's session that all files and records should be removed from Mrs. White's home in Rome to the Atlanta office and all clerical work be centered there. Beginning with January 1, all orders for seals and requests for mission-study information will be sent to Mrs. A. F. McMahon, Palmer building, Atlanta, instead of to Mrs. White at Rome. Mrs. White will continue with the inspirational feature of the work, holding institutes and conferences, teaching classes and giving inspirational talks as formerly.

Missionary societies within the state will be glad to know that 10 copies of "Training for Leadership" will be forwarded, free of charge, to any society making the request and sending postage necessary for transportation. This is a splendid little book, concisely outlining the work and methods of the S. B. C. and of the union and should be in the hands of every Baptist woman desiring to make her life active in Kingdom work.

Miss Julia Allen, young people's leader, spoke enthusiastically of plans for a mission study institute to be held at Bessie Tift in February. At this time a class in methods will be held and the highly interesting and instructive late book on interrational problems, "Of One Blood," will be taught.

A note of lamentation was sounded when Mrs. McMahon, secretary-treasurer, reported a continued deplorable lack in the payment of salaries for the teachers of the Mary P. Willingham school. These salaries are paid from funds included in the apportionment of each W. M. S., therefore the urgent plea was made that all societies pay promptly their apportionment pledges.

Suggested plans were discussed for the creating of additional interest in general publicity and in the scrapbook contest which has become annual in the state. When these plans are fully formulated a detailed outline will be sent to press chairmen of all associations.

The meeting Tuesday was held in the First Baptist church with Mrs. W. J. Neel, president, presiding. Mrs. Jesse Manry stressed personal consecration in a beautiful devotional based on the thought of "Others seeing Jesus in you."

Mrs. Paul Etheridge, elected a board member at the recent convention in Macon, was cordially welcomed at this meeting. Others present were Mrs. W. J. Neel, Mrs. A. F. McMahon, Miss Julia Allen, Mrs. George Westmoreland, Mrs. G. T. Jones, Mrs. B. L. Bugg, Mrs. E. C. Laird, Mrs. R. B. Adair, Mrs. J. J. Wallace, Mrs. Jesse Manry, Mrs. I. B. Smith, Mrs. A. L. Cumming, Mrs. J. L. Phippin, Mrs. L. A. Witherspoon and Mrs. L. O. Freeman.

Third Audience Rehearsal

The Conductor and His Audience

For Big Symphony Concerts

BY KNOX SPAIN.

The "rehearsal" today concerns the overture, concerto, waltz, symphony, air or aria and bacchanale. Before going into the program proper, Leide explains the overture as a musical prelude or introduction; the concerto as a pretentious musical composition, usually in three movements, for solo instrument with orchestra accompaniment designed to show the technical skill of the performer. The three movements for the concerto today are moderato assai, meaning, in very moderate time; andante, movement in moderate time but flowing easily, gracefully (literally means "going"); allegro, a rapid, vivacious movement. Leide further explans the waltz as a old dance said to have come originally from Bohemia. It is in 3-4 time and has a moderate tempo; the symphony as a composition for full orchestra consisting of from three to six movements of great length and richly developed. The "unifinished" has only two, allegro moderato, meaning moderate quick, and andante con moto, meaning moving easily with motion or agitation. The air or aria is a melody without any definite form and usually after the nature of a song. It is often preceded by an elaborate introduction and followed by one or more variations. Bach's air or aria for the G string is on of the finest examples. The bacchanale is a drinking song.

Leide presents for this the 23d concert of the Atlanta Symphony orchestra overture to "The Bartered Bride," Smetana; concerto No. 4 D minor, for pianoforte and orchestra, Rubinstein; waltz from "Rosenkavalier, Strauss; the unifinished symphony, Schubert; air for the G string, Bach, and bacchanale from "Samson et Delila," Saint-Saens.

Hugh Hodgson, pianist, is making his second appearance as soloist with the Atlanta Symphony orchestra. Mr. Hodgson was born in Georgia about 30 years ago. He is a graduate of the University of Georgia. First studied the piano in his native state, afterwards going to Germany, where he spent five years under the watchful care of Madame Stepanoff. Mr. Hodgson has concertized for a number of years in the United States and stands among the foremost American composers.

Leide raises his baton, the signal is given the program prgresses.

1. Overture to "The Bartered Bride," Friedrich Smetana (1824-1884).

The overture is a fast and furious paraphrase on Bohemian wedding dances. The first theme is announced by the violins, violas, 'cellos and woodwinds in unison, with a stately accompaniment of chords for brasses with tympani. This theme is most ingeniously elaborated in fugal form and worked up to a climax, after which it is given out in unison again. The second theme is announced by oboe with clarinet, bassoon, horn and second violin accompaniment. Then follows a charming theme for violins and 'cellos. After further development the first theme is resumed as in the beginning and the overture is brought to an animated close.

2. Concerto No. 4, D minor for pianoforte and orchestra, Op. 70, Anton Rubinstein (1829-1894).

I. Moderator assai. II. Andante. III. Allegro

The first movement, on the tonic key, is based on a quiet melody of Russian flavor, proposed by the woodwinds and counterpointed by the strings. The second theme introduced by the piano in F major is strictly romantic in style and follows the regular imitation form of the old school. Two pronderous cadenzas for the piano alone feature the closing of the first movement.

The andante, a lovely passage for the piano alone, is accompanied with a master's stroke by light ethereal woodwinds and strings.

The allegro, finale, presents a fast movement in one in the form of a tempestuous fugate.

3. Waltz from "Rosenkavalier," Richard Strauss (1864).

This is a typical Viennese waltz with a Mozartian introduction for first clarinet and strings. The waltz proper is an example of harmonization of modern texture.

4. Symphony, the unfinished in B minor, Franz Schubert (1797-1828).

Allegro—the first movement, with all its perfect melody and the softest and purest orchestration, is full of romantic shocks and bursts, as of the essence of legendary poetry. It opens with the melody in the bass strings. First comes the quivering in the violins, where somewhere an indefinable melody is hovering, but presently the real theme sounds soft and clear in the woodwinds. After some overpowering clashes there rides in, borne by the 'cellos, the most charming melody in all music. There is in the ending of the movement that mysterious atmosphere of the first melody and so on through the second with a final repetition of the original base figure. The Andante begins more quietly, but in the same vein—the melodic bass presaging the melody in the strings. The whole episode of the first theme departs with the same phrase which introduced it. Equally complete, is the second. Preceded by a curiously promising rhythm in the strings, the clarinets sing a melody so simple you wonder where the charm lies.

5. Air for the G strings, from Suite No. 3, Johann Sebastian Bach (1685-1750). (Hugh Hodgson at the piano.)

The movements of Bach's Third Suite, in D, are the overture, air, two gavottes, bourree and gigue. The air is the most familiar and beautiful feature of the suite. It is a continuous flow of sweet melody, its two strains being several times repeated. Here is no effort or stress, no problem music, no use for dissonance. All is sweet, restful and simple. The original composition was scored by Bach for strings, two clarinets and clavichord. The clavichord is a small keyed instrument like the spinet and a forerunner of the pianoforte.

6. Bacchanale from "Samson et Delila," Camilee Saint-Saens (1835-1921).

This remarkable dance occurs in the last act of Saint-Saens' Biblical opera. The scene is the interior of the Temple of Dagon, where the blind Samson is led to be taunted and mocked by the High Priest and the followers of Dagon. This "Bacchanale" accompanies the dance of Delila and her maidens, which ends in a frenzy of oriental passion, during which Samson, crashing down the temple pillars, destroying himself and all his enemies. The oboe, English horn, clarinet, 'cello and castanets are featured. The score calls for a large orchestra.

Better Dance Week Outlaws Jazz.

"The Charleston is tabu, jazz dancing is on skids and the old dances have come back to stay as a direct result of the 'better dance' movement," according to the "Better Dance Week" committee of the woman's division of the chamber of commerce who are sponsoring its observance in Atlanta, December 7-13. Mrs. Lillian A. Dove, appointed by the International Dancing Masters' association as dance supervisor for Georgia, is chairman of the committee. Mrs. Dove attended the association convention in Cleveland last summer where several hundred dance teachers from all parts of the country meet annually to thrash out dance problems, pass on the new dance steps and agree on policies that shall govern ballroom dancing.

Martha Brown Young Matrons' Class.

The Young Matrons' class of the Martha Brown Memorial church entertained "home coming day" with the following harvest program: Roll call of workers in the field, by Mrs. Bernice Bowman, secretary; "Sowing in the Field," by Mrs. Clarke and Mrs. Adams; Reading, "Sowing," by Mrs. Edith Walker; "Fruits of This Year's Harvest," by Mrs. Stone, including the members enrolled, the average attendance and the largest attendance.

The "Treasury Report" was made by Mrs. W. F. Jones, of money spent also money made for church pews.

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

VOL. LVIII., No. 176. ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY MORNING, DECEMBER 6, 1925.

Debutante, Bride-Elect and Acquisitions to Atlanta Society

In the upper left is seen Mrs. H. C. Williams, who recently moved to Atlanta for residence and is residing at the Atlanta Biltmore. In the center oval is Mrs. Frank Sites, formerly Miss Pauline McLendon, of Waco, Texas, and is now residing in this city at 1085 Peachtree street. Mrs. Sites and Mrs. Williams are delightful acquisitions to Atlanta society and have been admired matrons attending the winter's social functions. The full length figure at the right of the page is Miss Jennie Hodgson, charming debutante daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Fred G. Hodgson and who was recently presented to several hundred members of Atlanta's social contingent at an elaborate reception at the Piedmont Driving club by her mother. Miss Florence Boykin, whose engagement is announced today to Gerald Dunn Griffin, of Miami, Fla., is seen in the lower center. Miss Boykin is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Basil Manly Boykin and the announcement of her engagement is of interest to a wide circle of friends in Atlanta and Miami, where Miss Boykin and Mr. Griffin are popular members of society. Photographs of Mrs. Williams and Miss Hodgson by Thurston Hatcher, of Miss Boykin by Stephenson studio, and of Mrs. Sites by McCrary & Co.

Young and Old Will Share In Week's Social Program

Young and old alike will share in the program of social festivities scheduled for the coming week which includes not a few formal occasions as well as an interesting array of less stately gatherings. Already the air is becoming charged with a spirit of merriment, anticipating the joyous Yuletide season, and society is indulging in every phase of charitable, cultural, civic and educational activity, in addition to social obligations.

Always of interest, both from a musical and a social standpoint, is the appearance of the Atlanta Symphony orchestra. The third concert of the current season will take place this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at the Grand theater, a feature of the program to be the rendition by Hugh Hodgson, of the Rubinstein concerts in D minor, one of the most beautiful piano compositions ever written.

Box Parties.

Many prominent Atlantans will be seen in the boxes for the concert. Former Governor John M. Slaton and Mrs. Slation will have as their guests Mr. and Mrs. Jay R. Reynolds, Mme. Le Noir, W. E. Dunn, Jr., with Mr. and Mrs. George W. Walker will be Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Hodgson, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Phillips; with Mrs. Enrico Leide will be Dr. and Mrs. Hal M. Davison, Adrian Pouliot, Horace Rundell and Rosebud Leide; with Dr. and Mrs. W. C. Jarnigan will be Mr. and Mrs. Linton C. Hopkins, Mr. and Mrs. Rutherford Lipscomb, Mrs. George Forrester. Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Smith will entertain in their box Mr. and Mrs. Bockover Toy and Mrs. Emma Lowry Burr

Gieberich Exhibit.

Art lovers of the city are especially grateful that another opportunity will be given to view the splendid collection of paintings by Oscar Gieberich, renowned artist of Paris and New York. The collection may be seen throughout the week at the Biltmore hotel. Atlantans take especial pride in these marvelous paintings by reason of their claim on Mrs. Gieberich, wife of the celebrated artist, who was before her marriage Miss Mable Drake, of Atlanta.

A prominent wedding occupying an interesting place on the week's calendar will be that of Miss Aileen Harris to Edward DeLeon Scruggs, of Brewton, Ala. The marriage will occur at 8:30 o'clock Wednesday evening at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lucien Harris, on Fourteenth street.

Another attractive bride-elect whose wedding is just in the offing is Miss Pauline Ware. During the week she will be feted at a round of lovely parties.

Miss Miriam Middleton, whose wedding will be a prominent social event of December, is also being extensively entertained at a round of parties each day. Mrs. Rutherford Lipscomb will be hostess at a beautiful tea at the Piedmont Driving club in her honor on Friday afternoon. Among other parties for this charming young girl party on Wednesday evening at the Miss Marion Battle and Miss Martha Magill at the Atlanta Biltmore Saturday. The same afternoon Miss Elizabeth Erwin will entertain for Miss Middleton at the tea-dance at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel.

The college set will be unusually busy this week flitting from one lovely dance to the other and trying to get in all the "dates" to which they are accustomed between times.

Chi Phis to Be Honored.

Mr. and Mrs. Preston Arkwright will entertain the members of the Chi Phi fraternity at Emory university Friday evening at the Druid Hills Golf club, assembling the members of the younger social contingent and the belles and beaux of the college set.

One of the most elaborate and interesting events among the college set will be the annual founder's day dinner-dance at which the members of the Delta chapter of the Phi Delta Theta fraternity of Georgia Tech will entertain. This affair will also be given at the Druid Hills Golf club on Saturday evening.

Truman Allen, president of company L, fourth regiment of Scabbard and Blade, honorary military fraternity at Emory university, will be host at a formal reception honoring the company's fourth lieutenants, Miss Frances Boykin and Mrs. Charles Currie will serve punch.

Among the out-of-town guests who will attend the wedding will be Mrs. Albert A. Green, of Jackson, Miss.; Mrs. B. M. Ware, of Opelika, Ala.; Mr. and Mrs. Edwin P. Flowers, of Montgomery, Ala.; Miss Laura Green, of Jackson, Miss.; Miss Page Melvin, of Selma, Ala.; Miss Isabelle Howard, of Memphis, Tenn.; Misses Adelaide and Mary Ross Flowers, of Montgomery, Ala.; Roscoe Beverly and Robert Wimberly, of Thomasville, Ga.

Forrest Hills Golf club. This affair will also assemble the members of the school set.

Honoring a quartet of recent brides, Mrs. Howard McCall will give a lovely tea on Thursday at her home at the Georgian Terrace. The attractive honor guests include Mrs. William Lemuel Mitchell, formerly Miss Mary Virginia Rapp, of Clarksburg, W. Va.; Mrs. Louis Morrison, formerly Miss Josephine Williford; Mrs. Thomas McDaniel, who was formerly Miss Louise Newton, and Mrs. Howard McCall, Jr.

Colonel and Mrs. Darrah Hosts.

An event of interest in army social circles will be the bridge-dinner at which Colonel Thomas W. Darrah and Mrs. Darrah will entertain Wednesday evening at their home in Ansley Park in compliment to Brigadier General LeRoy Eltinge and Mrs. Eltinge. Colonel and Mrs. Darrah will be hosts at a series of bridge-dinners during the winter.

Among the attractive hostesses of the younger set during the week will be Miss Margaret Underwood, who will give a lovely tea at her home on Ponce de Leon avenue Saturday afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock. This will be one of the early Christmas parties given among the school girl set.

Misses Askew To Entertain.

One of the most delightful affairs of the Christmas holidays will be the dance at which Misses Gertrude and Mary Askew will entertain at "Asquelon," the home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Scott Askew on Peachtree road.

The dance will be Saturday evening, December 19. One hundred will be invited.

Holiday Tea-Dance Is Announced.

One of the loveliest parties to be announced for the holiday season is the tea-dance at which Miss Frances Floyd and Alfred Floyd will entertain at the home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. James S. Floyd on the Prado in Ansley Park, December 21.

Invitations will be issued next week to 150 members of the college set to this delightful affair.

Miss Floyd will be hostess at an informal luncheon on Saturday, December 19 at her home, inviting a few close friends.

Miss Floyd will return from the Qgontz school in Philadelphia December 18 to spend the Christmas holidays and will be an admired belle attending the gayeties of the season.

Miss Sarah Sharp To Give Tea.

A lovely affair planned for this week, will be the large afternoon tea at which Miss Sarah Sharp will be hostess at the home of her mother, Mrs. W. A. Sharp, 44 West Fifteenth street, on Thursday, December 10, from 4 until 6 o'clock.

This will be one of the loveliest affairs of the pre-holiday events, gathering 125 of the young college contingent.

Assisting in entertaining will be Mrs. Sharp, Miss Nannetta Sharp, a sister of the hostess, Mrs. T. J. Day, Jr., and Mrs. W. J. Rooke.

Miss Patsy Thayer To Be Honored.

Mrs. Samuel A. Osburn will entertain at an informal tea Wednesday afternoon, December 30, at her home on Northwood avenue, in compliment to her attractive niece, Miss Patsy Thayer, daughter of Mrs. Hamie Tolbert Thayer, who has been attending school in Dayton, Ohio, and will remain in Atlanta after the holidays with her aunt, Mrs. Osburn.

A group of the younger set of society will be invited to meet the guest of honor.

Dinner-Dance at Driving Club.

The Piedmont Driving club was the scene of one of the loveliest of the week-end affairs, at the Saturday evening dinner-dance. The club was beautifully decorated, and the tables arranged around the dancing floor, held as central decorations baskets filled with lovely shaded chrysanthemums.

Attractive dance music was rendered throughout the evening, and a congenial group of friends and members were present.

Miss Maria Brown entertained a large party of friends. Covers were placed for eighteen guests.

A congenial party having dinner together were Mr. and Mrs. Howard See, Mr. and Mrs. Milton Thompson, and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hill.

Mr. and Mrs. Logan Clarke entertained a party of friends.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Adsit had as their guests Dr. and Mrs. Floyd McRae, Mr. and Mrs. West Terhune, Miss Laura Emory, of Baltimore, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Terhune; Miss

Miss Middleton To Wed Mr. Hallman on Dec. 16

A cordial interest centers in the announcement today of the plans for the wedding of Miss Miriam Bridge Middleton, daughter of Mrs. Walter Izard Middleton and Harry Highter Hallman, which is to occur on Wednesday, December 16, at high noon, at Saint Luke Episcopal church.

The Rev. N. R. H. Moor, rector of Saint Luke church, will officiate, and the bride will be given in marriage by her uncle, James S. Middleton, of Columbia, S. C.

Miss Middleton will have as her maid-of-honor her sister, Miss Margaret Middleton, and the bridesmaids will be Miss Mary Middleton, another sister, and Miss Martha Magill.

The little flower girls will be Julia Fitzsimmons, a cousin of the bride-elect and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Foster Fitzsimmons, and Mammie Hallman, a niece of the groom and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Hallman.

Mr. Hallman will have as his best man, Thomas H. Williams, and the groomsmen will be George T. Northen and Charles S. Gardner.

The ushers will be John F. Hallman, a brother of the groom; Henderson Hallman, Rutherford Lipscomb, John S. Spalding, James M. Reeves and John O. DuPree.

There will be no reception and the couple will leave immediately after the ceremony for a wedding trip, after which they will make their home in Atlanta.

HISTORIC QUILT BEARS NAMES OF MANY FAMOUS GEORGIANS

Mr. and Mrs. Vernon M'Millan On Way To Visit Atlanta

By Bessie S. Stafford.

IN THE long span of 42 years, ever since 1883, graceful baskets made of oiled calico, resting upon a white background, and filled with brightly-colored flowers, artistically bordered in turkey red, have held fast to their original colors in a priceless and historic quilt.

Its interesting story directly concerns Mrs. Robert F. Shedden and her mother, the late Mrs. John Ray, who as Miss Mary Rawson, daughter of the late Atlanta pioneer, E. E. Rawson, for whom Rawson street was named, and whose home there, "The Terrace," was the show place of Atlanta, married Mr. Ray.

Fifty-seven years ago, shortly after the civil war, Mr. Ray and his bride went to Newnan to reside. He owned a plantation of many acres in Coweta county upon a part of which the township of Raymond grew out of its swaddling clothes. Blessed with a gift for handling people and the social qualities of leadership, Mrs. Ray played upon the imaginations of a group of women to make them realize they had much in common in the community. She called a band of energetic souls together and organized the Home Improvement club. Another of the worthwhile undertakings of this noble woman was the founding of Mount Gilead church. In both of these endeavors she was ably assisted by Mrs. Will McGehee and her sister, Mrs. George B. Robinson. The latter is one of the best known and oldest citizens still residing at Raymond.

In 1883 funds were needed to promote neighborhood benefits and mission work!

Autographed quilts were all the rage, so the women decided to make one!

When finished the quilt recorded 482 names, with each square exactly alike, and examples of the exquisite needlework of the woman whose name was inscribed thereon in indelible ink. Every inscription remains clear and distinct to this day and prominent citizens of Fulton and Coweta counties have representation within confines of the brilliant border.

It was sold to the highest bidder, the proceeds of $35 going into the treasury of the organizations mentioned above. It was bought by the late Mr. Rawson, of Atlanta, who presented it to his daughter, Mrs. Ray, at whose death the valuable relic came into Mrs. Shedden's possession. When the Mary Ray Memorial school was completed by Mr. and Mrs. Shedden at Raymond, the quilt went back to the women of the community.

The fourth generation of the Rawson family, Mrs. Robert Foreman, Jr., having been Miss Mary Rawson Shedden before her marriage last spring, and namesake of her maternal grandmother, Mrs. Ray, holds the family heirloom. Upon it is inscribed the name of her beloved ancestor, whose aristocratic fingers plied the needle to form the pretty square shown at the left of the photograph.

A Talented Couple.

TWO EX-ATLANTANS, Mr. and Mrs. Vernon McMillan, who are not so ex that their magnetic personalities have been forgotten, leave New York today and will motor down the Dixie highway with this city as their destination.

They are coming to visit their parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. V. McMillan, on East Fourteenth street, to spend the gay and festive Yuletide season in the dear old southland where winter forgets to be winter, and everybody is as happy as the days are long. Mr. and Mrs. McMillan are a talented couple. He has a pleasing baritone voice and will be recalled as a star in the firmament of the Junior League Follies the season he opened the show with that swinging "Flower Song" number. She has a glorious soprano and is wearing upon her fair brow in laurels won quite recently in the operetta, "Land of Romance." Besides her many accomplishments Mrs. McMillan has charm and grace, with beauty thrown in for good measure.

There is a lovely bit of romance connected with their marriage!

Just 18 months ago, "Blossom Time," that musical comedy with its especial appeal of excellent music, came to the Atlanta theater. "Mitzi" was leading lady and the dearest and loveliest of three pretty sisters around whom the plot revolved. She sang that never-to-be-forgotten "Song of Love," the vocal gem of the entire program, its lilting music bringing out every note of her clear and marvelously sweet voice. "Mitzi," whose name on the program read Margaret Merle, was easily the hit of "Blossom Time." Mr. McMillan was at the premiere, and he occupied a certain seat at every performance thereafter.

It was love at first sight!

Not long afterward "Mitzi" became Mrs. Vernon McMillan, and when the "Blossom Time" contract ended, she came to Atlanta to grace her new role.

Social honors vied for favor with musical honors, Mrs. McMillan often lending her golden voice and gracious presence for charitable affairs. She was one "little songbird who could sing and never had to be coaxed to sing."

But society didn't intrigue her long. She had a serious mission to fulfill, so they journeyed to the metropolis so that she could work and study under famous masters, with the pursuit of business interests engaging Mr. McMillan.

Colonel Peel's Birthday Party.

EVEN in a city bristling with birthday parties those recently given for Colonel William L. Peel and little Gladys Irene Cook headline them all.

Carrying out a custom established many years ago, when Mrs. Stephen Watts, of Charlottesville, Va., was a little girl in Atlanta and celebrated her birthday with her father, Colonel Peel, one of the handsomest and most ornamental personages of this city, November 29 always marked an especially important day on the calendar for the Peel family. Then along came young Phinizy Calhoun, Jr., son of Dr. and Mrs. Calhoun, who decided that his grandfather's and aunt's birthday was a very opportune time to take up his residence on this earthly sphere, thereby making an interesting threesome. Thus it was that November 29 became a red-letter day in the happy family circle, with Mrs. Watts coming down annually for the occasion from Virginia, and some kind of party honoring the trio.

Last Sunday was a balmy day, glorious sunshine flooding Knollwood, the home of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Kiser, crowning the prettiest and most picturesque location on Paces Ferry road. Colonel Peel motored out to his daughter's home to dine with his children, grandchildren and a group of very close friends who had no inkling that it was a birthday party. A wonderful cake, topped with pink candles, adorned the exquisite table.

The only rift in the lute this year was the absence of Mrs. Watts in Europe, but she sent a lengthy cable from Vienna bearing felicitations from the absentee to her father and nephew.

And toasts were proposed to the trio wishing them a hundred years' of happiness and good health.

Gladys Irene Cook's Celebration.

PRECIOUS GLADYS IRENE, 7-year-old daughter of Gladys Hanson, the noted artist appearing in the titular role of "The Judge's Husband," one of the greatest theatrical successes in Chicago, makes her home in Atlanta with her grandfather, Peyton H. Snook, at his colonial home, "Seven Oaks," on Cleburne avenue. Two loving aunts, Misses Lucinda and Harriet Snook, and an adoring uncle, Peyton Snook, Jr., whom she affectionately calls "Buddy" (because her aunts do) staged a birthday party in her honor last week to which were bidden some of the future debs and sheiks of society.

Gladys Irene herself in an imported handmade frock of green georgette crepe, with French rosebud trimming and pink kid slippers, sent for the occasion by her artist mother, was seemingly more elated over the small white Japanese poodle, a gift ffom her uncle, which she has appropriately named "Fluff." It was the first gift she expressed the most desire for, but the next in importance was the tan leather doll carriage bearing her grandfather's card, in which sat "Baby," her favorite doll child, a cunning thing wearing the regulation baby clothes, some of them the handiwork of Gladys Irene. A Jack Horner pie, the central decoration of the party table in the dining room was among the "goodies" which make every birthday party worth while to children. Mouth harps gave the boys ample reason to tune in and make the welkin ring, while dollies pleased the girlies, and forceful, colorful paper caps adorned each smartly bobbed head.

Little Gladys Irene stepped out to do a graceful Chinese solo dance by victrola music, as did her little playmate, Martha Chitty, with talented Frances Orr and Rachel entertaining the guests with excellent piano selections for two so young.

Several weeks prior to the arrival of this auspicious event, the honor guest made out a list of presents which included a fountain pen, gold locket in which to put her sweetheart's photograph when she is sweet 16, and bottles of perfume. When the relatives questioned her as to why she desired these gifts, considered much too advanced for her baby years, she replied "So I can have them ready when I grow up."

She received them all!

A Bachelor Yachting Trousseau.

LIFE is all a question of the point of view!

This paragraph relates a little narrative about an eligible Atlanta bachelor, one of the most likeable men about town. He contemplates a trip to Florida, having accepted the invitation of another Atlantan to go aboard his yacht at Miami for a cruise in the southern waters of the Atlantic.

The last named gentleman lives practically all summer long in his motor boat, skimming through the sapphire blue waters of Lake Rabun in Lakemont, with yachting off the Florida coast as a winter pastime.

This prospective cruise looms on the horizon as one of the outstanding events in Mr. Bachelor's inland life. Careful thought and lots of time has been given to the purchasing of a wardrobe, including silk b. v. d.'s, pajamas and such accessories as would do credit to the trousseau of a bridegroom-elect, or a Rudolph Valentino, of movie fame.

His suits of clothes are in perfect keeping with the glorified underthings.

The sartorial picture is perfect!

On the other hand, his host hasn't ordered a new garment for the trip. Instead of dressing up on the yacht, he rather underdresses the part, for he packs his suit case with his oldest clothes for a sail on the briny deep.

It would take nothing short of a major operation to divorce the aforementioned bachelor from his Florida finery.

Glen Evins Weds a Blonde.

GOOD-LOOKING GLEN EVINS did just exactly what he declared back in his 'teen age day he intended to do and resided in Atlanta.

He married a blonde!

Even at the time when he was 17-going-on-18 he swore allegiance to and partiality for the luminous blonde, being counted as a devoted admirer for several years of one of the fairest of that type before she decided to leave the Paces Ferry road contingent by marrying a splendid gentleman and moved to the city down where Tybee's light directs the mariner on his true course.

In Tampa last week, at 29-going-on-30, when he and Cupid met Miss Agnes Thames at St. Andrew's Episcopal altar, with Orme Campbell, of Atlanta, as best man, one of the most marvelously beautiful blondes in the state of Florida became Mrs. Glen Evins.

In the bits of interesting news concerning this brilliant wedding it is related that as she marched down the aisle to Lohengrin's tum, tum, tee, tum, it was all the guests could do to keep from voicing aloud their approval, so radiantly lovely was the bride in her robes of ivory chiffon velvet worn with real lace veil.

But the bride wasn't the only beauty. Far from so! Pretty Mrs. Orme Campbell motored down with Mr. Campbell and was a guest in the colorful assemblage.

An adorable little tot, Barbara Beckwith, 4-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Beman Beckwith, was flower girl, wearing a blue chiffon frock fashioned of puff bands and cream silk lace, dotted with tiny pink rosebuds. Silver ribbons fluttered from a cluster of rosebuds from her shoulder. When asked what she was to be in the wedding, Babbie, as she is called, said "the whole cheese." This little sprite of a girl found the ring in the wedding cake, but she's far too young to believe she'll be the next bride, like the old superstition runneth.

Off on a honeymoon went the bride and groom with the national capital as their first stop and a visit to Commander Homer C. Wick, U. S. N., and Mrs. Wick, the latter a sister of Mr. Evins, who was Miss Mary Eleanor Evins, of Atlanta, and a prototype of Bebe Daniels, the pretty movie star. The foursome were in New York for the Army-Navy gridiron contest, which drew its spectators from every corner of the globe.

Receiving the cards will be three dainty little misses, Elsa Roberts McCall, Ann Wright Forston and Charlotte Boyd Woolford.

Miss Clarke To Wed Mr. Eden.

Of cordial interest to many friends throughout the state is the engagement announced today of Miss Josephine Tabitha Clarke to Clarence A. Eden, of Gastonia, N. C.

Miss Clarke is the eldest daughter of Dr. and Mrs. W. Harvey Clarke, greatly beloved missionaries of the foreign mission board of the Southern Baptist convention, who have labored in Japan for more than 20 years. Dr. and Mrs. Clarke are now home on furlough and residing with Mrs. Clarke's mother, Mrs. Josephine Daniel, at 96 Gordon street.

Miss Clarke is a young woman of unusual beauty and culture. Having been born in Kumamota, Japan, she received her education partly in the Shanghai-American school in China, and partly in the Canadian academy, Kobe, and at the American school, in Tokio. She returned to Georgia in 1920 and entered Bessie Tift college, where she was graduated in June, 1924. Her musical education was received from the Atlanta Conservatory and at Columbia university, New York city. Her lovely voice is frequently in demand in both church and club circles.

On her paternal side Miss Clarke is the granddaughter of Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Clarke, formerly missionaries to Africa. On her maternal side she is the granddaughter of the late J. C. Daniel and Mrs. Daniel. On both sides of her family she is descended from men of Revolutionary fame.

Mr. Eden is a native of Macon, Ga., has been a resident of Atlanta and is now vice president of the O. A. Smith Roofing company and manager of the branch located in Gastonia, N. C. He received his education at Mercer university, is a member of the S. A. E. fraternity and a 32d degree Mason. Mr. Eden is a son of Mrs. Leila G. Eden, of Macon, Ga.

The young couple will be married quietly at home on the afternoon of December 30 at 5 o'clock. The bride's father, Dr. Clarke, will perform the ceremony.

Miss Crumley Gives Lovely Luncheon.

Miss Caroline Crumley was hostess at a lovely buffet luncheon on Saturday at the home of her mother, Mrs. Robert Crumley, on Inman circle.

Beautiful flowers were used throughout the home, pink, white and yellow chrysanthemums being attractively arranged.

Mrs. Crumley, Mrs. W. C. Royer and Mrs. W. R. C. Smith assisted Miss Crumley in entertaining.

Twenty-six guests were invited.

Informal Tea Honors Guests.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Marvin Underwood entertained at an informal tea Saturday afternoon at their residence, 21 Avery drive, in honor of Dr. and Mrs. Woodward and Dr. and Mrs. English, who have recently come to Atlanta and are connected with Emory university.

Dr. and Mrs. Newton, Newton Underwood and Miss Florence Underwood assisted in receiving.

Mrs. E. E. Pomeroy and Mrs. Victor Smith poured tea.

The Emory colors, blue and gold, furnished the motif for the decorations in the dining room.

Fifty friends called during the afternoon.

The officers of the club are Miss Ellen Newell, president; Miss Louise Nelson, vice president; Miss Harriett Shedden, secretary, and Miss Will Hawkins, treasurer.

Extensive Plans for Gay Christmas Holiday Announced

With the holiday season already upon us elaborate plans and preparations are rapidly being made for dances, luncheon and dinner parties. The gay festive season so full of Christmas cheer and New Year wishes will center mainly at the Atlanta Biltmore which will be for three weeks the rendezvous of Atlanta society, belles and beaux of the younger set, the college contingent and the school set which will be home for the holidays with their families.

Taking Atlanta completely by surprise and thrilling the music lovers as well as the followers of the terpsichorean art the management of the Atlanta Biltmore has announced the engagement for three weeks, from December 21 to January 10, John Hamp's famous Coral Gables Biltmore orchestra to play for all social functions for the hotel. This orchestra is coming direct from a six-month engagement in Florida, where it was well known throughout the state. Atlantans will remember it last year in the city under the direction of Roger Wolfe Kahn, but since then has been under the direction of Johnny Hamp who is equally well known.

The following program has been announced by the Biltmore for the three weeks:

Monday, December 28, luncheon in the main dining room. Dinner-dance in the ball room. Tuesday, December 29, luncheon in the main dining room. Tea-dance in the ball room. Alpha Kappa fraternity dance in the ball room. Wednesday, December 30, luncheon in the main dining room. Regular mid-week dinner-dance in the ball room. Thursday, December 31, luncheon in the main dining room. New Year's dinner-dance in ball room.

Friday, January 1, luncheon in the main dining room, tea-dance in the ball room. Dinner-dance in the ball room. Saturday, January 2, luncheon in the main dining room. Tea-dance in the ball room. Sunday, January 3, luncheon in the main dining room. Regular concert-dinner in the main dining room. Monday, January 4, luncheon in the main dining room. Dinner-dance in the ball room. Tuesday, January 5, luncheon in the main dining room. Tea-dance in the ball room. Wednesday, January 6, luncheon in the dining room. Regular mid-week dinner-dance in the ball room. Thursday, January 7, luncheon in the main dining room. Tea-dance in the ball room. Friday, January 8, luncheon in the main dining room, dinner-dance in the ball room. Saturday, January 9, luncheon in the main dining room. Tea-dance in the ball room. Sunday, January 10, luncheon in the main dining room. Regular concert-dinner in the main dining room.

All who desire reservations are urged to call the Biltmore in order to secure desirable locations.

Morning Musicale Presented Noted Pianist in Concert

The morning musicale presented last Wednesday by the Atlanta Music club attracted the usual large audience of music lovers. Appearing here for the first time was Lionel Levinson Sinclair, the new associate director and head of the piano department of the Atlanta Conservatory. Mr. Sinclair came heralded as an eminent authority on musical subjects and a pianist and pedagogue of great skill. He chose a program of surpassing technical difficulty and one that only a musical audience could grasp. He played the Chopin Sonata Opus 58, the Brahms variations on a theme by Paganini, and the Chopin ballade in F minor.

Mr. Sinclair's talent is coupled with a high intellectuality, and he brings a brilliant technique to his interpretations, which bear the mark of supreme authority. His tone has a virile quality, particularly full and rich in the legato passages with subtle shadings and nuances. An extraordinary versatility is shown in the great variety of compositions he interprets, with equal variety of moods, with particular understanding of the peculiar beauties of each.

The Atlanta Conservatory, whose many contributions to the club programs are ever appreciated, has brought in Mr. Sinclair an acquisition to the community. His years of study with Leschetizky, Busoni and Matthay have given him a background and an enviable equipment for his career as pianist and instructor. Though still a young man, his musicainship is mature and highly cultivated.

The next morning musicale will be on December 16, when Miss Madeline Keipp will give a lecture on "The Opera," with illustrations by members of Miss Margaret Hecht's vocal class and the Emory Glee club, Dr. Malcolm Dewey, director. Alton O'Steen will be the accompanist.

Wayburn Again Will Lead Junior League's Activities

"Morocco," a musical comedy, has been chosen for the 1926 production of the Atlanta Junior League, it was announced Saturday.

Preliminary details of the 1926 production have been received and include news that Ned Wayburn, Broadway producer, again will be in charge of the league's activities in the theatrical line. Mr. Wayburn made a big success of the Follies of 1925 given by the league.

There are several big roles to be filled, including that of a "sheik." Part of the scene is laid in Morocco, where the father of five extravagant modern girls flees to escape their expensive and highly up-to-date ways, which are driving him insane. Hardly is he settled in Morocco, however, before the daughters follow him with a wagon load of C. O. D. bargains, with a "sheik" in pursuit. Plenty of complications at this point furnish the comedy.

Space for rehearsals has been offered by Holland B. Judkins, manager of the Biltmore hotel.

ATLANTA ROMANCE TRANSFERRED TO STATE OF FLORIDA

Breezy Items About Atlanta Society Folks

BY BEVERLY BURGESS.

A very popular place with hosts of friends, who are fond of going in for an evening's game of bridge, is the new home of the Louis Morrisons, October bride and groom, in the St. George apartment.

Nothing cosier could be imagined than the little love-nest of this delightful young couple, who returned recently from an extended wedding trip to northern resorts. The beautiful Biltmore wedding in the fall will long be remembered for its exquisiteness of detail and for its exclusiveness.

The same daintiness of taste which has always characterized this lovely young girl is shown in every appointment of her new home.

Each piece of furniture, every rug, the color in the lampshades, the draperies and on through to the minutest detail, Josephine has made an especial matter of interest and study from an artistic appeal.

No item was too trivial for the gravest consideration.

And now that she has successfully set up the lares and penates of her new home, this same artistry is seeking expression in a pursuance of Terpsichore's art.

The emotional appeal of music, the lyrics of motion mean as much to her as harmony of color, and daintiness of detail in her surroundings in the home.

In her life there must be poetry, the mood of springtime, the early morning sunlight expressed in the rhythm of her very being.

So, with congenial friends, under a wonderful instructor, daily Josephine Morrison is cultivating to completeness that which holds a place of highest value in her life.

ANOTHER BRIDE.

Irene Thomas Warren, the bride of a few weeks of Dr. Green Warren, is also finding time in her new life for some of the worthwhile things.

She, too, is another charming bride who has established her own cosy little home, with its accompanying daily routine of detail, servants to be directed, meals to be planned, marketing to be attended to, but the same ability that has always been an outstanding feature with Irene, she is bringing to her new responsibilities. Her especial interest, however, has been since early girlhood days, organization work. Great executive ability does this young bride possess and with it goes a wonderful tact and finesse which gives her much success in her touch with people.

Whenever an undertaking along this line is thought of being projected, particularly in the ranks of young girls, Irene's name is the first one to be mentioned. Wonderful was her work at Camp Nakanawa as counsellor, last summer. Always will she occupy a little "place apart" in the hearts of the many Washington seminary girls, whose physical director she was just prior to her recent marriage.

And now that Mrs. Lee Ashcraft wants a capable organizer in her very wonderful work of starting Girl Reserve corps at the different schools, to Irene Thomas Warren she has turned for help, and back in the old haunts, at Washington seminary Irene finds herself giving part of the day, until this new move is well on its feet.

A word or two should be said along here of Dr. Warren's public spirit and interest in movements uplifting in lending his beautiful new bride to Mrs. Ashcraft for even this much of her time!

CORAL GABLES ROMANCE.

"All the world loves a lover" is the truest saying in this world! How fondly the eyes of all follow the development of romance in any walk of life!

When, however, was there ever one in Atlanta that was the center of more genuine and sincere interest than that of Marian Smith and Hugh Bell?

Both of these young people are Atlantans by birth, not adoption. All the days of their lives, they have "moved and had their being" in our midst. We have loved them through grade school days, through high school days, into and out of college and into social life! Is our great interest in the romance which we have watched from its very incipiency, anything unusual? The announcement, a few weeks ago, was no surprise to their hundreds of friends here, whose hearts glowed with the reflected warmth of theirs.

When business took the stalwart, handsome groom temporarily, we hope, to the land of sunshine and flowers to the south of us, was there any surprise that his bride-to-be quickly found this an opportune time to pay a long deferred visit to her sister, Mrs. Lifsey, also living in Coral Gables? And here in the warmth of Florida sunshine they are together, awaiting the nuptial day!

Sincerely we hope the lure of this beautiful spot of earth will not hold these Atlanta children permanently, and very soon they will be coming home to stay.

CENTRAL SAVES THE DAY.

One of our very busy, popular girls, on a recent occasion, found it absolutely necessary to break her date at the eleventh hour. How she was to reach him was too much for human ken! All she knew was his name and that he was a medical student at Emory, and that he stood ace-high with his confreres. This was quite sufficient for times of peace but an emergency had arisen which called for more details and these quickly.

She had a sneaking suspicion that she had heard that he was a K. A. at Emory. Whether this were true or otherwise it would do to start on. To the phone she promptly went and called the K. A. number. No one home, not even the janitor. The hands of the clock were moving rapidly toward two, the appointed time of meeting at Huyler's, the usual place for dates to meet.

Poor Doc, she had visions of him being draped against the front of Huyler's store for an indefinite length of time awaiting her non-arrival! What should she do?

Again she turned to the phone, calling that dumb—literally—K. A. number. Not so dumb this time, there was a response!

Yes, Doc Smith was a K. A. but he came to the chapter house about once in every two months. She might call the mess hall, which number the speaker very kindly supplied. This was done.

No. He ate there no more. The only clue this person could suggest was to call the Grady hospital. This number was not kindly supplied by the speaker.

After a little delay it was successfully gotten however.

"Doc Smith? Who is he?"

How could she tell the person at Grady who Doc Smith was when she did not know herself!

"Any way," the peremptory person at Grady said back through the phone, "you say he is a medical student and we don't allow any telephone calls until after four in the afternoon. Again visions of Huyler's and the lone sentinel!

Again the voice of Grady on the wire, who evidentally by this time had gathered the impression that there had been a bereavement in the family of one Doc Smith, "you might call Ivy 1595. Maybe she would let him come to the phone, if you would tell her just how important it is!

The new number was called and it must have been an angel who answered. None other could have been so eager to help her in such an extremity.

"Doc Smith? Can you tell me how to locate him? No? What are his initials? What class is he in? We have three Smiths in the senior class, five in the junior, eight in the sophomore, six in the freshman and two in the faculty! You do not know, you say, what medical fraternity he belongs to? Will you describe his appearance to me"? Here at last was the only thing of all she had been asked to do that was in the first particular, at all possible.

Right glibly she furnished the description, leaving it in the hands of her unknown friend.

In 30 minutes Doc Smith himself was on the phone!

"Before I say one word of what I wanted with you, will you kindly give me the story of your life in detail for the purpose of identification for future use, should a like emergency arise?"

Little does he yet realize his debt to the very nice phone operator at Grady hospital.

A delightful musical program will be one of the features of the occasion. All Agnes Scott alumnae and friends of the college are invited to call.

Adriel Class Holds Banquet And Installation

The Adriel class of the First Christian church held its annual banquet Saturday evening at Peacock cafe with 29 members present. At this time the newly-elected officers were installed and the retiring officers, Miss Elizabeth Burke, president; Mrs. G. H. Turnipseed, vice president; Miss Leona Hampton, recording secretary; Miss Grace Thornton, corresponding secretary, and J. H. Bush, treasurer, made their annual reports.

The feature of the banquet and installation was the presence of the pastor, Rev. C. R. Stauffer, and Mrs. Stauffer, together with Sunday School Superintendent Dr. Elsie Thomas and Mrs. Thomas.

At this gathering of the Adriel class, it was pointed out in the annual report of the retiring president, Miss Elizabeth Burke, that the class progressed wonderfully and that its past year was a success from every standpoint.

The treasurer, J. H. Bush, in his report showed that a very large amount was raised during the past year and that a goodly sum of money was contributed to various benevolence offerings.

Following the reports of the various retiring officers, Dr. Elzie Thomas called the roll of the newly-elected officers, and with a short ceremonial installed the following who will serve in the year 1925-26: T. F. Hemminger, teacher; Mrs. A. R. Mayfield, president; Mrs. J. H. Bush, vice president; Mrs. T. F. Hemminger, recording secretary; Mrs. Martha Arnold, corresponding secretary, and G. H. Turnipseed, treasurer.

Following the installation of the newly-elected officers, the teacher, T. F. Hemminger, made a splendid talk. He presented Miss Burke, retiring president, with a beautiful gold bar pin, showing the appreciation of the class.

Miss Leona Hampton, the retiring recording secretary, was presented with a gift by J. H. Bush in behalf of the class.

Following the reports and installation, Mrs. A. R. Mayfield called the order of business. The first action taken was the appointment of various committees to serve for the year. The vice president, Mrs. J. H. Bush, announced her circle leaders who will serve for the first three months. Rev. Stauffer followed with a talk on the excellent work of the class.

The next business meeting of the class will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. Stuart, 650 Washington street. Date will be announced later. Mrs. Elizabeth Phillips won the prize of the evening. The meeting was closed with a prayer by T. F. Hemminger.

Mr. and Mrs. N. D. Jones and family are at home at 308 Lynwood avenue.

Arbor Day Program At Joe Brown School.

The Arbor day program at Joe Brown on Friday morning, December 4, was unusually interesting and beautiful. The exercises were opened by the pledge to the flag and invocation by Dr. C. M. Meeks. The speaker of the morning, R. R. Ritchie, assistant business manager of the Atlanta public schools, made a most appropriate talk. Miss Lillouise Branch recited the poem, "Why Plant a Tree," in a very charming manner. Frank Eaves, chairman of the building grounds committee, assisted by Mr. Brown, of the faculty, were in charge of the program of tree planting. Four of the trees were donated to the Parent-Teacher association by Mrs. F. L. Volberg, Jr., one of these trees being planted to Mr. Martin, principal of Joe Brown; one to Miss Lamar Jeter, assistant principal; Mrs. Boardman planting the trees. Mrs. Savage planted a tree in memory of Elsie Houston, one of the Joe Brown pupils. This tree was given by Ezelle Lewis. Miss Madge Bigham's kindergarten dedicated two trees to Mrs. J. S. Boardman, who planted them in memory of her children, Lillian and James. Frank Eaves planted a tree in honor of Mr. Cook, of the faculty. In the front yard, Miss Elizabeth Spaulding, granddaughter of Joseph Brown, dedicated the beautiful magnolia tree already there to Mrs. Joseph E. Brown and Mrs. Spaulding gave a marker for the tree. The music for the occasion was furnished by the Tech High band, which demonstrated unusual ability and delighted their hearers.

La Rocca Circle Holds Meeting.

On Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, La Rocca circle of the Supreme Forest Woodman circle held the regular meeting and had as visitors from Maple Grove, Mrs. Annie Byars and Miss Blanch Byars. A very successful spend-the-day party, held at the home of Mrs. C. D. Owens on last Friday, was reported. All members are urged to be present at the next regular meeting for the purpose of completing plans for the Christmas social to be given December 26.

W. A. R. M. A. To Meet Thursday

Mrs. F. J. Liley, Mrs. S. M. Griffin and Mrs. C. P. Smith will be hostesses for the W. A. R. M. A. at the regular monthly meeting, Thursday, at 16 Cascade place. Take Whitehall to Beecher street car to Alligator avenue. All members are requested to be present at 3 o'clock.

Social News Of Griffin.

Griffin, Ga., December 5.—Cordial interest over the state is felt in the new: of the marriage of Miss May Lester and A. P. Lewis, both of Griffin. The wedding was a quiet event of Tuesday evening, taking place at the home of the officiating minister, the Rev. O. K. Cull, with only the immediate members of the two families present.

The bride was lovely in a fall model of sand-colored chiffon velvet worn with a blue velvet hat and slippers and hose to match.

Mrs. Lewis is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Lester, and is popular with a wide circle of friends. Her only sister is Mrs. Roscoe Sims, and her two brothers are Arthur Lester and Lee Lester. She attended school at Locust Grove Institute in Locust Grove before coming to Griffin to make her home.

Mr. Lewis is a popular young business man, holding a responsible position with a prominent hardware concern. He came to Griffin from Vaughn, where his family have long been pioneers of that section. He is a sister of Mrs. Nannie Williams, and his brothers are Ernest Lewis and Joe Lewis, all of Griffin.

The lovely bride wore a fall model of brown charmeen combined with brown satin, with hat and accessories to match. Following the ceremony, the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Crawford, entertained at a wedding breakfast at their home on Palace street, the occasion assembling a few immediate relatives and friends. Later in the day, Mr. and Mrs. Carr left on their wedding trip, after which they will make their home in Griffin.

Mrs. J. A. Summerville, of Chicago, Ill., announces the marriage of her daughter, Jessie Cunningham, to J. B. Boyd, of Griffin. The marriage was quietly solemnized in Atlanta Sunday in the presence of a few relatives and friends. Mrs. Boyd, as Miss Summerville, was a charming and talented young woman, and will be a welcome addition to Griffin, where her husband is a well-known business man.

Mrs. Henry Earthman and Mrs. J. M. Royall will have charge of the candy booth. Christmas candies of all kinds will be sold. Mrs. William Alden will sell hot roast beef sandwiches and coffee on Friday. Mrs. Guy Webbe will sell pies and cakes on both days. Mrs. E. B. Branch and Mrs. T. M. Smoot will serve luncheon Saturday afternoon and evening, consisting of Brunswick stew, cornmeal muffins, salad, crackers and coffee.

A fortune telling booth will be provided. A booth will be prepared by members of the garden club division, from which shrubs and roses for fall planting will be sold. Orders will be taken, if desired, and delivered at Christmas.

Clifton Presbyterian Church Bazar.

Clifton Presbyterian church at the corner of McLendon and Nelms street will hold a bazar Tuesday, December 8, all day. Many fancy articles and home-made jellies and pickles at reasonable prices. Also a turkey supper will be served from 6 to 8 o'clock in the evening.

Miss Schuessler and Mrs. Oliver Will Stage Art Exhibition at Woman's Club

From left to right: Miss Mary Schuessler, of Roanoke, Ala., and Mrs. Herbert Dean Oliver, of Atlanta, talented artists whose art exhibition on December 14 to 19, inclusive, will be of interest throughout the state. It will open at the intime gallery of the Atlanta Woman's club with a preview showing on December 12. They have recently returned from Europe with the George Elmer Brown sketching party through Brittany, southern France, Morocco and Spain. Photographs by Kenneth Rogers, staff photographer.

A pre-view of the paintings of Miss Mary Schuessler, of Roanoke, Ala., and Mrs. Herbert Dean Oliver, of Atlanta, will be at the Atlanta Woman's club gallery on Saturday, December 12. The public can view the skitches from December 14 to 19.

Miss Schuessler and Mrs. Oliver are pupils of George Elmer Brown, who was in Atlanta and exhibited pictures at the Grand Central Art exhibit. They have been traveling with his sketching party in Europe for the past year, studying under him and sketching in southern France, Britain and Morocco, Spain.

Miss Schuessler's Training.

Miss Schuessler has studied extensively and had many artistic advantages. She was graduated and took a post-graduate course at the Virginia college in Roanoke and studied for two years in New York with George Bridgman, and with Mable Welsh, one of the best known miniature artists in America. Miss Schuessler specializes in portraits, but also paints landscapes. The New York Art Student league purchased a life drawing of hers, which was a distinct honor accorded this young girl, who is highly gifted and is herself very charming and unusually beautiful.

Two of the loveliest of her miniatures were those of Mrs. Ely Calloway, who has recently returned to Georgia for residence in LaGrange after having spent the past three years in New York. She was before her marriage Miss Lula Walker, of Madison. The other is of Mrs. John Earlisle, of Roanoke, one of the most prominent social leaders of Alabama.

Mrs. Oliver's Landscapes.

Mrs. Oliver specializes in landscape paintings, but does portraits also. She is a graduate of the Maryland institute in Baltimore and was in Elmer Brown's sketching class in May, 1924, and painted many interesting landscape scenes in Piedmont park, Roswell and Marietta. She had the honor of winning the Sam Inman prize of $50 in gold and the J. J. Haverty prize of $25 at the exhibition sponsored by the Atlanta Art association. Mrs. Oliver's painting, "The Miami Canal," which appears in colors in a current issue of the Southern Bell Telephone Magazine, is a very attractive scene. A portrait of hers was sent to Germany to the Munich Art school exhibition in 1913.

These young women are deeply interested in art and are creators of very artistic and wonderful paintings. The exhibition at the Atlanta Woman's club during December will attract art lovers from all over the state.

St. Luke Service League To Entertain.

The Young People's Service league of St. Luke church will give a silver tea Tuesday evening from 8 to 11 o'clock at the home of Rev. and Mrs. H. N. R. Moor on Peachtree circle. This tea is given for the purpose of raising money for the league's Christmas and other donations.

Park St. Mothers Have Meeting.

The Mothers' class of Park Street Methodist church was delightfully entertained at their monthly business and social meeting by Mrs. Arthur Hale, at her home, "The Wren's Nest," on Friday evening, November 27. Mrs. Camp, president, presiding. Splendid reports of the class activities were given by the different chairmen.

The "Peddler's Pack" was opened and a nice sum realized from the sale of some of its contents.

A reading, "Mary Carey," by little Miss Sarah Whiteman, was splendidly rendered and enjoyed very much. The hostess served delicious refreshments.

Those present were Mrs. C. M. Meeks, Mrs. J. P. Hill, Mrs. S. R. Wilson, Mrs. W. M. Kitchens, Mrs. J. H. Carter, Mrs. C. C. Berry, Mrs. F. B. Young, Mrs. Ida Roberts, Mrs. G. H. Voyles, Mrs. J. B. Montgomery, Mrs. R. E. Barnes, Mrs. R. B. Stewart, Mrs. A. L. Sloan, Mrs. F. C. Holmes, Mrs. M. P. Phipps, Mrs. Lila Ellis, Mrs. Harry Jones, Mrs. Banks Whiteman, Mrs. D. M. Therrell, Mrs. J. H. Merritt, Mrs. Arthur Hale, Mrs. O. T. Camp.

The next meeting will be held during the Christmas holidays at the home of the teacher, Mrs. Lila Ellis, on Hopkins street.

Girl Scout Activities.

Following their annual custom the Girl Scouts will sing carols at the Atlanta hospitals and institutions on Christmas eve, spreading cheer to the shut-ins in the community.

The carol singing follows the scouts' own candle lighting and carol service which is held at 4 o'clock Christmas eve in one of the central churches. This year St. Luke's Episcopal church has been chosen and all the scouts in the city will unite in the most impressive service they hold throughout the year.

The following hospital assignments have already been requested: Scottish Rite hospital, troop No. 12 and East Lake troop No. 1; Home for Incurables, troop No. 17; St. Joseph's Infirmary, troop No. 19; Old Ladies' Home, troop No. 11; Home for the Friendless, troop No. 16; Piedmont Sanitarium, troop No. 18; Grady hospital, troops Nos. 27, 33 and 37.

Plans for the Christian activities were completed at the regular monthly meeting of the Girl Scout Officers' association, held at Scout headquarters Thursday afternoon, December 3. Twenty-one troops were represented at the meeting which was characterized by enthusiasm and a keen spirit of cooperation.

The meeting of the officers was addressed by Mrs. Lee Ashcraft, member of the National Girl Scout Board of Directors, who extended a cordial invitation to a tea at which she will entertain the troop leaders and scout council.

Y. M. C. A Auxiliary To Hold Meeting

The Ladies' auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A., will have its regular meeting Friday, December 11 at 3 o'clock, with the executive board meeting at 2 o'clock.

The meeting will be presided over by the president, Mrs. George B. Hinman. Mrs. George Westmoreland will lead the devotional. Mrs. Robert L. Cooney will sing with Miss Ethel Lilford as accompanist. All members are urged to attend.

The Christmas banquet given by the ladies to the newsboys is in full swing and enthusiastic responses have met all suggestions.

Miss Baxter Receives Letter From Mrs. Francis E. Whitley

Miss Alice Baxter, state chairman of forestry and conservation, has received the following letter from Mrs. Francis E. Whitley, national chairman in the general federation:

Dear chairmen of conservation and forestry: It has been a pleasure to hear from many of you: from old friends with whom I have worked before, and others from whom we are hoping for splendid cooperation, especially in the work now outstanding in the conservation division: the promotion of measures to protect our forests.

For years we have stressed the need of conservation of our forest resources. Now we are confronted by the fact that all that is being done by way of reforestation may be rendered unavailing by the fires which, in numbers increasingly alarming, year by year sweep away thousands of acres of standing timber.

Here are a few outstanding facts: In 1921 there were 32,578 forest fires and in 1921 there were 91,912 forest fires.

Of these 92 per cent were started by human agencies.

Two reasons for this great increase are apparent: the greater use of the forests by the people for recreational purposes, and the fact that so large a proportion of them are ignorant of the menace of a forest fire.

Evidently education is the only means by which this fire evil can be rooted out, and to this end "the school room, the club, the lecture hall, the newspaper" must unite to plant in "every home and heart and head the lesson that responsibility for the destruction of our great heritage of trees is individual."

The women's clubs are urged to join in the three-year educational campaign which is proposed. The same plans suggested in the movement to promote "outdoor good manners" may be used in teaching everywhere the vital importance of the forests and the responsibility of the individual citizen for protecting them. Let it find a place in every school curriculum as part of the training in good citizenship. Very few school men will refuse to consider such a request from the club women. This was demonstrated in the movement inaugurated during the present season to put the teaching of "outdoor good manners" into the schools.

The success which attended the launching of this campaign for outdoor manners has been remarkable. From many states have come the reports of the thousands of schoolrooms, the movies, the newspapers, which have helped spread the gospel that outdoor good-manners will protect the beauty of parks and woodlands and help prevent forest fires.

This work will be carried forward with even greater energy during the coming year as it has been endorsed by the American Forestry association, the Nature association, and by the press in every section of the country.

Will you let me hear of your success with this?

The inquiries which are coming from states in different sections concerning wild life refuges show that our women are interested in this new branch of work. The chairman of this committee will be glad to send materials for programs, papers, etc.; write for them.

The American Forestry association, Washington, D. C., the United States Forest service will send abundant helps for study and programs. Please let me know of any way in which I can be of assistance.

Yours very sincerely,

MRS. FRANCIS E. WHITLEY,
Chairman Forestry and Wild Life Refuges.

Fine Arts Chairman Issues Letter From National Chairman

Mrs. W. R. Johnston, of Sylvester, chairman of fine arts for the state federation, has received the following letter from Mrs. V. S. Berry, national fine arts chairman concerning the building of the fine arts gallery in Washington, D. C.:

With the approach of the next session of congress, it is essential that we do some serious work to secure the appropriation of $10,000,000 which we are asking for the building of a national gallery in Washington, D. C. If the gallery were less the affair of everybody, it would be easier to make certain of the proper effort. But since it requires the united action of the states, from Maine to California and from Florida to Washington, the matter has lagged for years. The United States is the only nation in the world that has no national gallery of art. The United States—the richest country in the world; the land given in many instances to absolute idealism; the land where the individual counts for more than anywhere on earth, if he is alive to his surroundings; the land whose people have been so splendid in their ability to look forward; the land toward which all nations of the world look for guidance and leadership, is the one nation that has never recognized art as an asset, nor its artists as worthy of recognition, or their work as worthy of preservation—this though Europe has placed the American painter on the heights with her own, by prizes, awards, scholarships and positions of honor, for 125 years.

Another Side.

This places the United States in a position to take second place among all nations in the appreciation of a subject which ranks with the spiritual and the loftiest elements in a civilization, and is greatly to be regretted. But there is another side of the question. For many years the United States has been the recipient of paintings and sculpture to the amount of $500,000 annually. These gifts have now reached millions in value, but they cannot be exhibited. They are hanging in offices, in corridors, on temporary screens and stored in vaults in Washington, D. C. This is not all. The time have arrived when they cannot conveniently accept more, because storage of the proper kind is scarcely available. Consequently, the gifts are falling off. The large museums of the states and the great cities are being offered paintings if they will hang them until such times as the United States can accept and hang them. Of course these museums refuse such temporary bequests, and even they are lost to the nation. Now it is incredible that this nation should leave itself in a position where, at an inestimable loss to itself, it cannot receive gifts, let alone assemble a collection of its art for itself as it should. This is not an exaggeration; it is nearer an understatement of the truth; and it would be laughable if it were not a matter of keenest regret, to say nothing of absolute folly.

For years the general federation in convention assembled and through its art division has pledged its support to the matter of attaining a national gallery. Just now is the time when every effort should be expended for the cause. A list of buildings which the government especially needs will be prepared and presented to the coming session of congress, and after that a building budget suitable to meet the expense of the building plan will be apportioned, and the national gallery must be among the buildings listed or it will mean another long delay. Every additional year means serious loss to the nation in the way of art treasures, and the nation should not have to suffer such loss because of the indifference of those of us who know.

We beg you to bring this before your conventions and obtain favorable action—if not your conventions, then your board. After having done this, then send the resolution to the Washington representatives from your state immediately before congress meets, with the request that they consider the appropriation favorably, and beg that they write you of the sanction and approval of this appropriation. Do not stop until you have your Washington man on record.

Sincerely yours, and all for the cause,
ROSE V. S. BERRY,
Chairman of Art.

Resolution Adopted.

A resolution indorsing the recommendations contained in Mrs. Berry's letter was adopted by the executive board of the Georgia federation at its meeting in September and copies of this resolution are being forwarded to your representatives in Washington, D. C.

Covington Woman's Club Holds Important December Meeting

The regular monthly meeting of the Woman's club, of Covington, was held in the library on Tuesday afternoon, December 1. The president, Mrs. S. L. Waites, presided, and accorded a warm welcome to several new members. Minutes of the last meeting were read and approved, and the reports from the various officers showed satisfactory progress.

Special committee on bazar, Mrs. Fitzhugh Lee, chairman, reported hearty co-operation of all members, and the bazar will be held next Wednesday and Thursday, December 9 and 10, at the library.

Attention was called to the condition of the public rest room under the court house, and Mrs. Wick Porter, Mrs. S. L. Waites, Mrs. J. E. Phillips, Mrs. C. R. Powell and Mrs. Henry Odum were appointed to inspect and have the place made sanitary. On motion, it was decided to open a woman's exchange in the library immediately after the bazar. E. E. Callaway offered a large wagon load of dogwood trees, which was accepted with thanks.

Rufus Franklin presented to the club an Erla radio, 5-tube, navy circuit, value $135, to be sold at the bazar, which was accepted with enthusiasm and a rising vote of thanks. It was turned over to committee on ways and means to decide how it should be sold.

Mrs. W. W. Ammons, Mrs. Jim Cook, Miss Florence Bower, Mrs. J. C. Hunt and Mrs. Lester Webb were elected to membership with us. Vote taken as to time of meeting and the majority showed 3:30 o'clock as the hour for the three winter months.

The subject of the afternoon being "Public Welfare," Mrs. W. C. Clark told of the welfare work of Georgia, which was much enjoyed.

Miss Martha Shaw and Jack Neal rendered a beautiful musical program, after which delicious refreshments were served by the following committee in charge: Mrs. F. M. Jackson, chairman; Mrs. J. N. Leonard, Mrs. C. I. Cash, Mrs. E. H. Mobley and Mrs. Lillian Stephenson Weaver.

Girls! Try This

Gleamy, Thick, Wavy Hair in a Moment

Here is the easy, inexpensive way to keep your hair stylishly correct, youthful and simply beautiful. When combing and dressing your hair, just moisten your hair brush with a little "Danderine" and brush it through your hair. The effect is startling! Your hair will appear twice as thick and heavy—sparkling with life and possessing that incomparable softness, freshness and luxuriance, and just delicately perfumed.

While beautifying the hair "Danderine" is also toning and stimulating each single hair to grow thick, heavy and strong. Hair stops falling out and dandruff disappears. Get a 35-cent bottle of "Danderine" at any drug or toilet counter and just see how healthy and youthful your hair appears after this delightful, refreshing dressing.

A Sure Way To End Dandruff

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better. —(adv)

Beautitudes of Conservation Division.

1. Blessed are they who plant the long-lived tree and shrub, for generations shall rise up and call them blessed.
2. Blessed are they who are owners of flower gardens, for in the heart of a flower may be seen its Creator.
3. Blessed are they who appreciate nature's gifts, for they shall be known as lovers of beauty.
4. Blessed are they who clear up the highways, byways and home grounds, for cleanliness is next to godliness.
5. Blessed are they who brighten and freshen their buildings and fences with paint, for improvement and the praise of many people shall be their reward.
6. Blessed are they who war on signs and banish the billboards along the rural highways, for they shall be called protectors of roadside beauty and landscape scenery.
7. Blessed are they who stand against friend and relative in the protection of nature's gifts to our nation, for they shall be recognized as true patriots of America.
8. Blessed are the towns with planning boards, for great beauty, prosperity and peace shall descend upon them.
9. Great shall be the reward of those who protect our forests from fire, for the bird shall continue to serve him and the fish and wild animal to furnish him food.
10. Whosoever conserveth our national resources serveth himself and the generations following.

Carlton Woman's Club Plans Kitchen Shower.

The Carlton Woman's club met at the home of Mrs. R. M. Rowe with Mrs. A. H. Eberhardt and Mrs. Rowe as joint hostesses for the afternoon. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. M. L. Fisher. Mrs. Bradford gave a report on plans for a kitchen shower to be given for the school's domestic science department, which the club is sponsoring.

Mrs. T. J. Stevens asked that everyone prepare a box of candy or give cigarettes to be sent to the wounded soldiers in Augusta as a Christmas gift from the club.

Mrs. P. R. Bradford was in charge of the program.

An Armistice day program was given with a sprinkling of Thanksgiving poems. After the program a delightful social hour was spent. Mrs. Rowe's spacious living and dining rooms were beautifully decorated with mammoth white chrysanthemums in baskets.

The hostesses for next month will be Mrs. C. C. Mathews, Mrs. Edward Stevens and Miss Annie Mae McConnell.

Augusta Woman's Club To Give Banquet Dec. 8.

The Augusta Woman's club will give their annual banquet on the evening of December 8, and from all indications will repeat their success of last season. Mrs. A. P. Brantley state president from Atlanta, and Mrs. Sanford, of Athens, second vice president and chairman of state program committee are coming for the banquet and will be the guests of honor of the occasion. The husbands of the clubwomen and a number of distinguished men guests will be present.

The regular monthly meeting of the Augusta Woman's club was held Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the clubhouse. Sibert Jones, chairman of Tallulah Falls department, spoke on Tallulah Falls and Mrs. Guy Bowen on Arbor day.

Alma Woman's Club Organized Last Week

Alma, Ga., December 5.—Mrs. A. P. Brantley, president of the Georgia Federation of Woman's Clubs, met with the ladies of Alma Tuesday afternoon, December 1, and assisted them in organizing a woman's club for this city.

Mrs. Brantley, in her splendid and interesting manner, told of the wonderful work the woman's clubs of Georgia were doing along various lines. Especially did she stress the work being done by the Tallulah Falls school. Her talk so enthused and inspired her hearers that they not only felt proud to be Georgians, but proud to be clubwomen of Georgia.

A piano solo by Miss Frankie Brown and a vocal duet by Misses Meade and Drake were enjoyable features of the occasion.

Mrs. J. T. Brantley, of Blackshear, president of the woman's club of that city, another guest of the club, told of the work her club was doing, and gave many helpful suggestions.

The following officers were elected: Mrs. J. M. Johnson, president; Mrs. H. E. Armstrong, vice president; Mrs. L. H. Jenkins, secretary; Mrs. C. A. Williams, treasurer; Mrs. A. A. Haggard, parliamentary chairman.

At the conclusion of the business meeting, luncheon was served at the Alma tea room by the Civic club.

Nadfrat Woman's Club Holds Unusual Position in State Work

Among the clubs of the Georgia federation, the Nadfrat Woman's club of Atlanta holds a distinct and unique position in that it is the first and only organization of deaf women in America to become affiliated with a state federation of women's clubs. A photograph of the organization appears in today's picture gravure section of The Constitution.

The club was organized in 1920 to promote the civic, cultural and religious advancement of the deaf of Atlanta and vicinity and to create a broader understanding between the hearing and those less fortunate.

The name "Nadfrat" is a derivation from the two largest deaf organizations in the world: N. A. D. (National Association of the Deaf) and the "Frats" (National Fraternal Society of the Deaf), an insurance company owned and managed exclusively by and for the deaf.

The work of the club is primarily of a limited nature, but much interest has always been shown in the work of the federation, especially the Tallulah Falls school, and contributions made to its maintenance. The women sponsor monthly social get-togethers disseminate educational literature of a progressive nature and encourage and foster a national spirit of cooperation in all movements for the welfare of the deaf everywhere.

The club recently launched a nation-wide campaign for funds with which to erect a small clubhouse which is to serve as a community center for the deaf all over the state.

At a recent meeting of the fifth district clubs, held at College Park, the president, Mrs. W. W. McLean, was asked to give a Scriptural reading in signs, which proved very interesting to those present.

More and more the Nadfrat club is beginning to enter into the real activities of the federation, thereby creating a spirit of understanding that is sure to prove of mutual benefit.

The present officers of the club are Mrs. W. W. McLean, president; Miss Margaret Magill, vice president; Mrs. C. L. Jackson, secretary and chairman advisory board; Mrs. J. G. Bishop, treasurer, and Mrs. Hewitt Morgan, assistant treasurer.

Mrs. McElroy Issues Message To Presidents and Chairmen

Mrs. J. E. McElroy, state chairman of jails for the Georgia federation, has issued the following message to the district presidents, the chairmen of jail improvement in each district.

Her message is as follows:

"Just a message of encouragement to the district presidents and the jail improvements chairmen. Jail conditions in Georgia, generally speaking, are improving in a number of ways. At the meeting of the 1924 American Prison association, Georgia was mentioned along with New York, Massachusetts and Pennsylvania as showing the greatest jail improvement in our country. It is very gratifying for every clubwoman and Georgian to know that in this humanitarian work Georgia has had notable attention elsewhere. The states of Missouri and Illinois are paying Georgia the compliment of following Georgia's lead in attempting to take stock of their crime problems. Canada is also asking our advice on our jail regulations. While we are feeling so very proud of ourselves in this advancement, we must pay tribute to others also. Hugh Fuller, of the state public welfare department, has assisted me and my co-laborers, in-season and out of season, and his encouraging cooperation is most gratefully acknowledged. Georgia's work along these lines, coming from the general federation is fine. All these things are distinct steps in the right direction, but our county jails are far from being what they should be. Our jails are a part of our community life just as our courthouse and the court itself is a part of our community life, and that crime is interlocked with the jail cannot be considered by itself alone, but reflects by its condition the progressiveness of that particular community. In my jail visiting the sheriff remarked that "after a visit from persons interested in jail improvement the prisoners observed better sanitary rules than before for several days." In the coming near yuletide I am asking each jail chairman to carry a day of brightness to those detained in our county jails. Try to obtain clean beds, clean, wholesome food and clean cells. They have a right to expect that in addition to warmth and ventilation."

Dallas Woman's Club Holds November Meeting

The auditorium of the Paulding county courthouse was crowded when the annual Armistice day program was given in Dallas on Wednesday evening, November 11, this being one of the customary activities of the Dallas Woman's Club.

The principal feature of the program was the splendid address given by Hon. Deane Owens, of Rome. Mr. Owens is a brilliant lawyer and gifted speaker and his address was a treat to the large audience that heard him.

Mrs. C. B. McGarity, president of the woman's club, presided over the meeting, which was opened with assembly singing of "America the Beautiful," followed with prayer by Rev. O. J. Withrow. Special music by a chorus of voices, arranged by Mrs. M. B. Sell and Mrs. W. F. Tribble and assembly singing of patriotic songs made up the program. A committee of girls from the junior division presented poppies to each one as he entered, these having been made by the junior club.

Junior Club.

The junior club of Dallas Woman's club held its November meeting in the Woman's club house on Tuesday, November 10.

Mrs. W. C. Sams, chairman of the junior division, had arranged an interesting program in the reading of "In Flanders Fields" by Colonel John McRae and "We Shall Keep the Faith" by Miss Moina Michael, with an account of the writing of each of these poems.

The time was then given over to the making of poppies, which were presented at the Armistice day exercises held later.

This division of junior work was organized about a year ago with a membership of 58.

Tree-Planting Program.

Conservation, with Mrs. W. F. Byrd, chairman of this department of the Dallas Woman's club, made up a very interesting program at November meeting. A very comprehensive paper on "Why We Should Plant More Trees" was written and read by Mrs. Byrd. "Plant a Tree" was read by Mrs. Ralph Butler and "The Heart of a Tree" was read by Mrs. Eugene Bullock. "The Soldiers' Chorus" was rendered by a chorus from the club.

During the business session, preceding the program, Mrs. C. B. McGarity, presiding, the club set December 2 as the date of the public tree planting program, at which time the Woman's club will plant on the town square four trees, one in compliment to the local Kiwanis club, one for the local chamber of commerce, one for Mayor H. Y. Holland, who has recently completed the installation of the town's waterworks system and of paving the principal streets, and the fourth to W. J. Baker, county ordinary for many years and a citizen who has done a great deal toward beautifying courthouse and club room grounds.

The club voted to urge the observance of Arbor day in every school of the county and a committee was named to meet with the mayor and council at its next meeting to decide upon a definite program of planting in the streets of the town to be extended later to the principal highways of the county. To encourage the observance of Education week the club members visited the public school in a body on conservation day. Mrs. Eugene Bullock and Mrs. Wheeler Bulloch were hostesses in the social part of the program.

Brunswick Club Holds Meeting On Educational Matters

The Brunswick Woman's club program of last week was in the hands of the educational, music and social departments. Miss Minnie Bower is chairman of the music department, and was ably assisted by Mrs. J. B. Wright. Mrs. C. B. Gowen is the head of the educational department, and Mrs. A. A. Shimer of the social committee.

The subject of the musical program was "Music of the American Indian." A realistic Indian scene met the eye of the members on entering the hall, an improvised wigwam being fashioned from Indian blankets, showing a bright fire aglow just inside with Indian rugs on the floor.

Those taking part on the program were appropriately costumed in Indian dress, with bright, beaded headbands, planned and executed by Miss Bower and Mrs. Wright.

Mrs. George H. Cook read a fine paper on "Descriptive Indian Music," which told of the war, folk and love music of the more than 53 American tribes. She stated that the only instruments of the Indians were the drums, tom toms and flute, this latter being a highly prized piece, used mostly in playing the love songs of the Indians. Mrs. Cook read many interesting incidents relating to the music of our American Indians, which was most appreciated.

Musical Program.

Mrs. C. D. Terrell gave two solo numbers, "Pale Moon," by Frederic Logan, and "Indian Love Call" from Rose Marie, sympathetically accompanied by Mrs. H. L. Akridge.

A duet, "The Sun Worshipers," a Zuni Indian melody, was sung by Miss Bower and Mrs. Frank Baylis, accompanied by Miss Alfred Wood, Jr.

Mrs. Bertha A. Stevenson gave the only instrumental numbers, her selections being McDowell's "Indian Lodge," and "Land of the Sky Blue Water," by Cadman. Two vocal solos, "The Weaver" and "At Sundown," from the Red Willow Pueblos, by Lieurance, were delightfully rendered by Mrs. D. M. Bussey, who was accompanied by Miss Bower. A quartet was composed of Mrs. Frank Baylis, Miss Bower, Mrs. ... H. Parker and Mrs. Clifford Akin, accompanied by Mrs. Alfred Wood, Jr. The song chosen was "Love Song," also from the Red Willow Pueblos, and by Thurlow Lieurance.

The program was turned over to Mrs. Gowen, who announced that the educational department of the club had planned their year's programs to correlate with the work of the civic department and that her subject for the afternoon was "The Town More Beautiful." This was one of a series of illustrated lectures by the noted expert, Henry Turner Bailey, who is also a pioneer in the work of placing art in the public schools. It so happens that Mrs. G. V. Cate, president of the club, was at one time a pupil of Mr. Bailey, in art appreciation, as related to public school work, and she gave an interesting sketch of the great lecturer.

Beautifying Town.

Mrs. Frank L. Stacy read the lecture, "The Town More Beautiful," which told of the right and wrong ways of planting back yard gardens, erecting of public buildings, such as city halls, churches, railroad stations, the kind of trees to preserve along city streets, etc. Every suggestion was accompanied by lantern slides, illustrating the subject matter contained in the lecture, all of which was most helpful, in view of the fact of the "city beautification" plans now being worked out by the Brunswick Woman's club. One statement which particularly caught enthusiasm and applause of the audience, was the injunction not to cut down and destroy the beautiful trees along the side of established, or newly-constructed highways, but to fight for a certain width on both sides, to be left as nature intended it to be. The lecture, with accompanying pictures, was most interesting, and no doubt much good will come from the helpful ideas suggested.

Beatitudes of the Conservation Dept.

BY MRS JACK H. PRYOR.

1. Blessed are they who plant the long-lived tree and shrub, for generations shall rise up and call them blessed.
2. Blessed are they who are owners of flower gardens, for in the heart of a flower may be seen its Creator.
3. Blessed are they who appreciate nature's gifts, for they shall be known as lovers of beauty.
4. Blessed are they who clean up the highways, byways and home grounds, for cleanliness is next to godliness.
5. Blessed are they who brighten and freshen their buildings and fences with paint, for improvement and the praise of many people shall be their rewards.
6. Blessed are they who war on signs and banish the billboards along the rural highways, for they shall be called protectors or roadside beauty and landscape scenery.
7. Blessed are they who stand against friend and relative in the protection of nature's gifts to our nation, for they shall be recognized as true patriots of America.
8. Blessed are towns with planning boards, for great beauty, prosperity and peace shall descend upon them.
9. Great shall be the reward of those who protect our forests from fire, for the bird shall continue to serve him and the fish and wild animal to furnish him food.
10. Whosoever conserveth our national resources serveth himself and the generationse following.

O. E. S. Chapter To Hold Supper.

Georgia chapter, No. 127, Order of the Eeastern Star, will have a "chicken supper" Tuesday evening, December 8, at 8 o'clock, in the banquet hall of Oglethorpe, Masonic Temple, 418 East Georgia avenue, corner of South Pryor street.

Mrs. Supplee Gives Suggestions To Eighth District Chairmen

Mrs. A. L. Supplee, of Covington, chairman of waterways and national resources for the eighth district G. F. W. C., addresses the following article to the chairmen of this department under her supervision in the eighth district in which she says:

"I wish to express my sincere appreciation of the prompt response of several clubs with the names of their chairmen of W. and N. R.; hope the others who have not will fall in line; cooperation is necessary to the success of any undertaking. Any departments vital to the welfare of the country should merit 100 per cent cooperation. Our waters, soils, forests, animals and flowers are gifts from God, but will not last forever, hence proper care and conservative use is essential to perpetuate these inestimable blessings, everything we have comes directly or indirectly from what we call natural resources.

Gives Suggestions.

"Requests have come with the request, 'Give me some information or assistance along the line of this department.' I take this method of giving some suggestions for efficient service: First of all, send to the state geologist and he will send you a book with all information concerning Georgia's wealth of natural resources; to Mr. Twitty for the bulletin, 'Birds Useful to Farmers;' get bulletins from the department of agriculture, Washington, D. C. The resoureeful chairman will find multiplied opportunities to render a patriotic service to her community and state.

Just think! Only one-twentieth of Georgia's original timber area remains. Some duties to render efficient service are to cooperate with the state forester, the schools in the observance of Arbor day, with teachers in the organization of 'bird clubs;' give talks upon the value of conservation of bird life commercially and aesthetically. Bird houses keep the birds with us that otherwise would migrate. I know this from experience. Try it and note the results.

"Where you see nests of caterpillars upon trees, a brigade of boys can be easily mustered together and burn them. These are a few of the sources of materials and methods of work.

Federal Aid.

"We have federal aid for our forests. When you minister in any way to our forests you are conserving and protecting another equally valuable resource, our water supply. Boost and give publicity to your department.

To the clubs that have not responded with the name of chairman of W. and N. R., I am expressing in anticipation of an early reply. Thanks."

Arlington Woman's Club Plans To Help Build Driveway

The Arlington Woman's club held its November meeting at the home of the president, Mrs. W. E. Bostwick.

The entire citizenship was asked to observe the 23rd, 24th and 25th of November as Clean-up Days, requesting the members to place refuse from premises at as convenient a place possible for the trash cart to cart away. Extra carts were put on so there will be no delay in moving the unsightly heaps from the streets.

A bazaar was planned to be held at some point in the down town district, to be announced later by committee—Mesdames C. K. Sharp and D. J. Salter. Every member is expected to contribute something to this bazaar, and all who are in sympathy with the progressive interests of our town are asked to contribute something. As it will be of a miscellaneous nature, individuals who would like to sell articles through the bazaar may do so by allowing the club 15 per cent of the sales. Any information in regard to place and arrangement may be had through committee.

At a previous meeting, Mrs. M. L. Askew proposed that the club secure the cooperation of Calhoun and Early counties and build a driveway around the city of Arlington, same to be planted in crepe myrtles and other flowering shrubs and when completed to be dedicated to the world war veterans of Calhoun county. President reported that the club had been assured of the cooperation of road commissioners from both counties, and that work will begin on driveway at an early date. All who have flowering shrubs to contribute to this worthy cause are asked to collect them and notify Mrs. W. E. Bostwick or Mrs. M. L. Askew.

The club voted to offer a prize for excellency in some study in the local school.

Tenth District Music Chairman Writes Clubwomen

As newly appointed chairman of music in the Tenth District Federation of the Woman's Clubs, I am using the club's pags as a means of getting in touch with every club in the district.

I will be glad to hear from any club when it needs assistance and will help in making out programs and getting up papers on various phases of the subject.

As chairman of American Music I am esecially interested in this phase, and think it should be stressed in the Woman's Club Federation as well as in the Music Federation.

Let each club chairman of music encourage the organization of choirs, choral lubs, glee lubs; have several musical numbers on each club program, such as community singing. Christmas carols, Thanksgiving and patriotic songs, etc. Put on high-class operattas, and light operas, and do anything to make your town and community appreciate the better class of music, in preference to the present-day jazz.

Write to your chairman whenever you need her assistance, and let us do something in the Tenth district to make each of us love good music more. Very sincerely yous,

MRS. ROY SMITH,
10th Dist. Chm. of Music.

"American Art" Is Taylorville Club Subject.

The Feltonian Woman's club had for their subject Friday afternoon "American Art." The leading talks given were on "American Painters," "American Sculptors and Their Works," "Art in the Home and School," and "American Pottery."

At this meeting the club was presented with a book for a birthday present by the Seventh District Federation of Woman's clubs. Mrs. Ray Rhodes and Mrs. A. R. Davis were hostesses.

Chapter Notes

The float of the Robert E. Lee chapter, U. D. C., Douglas, Ga., seen in the parade celebrating Armistice day was very unique in that it was truly historical in every way.

The float was very large and beautifully decorated in red, white and blue, in the center of which was a well with an old oaken bucket. In front was a chair made in 1863 on which sat our beloved veteran, Mr. George Powers, Company A, 2nd Florida Volunteers. This venerable soldier held high in air the flag of his valiant army. Just back of Mr. Powers' chair stood a lady dressed in a real costume of 1862. In the rear of the float was a small spinning wheel—150 years old, beside which a beautiful woman sat dressed in a dress of the sixties on a split-bottom sewing chair made in 1864. Opposite her sat a lovely young girl carding cotton. The Camp Spivey banner presented in 1906 hanging on one side near the well made the float picturesque indeed.

On this float were also three home woven spreads of which the yarn and cotton were twisted on the spinning wheel shown. The present owner is the fourth generation of owners. Two war-time shawls and capes worn in the sixties were also shown.

This, a true Confederate float, was one of the most artistic in the parade and with such evidence of patriotism and pride as this float manifested Douglas will surely be, as her slogan indicates, the "Pride of the Wiregrass."

DOUGLAS.

The Robert E. Lee chapter of Douglas, Ga., held its regular meeting Thursday, November 26, at 3:30 o'clock at the chapter house. Mrs. Turner Brewer, chairman, presided. After business matters were disposed of a lovely "Pilgrim" program was carried out under the leadership of Mrs. L. C. Alderman. These little pilgrims were dressed in costumes of pre-revolutionary days. Miss Margaret Frier sang a favorite of the sixties. After the program a delightful half-hour was spent during which time delicious sandwiches and tea were served by Miss Mildred Woodward and Miss Margaret Frier. Mrs. Deen and Mrs. Caldwell were hostesses.

THOMASTON.

Last week at the Lee auditorium the Daughters of the Confederacy of Thomaston gave a splendid entertainment, "Flapper Grandmother." The play was given by local talent under the management of Miss Ruby Mae Cooper, accompanied by Miss Effie McDaniel.

The auditorium was crowded and the U. D. C. chapter took in around $200.

MONTEZUMA.

At the annual meeting of the Phil Cook chapter, U. D. C. of Montezuma, Ga., Friday afternoon the following officers were elected for the coming year: Mrs. W. H. McKenzie, president; first vice president, Mrs. W. R. McElmurray; second vice president, Mrs. E. H. Anderson; third vice president, Mrs. Alice Hill; treasurer, Mrs. D. W. Easterlin; recording secretary, Mrs. J. W. Solomon; corresponding secretary, Mrs. G. M. Chastain; registrar, Mrs. A. P. Lewis; historian, Mrs. Fred Smith; reporter, Mrs. Sam Guerry.

CEDARTOWN.

The Cedartown chapter of U. D. C. are taking steps to pay off their subscription to the Stone Mountain Memorial. A bazar will be held this week, and other activities are planned with a view to meeting the obligation as promptly as possible.

Mr. and Mrs. Beam Entertain Informally.

Mr. and Mrs. Jerome C. Beam entertained at an informal luncheon last Wednesday, the guests including a small group of friends, upon the palatial dining car of the Southern railway, which was sidetracked on a spur near the Terminal station. It was quite an unusual occasion, and one of the most delightful affairs given during the past week.

Washington Seminary News of Interest.

A very delightful Kipling program was enjoyed by the student body on Friday morning during the chapel hour.

Virginia Risk read "When Earth's Last Picture Is Painted," Edna Rufty gave "If," and Helen Jackson, "The Post That Fitted."

An interesting and enjoyable number was the singing of "On the Road to Mandalay," by Juliana Brooks, Frances Morris, Mary Preacher, Elsie Bennett and Rosa Lee Upchurch, the accompaniment by the Mandolin club.

The senior class will hold a bazar on Friday, December 11, at the Georgian Terrace. The funds will go towards getting out "Facts and Fancies," the school annual.

The Dramatic club will present three short plays on Saturday evening, December 12, in the school auditorium. One is being anticipated with especial interest, as Marian Vaughn arranged the dramatic presentation from a short story.

The last work about the Thanksgiving offering to the Needle Work guild is most gratifying. There were 296 garments and $45 in money given to the organization.

New Fifth District Chairman

Mrs. James R. Little, prominent clubwoman, who has recently been appointed fine arts chairman in the fifth district by the president, Mrs. H. G. Hastings. Mrs. Little has accomplished outstanding results in this particular line of club work.

Kirkwood Civic League Reports Many Interesting Activities

Kirkwood Civic league met Tuesday afternoon with 45 members present. Mrs. Wilcox reported one new member. Mrs. Hess announced that steps had been taken to abate the smoke nuisance reported at last meeting. Mrs. L. J. Cassels, forestry chairman, being absent, Miss Nellie Emery gave her report as follows: 150 plants and several hedges had been planted; Arbor day will be observed in a joint program with the Kirkwood Parent-Teacher association.

The welfare committee reported two Thanksgiving baskets sent to needy families. A letter was read from the head of a school giving a good report of the young girl the league is looking after. A small donation was added to the fund of the proposed club house. The American home department being a new division of club work, and Kirkwood Civic league among the first to appoint a head for this department, Miss Nellie Emery, efficient chairman, explained that the American homes department must not be confused with the better homes department, outlining the difference between the two departments. Mrs. A. I. Branham, American citizenship chairman, gave a good report, announcing the following sums raised through the Civic league, $13.00 for the Red Cross, $25.00 for forget-me-not day, $18.00 for poppy day.

An appeal to vote for the raise of salaries of the firemen was brought to the league by Mr. Strickland. Mrs. Hunnicut, legislation chairman, reminded the league again, to pay poll tax before December 19.

Mrs. T. M. Smith's resignation as first vice president was accepted with regret. Mrs. Joseph Smith was appointed as Mrs. Smith's successor, Mrs. R. C. Wharton filling the vacancy made by the removal of Mrs. Joseph Smith as second vice president.

The outstanding feature of the afternoon was the address of Miss Rosa Woodberry, who spoke on the importance of parliamentary laws. Bernard Owens contributed a piano solo. Mrs. Hess presented the league with a banner, with the words "Kirkwood Civic League" on it. Mrs. Joseph Smith announced the club's official stationery was ready.

The next meeting will be held January 4.

Mrs. Boyd Presented In Benefit Reading.

Mrs. Emma Garret Boyd presented a most artistic benefit reading, "The New World" by J. M. Barrie, for the Atlanta Kindergarten Alumnae club at the Ansley hotel, Friday. A gifted reader with her fine perfection of character portrayal delighted a large and appreciative audience with the usual mastery of her inimitably charms. She was assisted by Miss Ruth Allen an advanced pupil of Mrs. Mary Griffith Dobbs of the Griffith School of Music in a group of three harp solos, most exquisitely rendered. Two lovely dancers, Miss Evelyn Floyd and Miss Robert Harbour of the Potter-Spiker school of dancing, interpreted their art with entrancing grace and charm.

The ways and means chairmah, Mrs. E. H. Simmons, and her able committee are to be congratulated on the splendid achievement of their untiring efforts. The club gratefully acknowledges the beautiful and loyal assistance of their artist friends and all who contributed to the success of this lovely entertainment.

Bolton Camp Fire Girls Give Play.

The Camp Fire girls of Bolton put on the play "Topsy Turvy" at the Bolton Masonic temple on November 27 at 8 o'clock.

The setting was in an old southern home, a darky having one of the leading roles. The leading man's part was played by Margaret Rogers, with Topsy Turvy played by Theresa Hamby.

The supporting cast consisted of Mrs. Clarendon, Topsy Turvy's mother, played by Catherine Chambers; Miss Spriggs, Topsy's governess, played by Frances York; Frank Golden, cousin of Topsy, played by Virginia Donehoo; May Golden, Frank's sister, Jeffie York; Deacon Jones, friend of the family, Marguerite McKenzie; Ned, the family servant, Dorothy Rogers.

The Log Cabin orchestra, led by Miss Willie Mae Carmichael, furnished music between acts. Superintendent Wells made an impressive talk on "The Benefit of Camp Fi to Our Girls."

Pied Piper Shoes Are Wonderful For Children.

BYCK BROS. COMPANY at 27 Whitehall Street can solve your problem for the children, as they are showing the newest styles in Pied Piper shoes, the most wonderful shoes for children ever made, and they take especial care in fitting boys and girls of all ages—they know when to leave space for growth—and when to fit snugly.

The Pied Piper shoes are built on nature-shape and form-foot lasts and orthopedic surgeons everywhere approve of and recommend them. These shoes are made to stand hard wear, and the children can kick things, climb fences, walls and trees, play ball and scuff through sand and gravel or trudge through the rain to school. Nothing seems to hurt them, for these shoes wear unusually well, are strong and very pliable, so that the growing feet can be comfortable and develop naturally.

Go to Byck's and have each of your children fitted with Pied Piper shoes. The prices are most reasonable and there are scores of styles to choose from—for parties, dress, school and play—and they will be as delighted with them as you are.

All Rogers' Self-Rising Flour Bears a Blue Shield.

IN THE cooking school held all last week at Taft Hall, sponsored by The Constitution, affiliated with the Soft Wheat Millers' Association, the housewives of Atlanta had an opportunity to learn a number of new dishes—and how to improve many old ones. They were also shown all the latest methods of table-setting and dining-room service and enjoyed many interesting talks on menus and their relative food values.

Miss See Rice, who conducted the cooking school so efficiently, assisted by Miss Gladys Kimbrough, thoroughly demonstrated the purity, the economy, the healthfulness and uniformity of self-rising flour in the preparation of the menus prepared by them. No particular brand of flour was exploited, but self-rising flour was used exclusively during the session each day. We were told that "to obtain always uniform results in our baking to use self-rising flour, as there are fewer failures when doing so." Such, in other words, are some of the comments made by these experienced experts in the culinary arts. They taught how many ways self-rising flour could be used; how many ways to utilize it, and how many different delectable dishes it would make.

The great chain of Rogers Stores are as usual offering the best of whatever product the housewife has need of in her housekeeping and has for her choice in flour the high quality brands, "White Lily," "Number 37," "Sure-Nuff," each of which bears the blue shield, a symbol of purity and uniformity. The blue-shield on these sacks—the reputation behind it—mean everything. They're your identification of quality inside, for back of the label stands a far-reaching, responsible organization, milling flour from the finest wheat-growing sections of the country—and all those other quality essentials that alone guarantee uniform goodness. When you buy any one of the three brands of self-rising at Rogers' you can be assured of satisfaction in advance and of its unusual quality. It is this fine flour that gives that creamy color—that appetizing deliciousness—that tender firmness to your loaf bread, biscuits, muffins, waffles, pancakes and to the many kinds of both loaf and layer cakes.

For genuine enjoyment as well as nourishment and health-giving qualities, ask for either of these brands, "White Lily," "Number 37" or "Sure-Nuff," when you are marketing at Rogers' and are in need of flour in your pantry. It is light and feathery and makes the best things to eat that you can possibly imagine. It is convenient, time-saving and economical.

Here is a recipe for a wonderful cake: 3-4 cup of boiling water, 2 cups of puffed Sun-Maid raisins, 1-2 cup of Spredit, 1 1-4 cups of sugar, 3 eggs, 2 cups sifted White Lily Flour, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1-2 teaspoon nutmeg, 3-4 teaspoon cinnamon, 1-4 teaspoon cloves, 1 teaspoon cocoa. Pour boiling water over raisins and set aside to cool; drain, saving water. Cream Spredit and gradually add sugar until thoroughly creamed. Add eggs well beaten. Sift flour with salt and spices. Dredge raisins with a portion of flour. Add rest of flour and raisin water alternately to mixture, beating well each addition. Fold in floured raisins and pour into paper-lined pan and bake in moderate oven. When cool cover with your favorite icing. Try this cake, it is so good and easy to make, a failure is impossible if you use self-rising flour, and any one of the brands handled by Rogers will make the best cake you ever baked.

Coursey's a Store of Christmas Cheer.

THE Christmas season buying brings not alone its pleasures, but its perplexities as well, for one wonders where to find this or that gift that will be most appropriate for those intended.

Coursey Drug Company at 1178 Peachtree Street has a most complete assortment of holiday goods of all kinds that will assist you in the problem of selection as gifts, and the fact that you can park in front of the store permits you to do your shopping in a more leisurely and comfortable way. It adds greatly to the joy of giving, too.

Imported perfumes are there in abundance for "Her," smartly and attractively boxed in charming gift packages, as are also toilet goods and accessories of every description, stationery, artistic art goods, candies, etc.

Coursey's have gifts for "Him" of every variety—cigars, cigarettes, fountain pens, pipes, humidors, ash-trays, gold Gillette razors, etc. The selection should be tres facile.

Hearts of toys—piled up ready for the children! Fascinating toys waiting to be stowed away in the back of Santa's sleigh. Coursey has gifts that are sure to please you; your shopping will be a pleasure.

Give "Her" a Gift of Jewelry.

A BEAUTIFUL Christmas gift—jewelry—a gift that will bring joy and happiness—that is the ideal gift.

Maier & Berkele, Inc., 31 Whitehall Street, have an unsurpassed collection of exquisite diamond and platinum jewelry that would delight the heart of "Her," whether your gift is a necklace, bracelet, bar-pin, rings, wrist-watch or any one of the lovely things that they have for you to choose from. They are charming and individual. Never before have there been more alluring designs or more wonderful workmanship in creating "Jewels Beautiful" for Madame and Mademoiselle than this season.

Jewelry is such an appropriate gift—personal and intimate—and there is fine sentiment conveyed in its choice selection. A gift of any of these artistic diamond and platinum pieces, real gems they are, from Maier & Berkele is sure to bring light to her eyes, smiles to her lips, and appreciation from her heart.

The smartest fabrics for evening wear are Velvets, Chiffons and Georgettes in all the lightest pastel shades, and very often they are touched with Bulgarian embroidery which makes them unusually charming.

Four Months Student Makes Good.

A PROMINENT merchant writes as follows about a student of Crichton's Business College: "Recently we were in need of a stenographer. Before employing one we tested thirty applicants.

"It is a pleasure to report that one of your pupils, who states that she attended your college for a period of four months, took the dictation and transcribed it so efficiently that we immediately employed her. Will state that some of the applicants had had from two to five years' experience in stenography but their work was not as good as that of your pupil.

Delicious Cakes at Hart Tea and Cake Shop.

THE very next time you are entertaining guests or are celebrating an anniversary of some occasion, order your cake from Hart Tea & Cake Shop at 859 Peachtree Street. They are delicious and fairly melt in your mouth.

They bake bread every day, many varieties of cakes, both large and small, and will make to your order any kind you desire, including fruit cake. They make a specialty of wedding, anniversary and party cakes, decorating them in exquisite designs. They are beautiful.

Hart serves lovely home-cooked meals, and the tea room is most attractive. There you will see lots of folks you know. They serve both lunch and dinner on Sunday as well as during the week. Try it next time you dine out. Everything is awfully good, well prepared and daintily served.

Give a Revigator For Christmas.

THE other day I was in the offices of the Radium Ore Revigator Company at 60 North Forsyth street, and while there, a young man came in and purchased a Revigator as a Christmas gift for his mother and asked to have it sent to her at her home in Connecticut.

Such a sweet sentiment, one could not help but be touched by the display of tenderness and thought that he showed for the mother so far away. He was thinking of her and wishing her a Christmas of happiness and healthfulness and all the future Christmasses of her life to come and he knew that giving her a Revigator would make her well and keep her well.

The Revigator is a "perpetual health spring in the home" and what a splendid gift it makes, nothing would be more appreciated by your mother, father or any member of the family. After drinking radioactive water from the Revigator they will experience amazing health results and enjoy the same benefits that would be derived from visiting any one of the famous health spring resorts of the world.

Get a Revigator for your loved ones, show them how much you are interested in their welfare and happiness. You will not only be wishing them well but in reality keep them well. There are Revigators in convenient size for the traveling bag as well as the original size for the home. Either of these would be a much appreciated

What's New For Winter!

Every smart coat this season will be fur-trimmed. The lavish and intricate, or simple and sparing use of fur is the means of classifying it. After all, it is not the quantity of luxurious material used, nor the opulence of fur that decides the measure of smartness, but the cut and the application.

Woodrow Wilson Day

December is the natal month of Woodrow Wilson and Mrs. H. Fay Gaffney, state chairman, urges each chapter to commemorate fittingly the birthday of this peerless statesman.

Particular attention centers on the proposed college to be erected in Valdosta as a memorial to the late president.

At the state executive board meeting held in Athens, the board most heartily indorsed the erection of the Woodrow Wilson college at Valdosta

Fort Early Chapter.

The November meeting of the Fort Early chapter, D. A. R., was of especial interest being in commemoration of Armistice day.

The meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Carl Williams on Fourteenth avenue with Mesdames Williams, E. F. Strozier and Butler Ray as hostesses.

The newly-elected regent, Mrs. J. M. Diffee presided and an interesting business meeting was held before the program for the afternoon was given. The chairman of the board of management was glad to report that Mrs. Diffee had consented to accept the regency made vacant by the resignation of Mrs. Price Heard, who had served faithfully and efficiently as regent, but who on account of continued illness in her family sent in her resignation. Mrs. Diffee has served Fort Early chapter before for two consecutive terms as regent.

At this meeting it was the pleasure of the Fort Early chapter to indorse Mrs. Julius Talmadge for vice president general upon a motion made by Mrs. Max E. Land, who was former state regent.

Very gratifying reports were made by the various committees. The medals and prizes committee presented a recommendation that the chapter give a medal in the schools for the best essay on citizenship as well as the regular D. A. R. medal for the highest average made in American history. Mrs. E. L. Kiker, chairman of the flag committee, told of plans to erect a flag on the local school grounds.

Sunbury Chapter, Winder.

The November meeting of the Sunbury chapter, D. A. R., was held in the home of Mrs. George Fortson. The regent, Mrs. Pledger, used the impressive ritual service, with the singing of "America, the Beautiful," and prayer by the chaplain. Thanksgiving verses were quoted in response to roll call.

"The Mother of Thanksgiving" was given by Mrs. C. O. Maddox. Miss Harrel with her mandolin club composed of Misses Mayne, DeLaPerriere, Thompson and Barber, rendered several patriotic selections. Mrs. Roy Smith read the "President's Proclamation of 1863." The chapter gave in unison the flag salute.

The secretary presented to the board of managers the names of Miss Berta Meadow, and Mrs. Vella Mae Smith as applicants for membership.

By a unanimous vote the dues of non-resident members were increased $1.50 a year.

Mrs. Maddox, chairman of patriotic education, stated that members of the auxiliary and chapter, on Armistice day, placed poppy wreaths on the graves of Jewel Hanson, Albert Austin, Paul Stinchcomb, Woodson Wood and Fleming Thompson. The auxiliary has asked the chapter to select a speaker for the next Armistice observance. Copies of the United States constitution, Declaration of Independence, and patriotic pamphlets have been ordered for each county school. Small Georgia flags, as well as United States flags, with a history of each are being placed in many schools.

The chairman of scholarships, Mrs. C. S. Williams, reported a scholarship given one pupil in local school.

Mrs. W. H. Quarterman has two papers for the state chairman of historical and literary reciprocity, namely, "War Power Under the Constitution" and "Patriotism."

Thrift chairman, Miss Mable Jackson, is working in conjunction with the P.-T. A. in distributing banks through the school. A number of children are entering the "Thrift Poster Contest."

Much pleasure was derived in the drawing of tickets to attend the Kiwanis dinner, Mrs. Edwards and Miss Jackson being winners.

The chapter is again sponsoring the sale of tuberculosis seals and members are selling from each organization in Winder.

William Marsh Chapter, Layfatte.

Mrs. T. W. Lee entertained the William Marsh chapter, D. A. R., November 17, at her home in Chickamauga, with a lovely luncheon.

After the delicious 2 o'clock luncheon, the meeting was opened by Mrs Lee, chaplain. Business was disposed of and plans discussed for the improvement of the grounds around Gordon Hall.

After the business meeting was adjourned Mrs. I. H. Holleman took charge of the program, which celebrated Armistice day and also honored Virginia. Mrs. Holleman, in a most interesting manner, made a talk on "Virginia and How She Rates and Contributes To Our Great Union." Mrs. W. A. Enloe read a paper on "The Virginia Leaders and Heroes of the Revolution." Tom W. Lee gave reminiscences of Armistice day "over there."

Mrs. A. R. Fortune closed the program with the reading "The Wearing of the Poppy," a beautiful poem by Lucien Lamar Knight.

Sarah Dickinson Chapter, Newnan.

The regular monthly meeting of Sarah Dickinson chapter, D. A. R., Monday afternoon was at the home of Mrs. C. W. Farmer, the hostesses being Mrs. C. W. Farmer, Mrs. M. C. Farmer, Mrs. John R. Cates and Mrs. Wade Stallings. The regent, Mrs. T. J. Jones, presided.

Committees were appointed to mark the graves of the two real Daughters in Coweta county, "Dames of the Golden Spoon," who were Mrs. Mary Story, of Newnan, and Mrs. Eliza Carlton, of Senoia; also to erect a marker on the old Grayson Indian trail, on the highway between Newnan and Moreland.

Mrs. Julian Talmadge, of Athens, state regent, was unanimously indorsed for vice president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution from Georgia.

Annual Year Books.

The Matthew Talbott chapter, Monroe, has issued very attractive yearbooks, "Americans of Ideas and Ideals" is the topic of the year. It is noted the chapter has adopted the very commendable plan of reading the monthly message of our president general.

"Woman in the Making of America" is the subject for the year-book of the Hannah Clarke chapter, Quitman. The book is complete. It contains "The American Creed," biography of Hannah Clarke, for whom the chapter is named, state and chapter officers, days for observance, a page dedicated to the departed members, chapter by-laws, the national anthem, monthly programs, and list of chapter members.

Interesting Happenings at Convention

M. FRANCES MEADORS BURGHARD.

It was a dry but delectable menu that was spread before the 1,000 delegates and visitors of the 51st convention of the National Woman's Christian Temperance union, in Detroit, known as the "Speed Up" convention as it was "a superb dramatization of the word 'go'" at its get-started banquet at Statler hotel the first evening—a feast to gratify the intellect and soul as well as the appetite.

Its seriousness of purpose was seasoned with scintillating sallies of wit; its words of wisdom were garnished with choice bits of humor. Everybody drank to the health of everybody else in the sparkling spirits of good fellowship. It was a time for the renewing of youth, the release of the spirit of play, and the giving of oneself to the joy of a good old-fashioned family reunion.

On such social occasions the W. C. T. U. seems not so much an organization as a sisterhood, and "Mother National" and her vast family of daughters and granddaughters mingle informally, exchanging felicitations renewing old acquaintances and making new friends.

At each plate of the beautifully decorated tables was a miniature automobile—Cadillac, Liberty or Ford—emblem of the hostess city—Detroit. Mrs. E. L. Calkins, president of Michigan W. C. T. U., had promised that every delegate should be presented with an automobile with the assurance of "no tire or engine trouble."

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt.

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, the standard bearer for many years of the national and international Woman suffrage organizations, and now an eloquent evangel of international peace, elected to speak on neither of these themes but gave a series of experiences and observations which convinced her of the pronounced success of the prohibition law. A few of her statements are: "Every city mission on East Side (New York) has become self-supporting since prohibition came in." "The lodging houses and the Salvation Army are not now compelled to take care of half the people they used to before prohibition." She spoke of a visit to New York's worst polling places in 1914, "on every side there was drunkenness and men of low-down character—some were wrecks of humanity." Then she spoke of the looks of those polling places in the recent election, "those bleary-eyed men are gone. I don't know where, but I do know they are not there."

Mrs. Dillard's Demonstration.

The peace demonstration of the national W. C. T. U. director, Mrs. Lelia A. Dillard, of Georgia, was one of the most beautiful of the convention, and her peace report was received with great interest. The peace question is one of the most alive of the day, and Mrs. Dillard, both because of her personality and position, is one of the most popular of the directors.

At the close of her report, the Georgia delegation presented her with lovely roses, through Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, who told the members of the convention that if they knew Mrs. Dillard as Georgia does they would realize the speaker was not indulging in fulsome flattery, but spoke the simple truth when she said that Mrs. Dillard's heart was as pure, her disposition as sweet, and her life and character as beautiful as the roses.

Mrs. Dillard had a fine peace exhibit where thousands of peace literature were given away.

Incidents Concerning Georgians.

The Georgia delegation presented Mrs. Armor with an armful of beautiful chrysanthemums when she spoke on president' night, through Mrs. Dillard.

Mrs. Armor's exhibit as national director of evangelism and Sabbath observance, was photographed for the Union Signal. Mrs. Armor, Miss Gordon, honorary national president and president of the World Woman's Christian Temperance union; Mrs. Boole, the new national president, and a little Japanese lady were in the booth having a cup o' tea out of the John Wesley teapot at the time.

Walter F. Armor, husband of Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, was made a memorial member by the Georgia delegation. Both Mrs. Lelia A. Dillard, who presented the membership, and Miss Gordon, who received it, paid a tribute to his memory. He had long been a life member of the state and national W. C. T. U.

Miss Josephine Hammond, of Monroe, Georgia's state treasurer, was requisitioned by Mrs. Margaret Munns, the national treasurer, to assist with financial conferences and collections, and she served on the executive committee when the meetings conflicted with national director's duties.

Mrs. N. C. McPherson, of Atlanta, represented Georgia in the Union Signal demonstration, also on youth's night, when a magnificent program was carried out and the patriotic rolls were presented to Uncle Sam.

Mrs. Armor and Mrs. Dillard entained the Georgia party with Miss Claire Lusby, of Washington, D. C., a special friend, and the state director of peace department of Michigan, at an elegant dining at the Statler hotel.

Mrs. L. O. Taylor and Mrs. P. D. Christian, of Atlanta, with other Georgia delegates, attended the sessions of the convention, departmental conferences, banquet, demonstrations, and saw the Detroit sights and visited in Canada.

Georgia's state superintendent of prison reform, Mrs. P. B. Griffith, of Eatonton, carried off the national prize, and Georgia led in some phases of publicity work.

The next convention goes to Los Angeles, and will be held September 28 through October 3, 1926. White Ribbon specials will run the southern and the northern routes for the benefit of delegates.

Women's Pioneer Society Meeting.

The Women's Pioneer society met Wednesday afternoon with a splendid attendance. The program was opened by delightful music by Mrs. Frank Taylor and her stringed orchestra, a piano duet by Mrs. J. F. Marshall and her son, Frank, pianologues by Miss Frances Croft, and songs by Miss Ethel Jones.

Six new members were unanimously elected and will be welcomed into the society: Mrs. Elizabeth L. Van Dyke, Mrs. Bessie Walpole Otis, Mrs. Katie Silvey Speer, Mrs. Hannah Mahoney Lynch, Miss Annie Flynn and Mrs. Mattie Langston Turner.

Matrons' Class Holds Meeting.

The regular monthly business and social meeting of the matrons' class of Grant Park Methodist church was held Friday, November 27, at the church, corner of South Boulevard and Rosalia street.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. L. C. Warren. Mrs. R. J. Proctor, the secretary, resigned to take up her duties as teacher in the Sunday school. Mrs. Floyd was elected to fill the secretary's place.

A lovely basket was filled with Thanksgiving goodies and given to a worthy cause.

At the next business meeting the class will give the customary Christmas party with the exchange of gifts.

The hostesses were Mrs. V. E. Adams, Mrs. M. P. Estes and Mrs.

Georgia Society To Meet Tuesday.

The Georgia Society Daughters of the American Colonists will meet in the palm room at the Georgian Terrace on Tuesday, December 8, at 3 o'clock. The group of ladies entertaining the society are: Mrs. Frances Brown Chase, chairman; Mrs. George M. Hope, Mrs. Elmer R. Kirk, Mrs. Howard H. McCall, Mrs. Carroll Latimer, Mrs. Beverly M. DuBose, Mrs. James Edgar Paullin, Mrs. Bryan Wells Collier, Mrs. W. L. Randall, Mrs. George M. Brown, Miss Corrie Hoyt Brown, Mrs. David Woodward, Miss Marian Woodward, Mrs. Aurelia Roach McMillan.

East Point Club To Observe Arbor Day.

The East Point Woman's club will present its Arbor day program Friday afternoon, December 11, at 3 o'clock at the home of Mrs. L. G. Mackey and Miss Minnie Grove, on West Forest avenue. Mrs. E. G. Clinkscales is chairman of the forestry committee and has arranged the following program: Instrumental solo, Miss Gussie Wooten; historical trees, Mrs. L. O. Freeman; song, The Wood of the Cross, Mrs. J. R. Williams; reading by Miss Eastlack; poem, Trees, Mrs. E. G. Clinkscales.

"We are co-laborers together with God."—I. Cor. 3.9.

Were We Really Thankful?

Of course we were! Did we not "say so" in our homes and in our churches on Thanksgiving day?

According to the Book, "our mouths did praise Thee with joyful lips." The sound thereof is resonant still, for truly "praise is comely." What then may be the proof of our praise?

Thanksgiving day is past and Christmas draws near—Christmas, the gift-making season—affording opportunity beyond compare to prove "lip" praise by "gift" service.

Apropos to gift-making, we are thinking of an article a few days ago in The Constitution by one of our foremost newspaper men which told of the debt-burdened mission boards of his own denomination. The writer added, "Similar conditions confront nearly all other communions."

What think you, Christian, of Kingdom obligations unmet, and God's people standing aside unmoved and unperturbed? Missionary boards must find relief and the opportune time is at hand.

No people have been so blessed of God as ourselves. We have "said so" over and over again.

Now face we the question: "What shall we render unto the Lord for all His benefits toward us? This Christmas season suggests God's appointed time to translate our "lip" service into "gift" praise. Then why not the best and biggest Christmas gift to Kingdom extension, thus proving sincere thanks to the Father for His greatest gift to the world? "That there way be a performance also out of that which we have."—2 Cor. 8-12.

Calvary W. M. S. Elects Officers.

The W. M. S. of Calvary Methodist church met Monday afternoon. Mrs. E. C. Houston presided and the following body of officers were elected: Mrs. Rowland Bryce, president; Mrs. C. E. Wilson, vice president; Mrs. R. T. Carroll, treasurer; Mrs. L. M. McCarty, assistant treasurer; Mrs. T. A. Slaughter, recording secretary; Mrs. J. J. Edwards, corresponding secretary; Mrs. V. A. White, superintendent study and publicity; Mrs. W. W. Campbell, superintendent supplies; Mrs. W. T. Mooney, social service; Miss Lola Liddell, young people; Mrs. J. M. Means, local work and superintendent of circles; Mrs. T. W. Blalock, local treasurer; Mrs. Lola Burnett Wesley, house; Mrs. W. J. Eubanks, agent Voice.

Mrs. J. C. White, superintendent south Atlanta district of the North Georgia W. M. S., led a very beautiful devotional, after which the names of all the women of the church were placed in boxes and drawn out by the circle chairmen, and the six old circles were changed to eight new ones, to become effective January 1, when new circle officers will be elected.

Mrs. Houston, the retiring president, has done a perfectly splendid work this year and Mrs. Bryce, the new president, earnestly solicits the same cooperation Mrs. Houston has had.

Mrs. Harvey Clarke At Second Baptist.

Mrs. Harvey Clarke will address the Woman's Missionary society of the Second Baptist church at its regular monthly meeting December 7, at 3:30 o'clock.

She will discuss some phases of her work as a missionary in Japan, where she was stationed first in Kumamoto and then in Tokio. Mrs. Clarke is much beloved and this announcement will be received with much interest.

She has been doing some wonderful publicity work for missions since her return to the homeland, having made nearly 300 talks and addresses.

MRS. JOHN SPALDING.

Mrs. R. T. Turner Honors W. M. U.

Mrs. R. T. Turner entertained the W. M. U. of East Side Baptist Tabernacle with a social at her home, 293 Kirkwood avenue, Thursday at 3 o'clock.

The living room where the guests were received was decorated with vases of chrysanthemums.

Mrs. Thacker, in behalf of the union, presented the hostess with a beautiful serving tray.

Those present were Mrs. C. J. Corley, Mrs. Thurman Cash, Mrs. J. R. Wilson, Mrs. W. J. Chappell, Mrs. Homer C. Johnson, Mrs. R. A. Thacker, Mrs. C. B. Wilson, Mrs. C. V. Ferguson, Mrs. W. R. Jones and Mrs. R. T. Turner.

Capitol Avenue Auxiliary Meets.

The Young Woman's auxiliary of Capitol Avenue Baptist church met Friday night at 6:15 o'clock. There were 20 present, including the counsellor, Mrs. T. E. Rowden, gathered around the table enjoying the plate lunch served by two circles of the W. M. S.

After the regular business plans were made to carry a Thanksgiving basket to a dear old lady and her granddaughter. Each year the auxiliary makes a donation for the Thanksgiving dinner, which the W. M. S. furnishes a girls' home and joyfully contributed grapefruit.

Mrs. Rowden has just returned from the convention at Macon and gave the girls a most inspiring talk on the work for the year. The Y. W. C. A. wants to have a large part in the kingdom work at Capitol avenue.

La Grange College Notes of Interest.

Wednesday evening another of the enjoyable student recitals was given in the college auditorium.

Thanksgiving day on the "hill" began with Thanksgiving services led by President Thompson. At 10 o'clock the basketball tournament opened with a fast game between the freshman and sophomores.

Mrs. Rosser, Jr., Is Elected Head Of Mission Board

At the meeting of the Atlanta City Mission board made up of cooperating Methodist churches of the city, held on Tuesday, December 1, at the Wesley Memorial church, the following officers were elected for 1926:

President, Mrs. Luther Z. Rosser, Jr.; first vice president, Mrs. S. F. Boykin; second vice president, Mrs. A. L. Norris; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Fred Shafer; recording secretary, Mrs. Walter McElreath; treasurer, Mrs. John A. Manget; assistant treasurer, Mrs. R. J. Bates.

The chairman of standing committees elected were: Publicity, Mrs. Blair Armstrong; devotional, Mrs. J. L. Dennis; clubs, Mrs. Mary Riley; relief, Mrs. J. M. Skinner; industries, Mrs. H. W. Grant; house, Mrs. W. M. Rapp; recreation and culture, Mrs. W. E. Coleman, Jr.

The board furnished 54 baskets to needy families at Thanksgiving time and will undertake a similar work for the Christmas season.

With the help of students in sociology from Agnes Scott college and Emory university, the women of this board are conducting a survey of several sections of the city looking toward the establishment of a new welfare center. Thirty-nine blocks are included in the first survey to be made, which is now under way.

Under the direction of Mrs. Bessie Day, the board has recently taken work in connection with religious services to be held in the "station house" with women prisoners. Nineteen services have been held since the work started three weeks ago and wonderful results have already been obtained.

At this meeting four new swings were donated to Jennie White's day nursery for colored children which is located on Piedmont avenue.

Announcement.

A meeting of the executive board of the Federated Church Women of Georgia will be held, December 12, at Mrs. Ramsey's tearoom, Davison-Paxon-Stokes. A full and prompt attendance is urged as matters of importance will be discussed.

MRS. LEWIS, president.

Mrs. W. J. Cox In Macon.

Macon is the first city in Georgia to be honored by a visit from the newly elected president of the south-wide Baptist W. M. U., Mrs. W. J. Cox, of Memphis, Tenn. Today, December 6, Mrs. Cox is in Macon attending the Baptist Student Union conference being held at Mercer university. Our own Miss Julia Allen, Young People's leader and college correspondent for Georgia, is also attending this meeting, and young people from all over the state will have the rare privilege of hearing addresses from all over the state will have the the same platform. Mrs. Cox is a strong advocate of the Young People's department of W. M. U. work, and her presence is counted on as an outstanding attraction of the occasion. How gladly Atlanta Baptists would welcome Mrs. Cox on her return from the Macon conference.

Ponce de Leon Baptist W. M. S.

Mrs. Charles W. West has prepared a most attractive program for the Ponce de Leon Avenue W. M. S. for the observance of the week of prayer for foreign missions on Monday and Tuesday afternoons, December 7 and 8. On Monday afternoon the speaker will be Mrs. Lucy Ayers Pitman, daughter of Dr. T. W. Ayers, medical missionary to China. Mrs. Pitman has lived a number of years in China, and has had every opportunity to know of the progress and the needs of mission work in China. She is now making Atlanta her home, and has joined Druid Hills church, where she is the splendid teacher of the large T. E. L. class of their Sunday school.

On Tuesday afternoon the subject will be the "Christmas Clearing of Debt," and all are asked to use the Lottie Moon Christmas offering envelopes, and to make sacrificial gifts toward lifting the debt on the Baptist foreign mission board.

Arbor Day Observed by Kirkwood Association.

Kirkwood P.-T. A. and Kirkwood Civic league in a beautifully combined program observed Arbor day Friday with appropriate exercises. Teachers' row, consisting of 25 crepe myrtle trees, was planted by the Parent-Teacher association in honor of the following members of the faculty and Mrs. C. H. Wetmore, secretary to Miss Bremer, principal: Mrs. Gordon Darden, Miss Leila Livingston, Miss Sara Sutton, Miss Lila Ellis, Miss Nell Williamson, Miss Louise Braselton, Miss Irene Young, Miss Ethel Clark, Miss Florlee Bond, Miss Edna Lewis, Miss Elizabeth Catron, Miss Pearl Moore, Miss Alice Wheeler, Miss Grace McCurdy, Miss Ann Bivens, Miss Jennette Tillman, Miss Roberta Robson, Miss Mai Berry, Mrs. L. L. Pritchett, Mrs. R. V. Hartwell, Mrs. Natalie Buchanan, Miss Daisy Pennington, Miss Gladys Vincent and Miss Annie Lee Allen. Rev. J. L. Jackson offered the opening prayer. The school sang an Arbor day song, followed by a recitation of "The Tree" by Emily Ann Wiley.

Mrs. Kate Green Hess, president of the Civic league, gave the origin of Arbor day. Mrs. H. G. Parks, president of the P.-T. A., spoke of the love and esteem in which the faculty of the school is held, and the splendid spirit of cooperation existing between teachers and parents, naming each tree as the pupils of the different grades threw dirt on the roots of the tree named for the teacher of their grade. Three other crepe myrtles were planted in other parts of the yard, one bearing the name of Miss Julia Brenner. The Civic league planting in honor of two past presidents, Mrs. Vernon Shearer and Mrs. Joseph Smith.

Fortified Hills W. M. S. Meets.

The W. M. S. of Fortified Hills Baptist church held an interesting meeting with Mrs. W. S. Wier last week, having as their guest of honor Mrs. W. M. Jones, secretary of the first district, Atlanta B. W. M. U., who made an inspiring talk on the work of the coming year. Mrs. Cheatham led the devotional. Circle No. 3 had charge of the program, which was greatly enjoyed by all present. The next meeting will be held with Mrs. W. J. Jones on December 15.

MRS. W. R. ECHOLS.

West End Leader

MRS. E. J. WHITE.

Mrs. E. J. White is the new president of the W. M. S. of the West End Baptist church, succeeding Mrs. W. Harvey Clarke, retiring president. Mrs. White has served in many offices in our denominational work, last year being superintendent of the Stewart Avenue mission. She was on the W. B. M. U. executive board of the state and her advice and wise counsel was a real help to this band of consecrated women.

She has organized her forces well at the West End church and thus bids afir to be the best year in the history of the society.

Mrs. White is a woman of culture of soul as well as of mind and is giving the best that she has to the Master. She is much beloved by all her coworkers.

Golden Rule Sunday Today.

The Christian Endeavor union of Atlanta, of which R. M. McFarland, Jr., is president, is sponsoring a campaign for a city-wide observance of Golden Rule Sunday today. This campaign is for the benefit of the Near East relief, which is interdenominational, interracial and international.

At present there are 35,000 children i nthe orphanages, children who were made orphans by the late war, the Turkish massacre and starvation. Every child is graduated at 16 with a thorough knowledge of a trade, fitting him to be self-supporting.

In connection with this campaign, President Calvin Coolidge says: "The reports of the observance of International Golden Rule Sunday last year in 50 countries, and its far-reaching results in the training of orphans in the Near East, have been of great interest to me. This expression of brotherhood inevitably has a beneficial influence upon those who give as well as those who receive.

"As practical help is the best expression of friendship, I feel that the aid which we may give out of our prosperity to those impoverished by war may be the utmost value in the promotion of international good will. The consistent observance of Golden Rule Sunday cannot but help to bring about the application of the Golden Rule itself to the misunderstandings of nations and of individuals.

"I earnestly hope that the voluntary observance of this day may become increasingly prevalent in the homes of America and throughout the world."

MRS. WALLACE ROGERS.

Glory Class Gives Banquet.

On Tuesday evening, November 24, the Glory class of the Peachtree Christian church Sunday school held a Thanksgiving fellowship banquet at the Hi-Noon lunch room, 28 Carnegie Way. The meal consisted of a regular old-fashioned Thanksgiving dinner, Miss Lusu Ingram acting as toastmaster for the occasion. A number of gay songs were sung, including the class song, and the remainder of the evening was devoted to stunts, jokes and a general good time.

Among those present were Mrs. Lane Mitchell, Mrs. Douglas Couts, Mrs. E. R. Craighead, Mrs. B. A. Marshall, Mrs. J. B. Gould, Mrs. Henry Sacre, Mrs. Annie Mae Wall, Mrs. R. C. Hicks, Mrs. J. L. Cook, Mrs. R. P. Griffin, Mrs. J. A. Bloodworth, Mrs. Paul McCash, Mrs. R. A. Ford, Miss Lusu Ingram, Miss Ruby Epps, Miss Ora Mae East, Miss Connie Freeman, Miss Gladys Young, Miss Christine Bryant, Miss Blodwyn Davis, E. R. Craighead, Henry Sacre, J. L. Cook, J. A. Bloodworth, Paul McCash, R. A. Ford, R. C. Hicks, Jesse Hall, Herman Baker, Mr. Brannon and Mr. Barnwell.

Atlanta Chapter U. D. C. To Have Tea.

Invitations have been issued to an afternoon tea to be given by the Atlanta chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, on Thursday, December 10, at the chapter house, 156 Juniper street.

The date being the regular day for chapter meeting and coming so near Christmas the affair will be in keeping with the good cheer feelings of the season.

The entire membership is expected to attend and if possible bring a contribution of some kind, book, prose, poetry, historical or fiction, relating to the Confederacy.

Goodwill Industry Doing Good Work.

Many emergencies are being met by the Atlanta Goodwill industry, established during the summer by the Methodist churches of Atlanta and located on Edgewood avenue.

During the past month one family of father, mother and seven children, who had been stranded in Atlanta because of an automobile accident while en route from Ohio to Florida, have been put on their feet. Provisions were supplied during the emergency, work was found for the father and living quarters secured.

In another case, a mother of four children has been given very necessary medical attention and is now able to work and support her children.

One hundred and forty-seven applicants have been helped. One thousand and five hundred goodwill bags are now placed in the various homes of the city and much good is being done.

Persons interested in helping this work may send contributions to E. L. Almand, 66 Park avenue, who is treasurer of the board.

H. O. Williams is the superintendent of the industry, sent to Atlanta by the goodwill department of the mission board of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, and he invites all who are interested to visit the plant at 346 Edgewood avenue.

Decatur Church Has Harvest Day.

The observance of Harvest day by members of the Missionary society of Decatur First Methodist Episcopal church, south, will be held in an unusual manner when a pageant, "The Fruits of the Year," will be rendered by the executive board of that society.

This pageant is very beautiful in its simplicity and is the work of our mission board. It brings about a possibility of incorporating the yearly reports of all the departments in a very attractive manner, each officer presenting her report, also a symbolic offering to the Great Recorder.

The part of the Great Recorder will be beautifully filled by our minister's wife, Mrs. G. M. Eakes.

The society will b given a greeting by our pastor, Rev. G. M. Eakes, who has just been returned for his sixth year's service.

The noon devotional will be given by Dr. J. A. Sharp, president of Young Harris college. It is not necessary to enlarge upon what this means. Dr. Sharp is a consecrated man, a magnetic speaker and is doing a wonderful work with our young people in his great school and his message will be vital and heart-searching.

The election of officers will be held and drawing of circles for the new year.

Special music will be rendered by Mrs. Charles Carter and Mrs. Pitman Sutton and others.

Luncheon will be served by the local committee, and all in all, we hope to have a great day.

Every member of the Missionary society, every friend of Dr. Sharp's, every friend of the work is cordially invited to be present.

Luncheon and Bazar at Church.

The ladies of Central Congregational church will have a sale of articles suitable for Christmas gifts, aprons, candy and cakes, on Tuesday, December 8, in the Sunday school room in the church, corner Ellis street and Carnegie Way, down stairs. A hot luncheon will be served from 12 to 2, for 50 cents. The bazar will be open at 10 o'clock.

Briefly Told

Mrs. Frances Brown Chase, of the W. M. S. of the Second Baptist church has just been elected chairman of the scrapbook committee of the Atlanta Association of B. W. M. U., to succeed Mrs. J. J. Wallace, resigned. This places Mrs. Chase on the executive board of the Georgia B. W. M. U. Our scrapbook won the prize of the Macon convention and we are hoping to be equally successful for the coming year.

Mrs. J. D. Rhodes, mission study chairman of the Atlanta B. W. M. U., conducted a most instructive conference Friday morning at Rich's conference room.

Mrs. J. Clinton Reese, of Fairburn, chairman of mission study in the Fairburn association, was one of the out-of-town women attending the mission study conference which was held on Friday by Mrs. J. D. Rhodes.

A mission study class using "A Decade of W. M. U. Service," was held at the Capitol Avenue Baptist church last Tuesday.

Miss Louise Foreman, traveling secretary of the Southern Baptist Interboard commission on student religious activities has been in Georgia for the past two weeks working in interest of the student conference which is to be held at Tatnall Square Baptist church, Macon, Ga., December 4, 5 and 6.

Miss Julia Allen, Young People's leader for the Georgia B. W. M. U. will attend the Baptist student conference to be held in Macon, December 4, 5 and 6.

The Business Woman's League of the West End Baptist church was delightfully entertained at a tea on Monday afternoon given by the W. M. S. at the church. An interesting musical program and delicious refreshments added to the pleasure of the occasion.

One of the young city teachers when asked to give a reading to her class chose a Biblical story. The children were so interested they wanted another. In this manner the story hour can be made both entertaining and instructive, unconsciously uplifting the minds of the child until it will seek knowledge for itself.

Mrs. Ina Davis Fulton, treasurer for the woman's council of the M. E. Church, South, reports that she has received $284,422.33 during the past three months. This exceeds the report for the same length of time in 1924 $39,931.66. The report shows a remarkable increase in the efforts of the Methodist women to meet the emergency caused by the completion of the Centenary period.

Mrs. J. W. Perry, of Nashville, Tenn., has been made campaign manager for the Bennett Memorial Fund of the M. E. Church, South. It is hoped that this fund may be completed by December, 1926. Of the $500,000 pledged by the women of Southern Methodism, the women of North Georgia conference are undertaking to raise $25,000.

Mrs. W. J. DeBardeleben, wife of the pastor of Payne Memorial church was presented a white gold wrist watch by the members of the church upon the eve of her departure to her new home. Her husband was appointed pastor of Grant Park Methodist church at the recent conference in Griffin.

Miss Ella Leverett, Methodist missionary to China, was a visitor at the North Atlanta district meeting on Wednesday of this week. Miss Leverett is a Georgia woman, home on furlough, and is doing a great deal to increase interest in missions during her stay in her native state.

Mrs. Y. M. Awtrey, of Acworth, secretary of the Marietta district Woman's Missionary society of Methodism, attended the North Atlanta district meeting Wednesday and addressed the conference on rural work.

The final report of the value of the Thanksgiving shower to the Wesley Memorial hospital is not yet available but about 3,000 articles have been received to date. The shower is an annual event sponsored by the women of the Methodist churches of Georgia.

The women of Trinity Methodist church will hold a bazar on Tuesday, December, 8, at No. 3 Plaza Way, near the Whitehall viaduct. All friends of the society are invited to call.

Sunday, November 29, was "dime night" in the Georgia Epworth leagues. It has been estimated that if every leaguer in the conference give this one dime over and above other pledges, it will be possible to create a loan fund for the benefit of students in Emory university academy at Oxford. The fund is practically assured by the returns from last Sunday's program.

Atlanta in Lead.

In an interesting article by Rev. C. M. Meeks appearing in last week's Methodist Advocate, entitled "Methodism In Our Larger Cities," the following figures show Atlanta women to lead in membership in the Woman's Missionary society.

Augusta	634
Savannah	545
Macon	897
Columbus	397
Atlanta	5,123

The two Atlanta districts of the North Georgia conference compose the largest solid block of Methodism in all the world, it is said.

Philathea Class Holds Meeting.

The St. Paul's Philathea class met at the home of the president, Mrs. T. P. White, 130 Park avenue, November 30, for the purpose of holding its monthly business meeting. The meeting was opened by a devotional, given by Miss Lena Mae Jones.

During the business session, the plans and work for the ensuing year were discussed. After the business had been transacted, a social hour was enjoyed.

Those present were: Miss Ellie Gheesling, Mrs. T. P. White, Mrs. T. A. Tison, Mrs. Sam Sheppard, Mrs. F. A. Satterwhite, Miss Zell Sewell, Mrs. J. T. Driggers, Mrs. C. G. Kemper, Mrs. E. A. Eggleston, Mrs. Allgood, Miss Lena Mae Jones, Mrs. W. L. Ballenger, Miss Inez Sewell, Miss Jewell Snead, Miss Gladys McWilliams, Mrs. J. S. Tiller, Mrs. Bryan Vowell, Mrs. W. E. Vonderau and Mrs. W. L. McWaters.

Baptist To Break Ground For New Hospital Today

Sunday afternoon marks an epoch in the life of the Georgia Baptist hospital, as on that day dirt will be broken for the first unit of their new plant.

The services will be held on the ground opposite the present building, and notable speakers will assist in the services.

Among these will be Governor Clifford Walker, W. W. Orr, A. J. Orme, Dr. Carter Helm Jones, Dr. Charles W. Daniel and Dr. Arch C. Cree.

A large attendance of the woman's auxiliary and other representatives of the churches, with their friends, are expected to be present.

Services will begin at 3 o'clock.

MRS. JAMES L. KEY,
President, Georgia Baptist Hospital.

Atlanta Baptists In New Division.

Changes will occur so long as the world stands! A great change has taken place in the west central division. In order to equalize divisions, at the B. W. M. U. convention in Macon it was deemed wise to transfer the Atlanta association from the west central division to the north central.

It has been a real joy for me and my co-workers to labor with the women of Atlanta, and we fully realize our loss is the north central's gain. May you prove a blessing and benediction in your new sphere!

We now have 12 associations in the west central division. Three, the central western, Good Samaritan and Tallapoosa are without superintendents. Pray with us that this present existing condition may be of very short duration.

We know "prayer changes things." Two new superintendents come to us this year, they are Mrs. W. H. Callaway, of Manchester, who will serve the Columbus association, and Mrs. L. A. Ingram, of Fayetteville, the Flint river.

Mrs. J. Clinton Reese is our (new) happy divisional mother. Our son is James Fowler, of Mercer university. I hope every W. M. S. in the division will make him feel that he really belongs to us.

A new white cross chairman will serve us this year, Mrs. Roger Strickland, of Concord, Flint River association. The splendid work of our former white cross chairman, Mrs. J. Lawrence Turner, Atlanta, caused our division to make a splendid showing this year. We welcome our new co-workers.

Mrs. Redwine, of Atlanta, who served us so faithfully as Young People's Counsellor for the past two years, can serve no longer as she is now in the N. C. division. We have been unable to find her successor.

The division also is without a stewardship chairman. Wish some consecrated woman would volunteer to render this service to her Lord.

Our division won the mission study banner in Savannah last year. Our efficient chairman, Mrs. E. R. Barrett, was loathe to part with it, so went to Macon convention in order to have our state chairman, Mrs. Paul White, re-present it to her for another year's work. She went home with the banner.

Mrs. T. B. Woodall, of Fairburn, will serve as divisional personal service chairman.

We are now looking forward to our spring institute when our division will be called together again. Here's hoping every W. M. S. in the division will send representatives to Fairburn. Institute will be held second Tuesday and Wednesday in April.

MRS. IDUS ROBERTSON.
Vice President W. C. Division.
Manchester, Ga.

Y. M. C. A. Luncheon To Workers' Conference.

A lovely social occasion was the luncheon given by the Y. M. C. A. to the workers' conference of the Y auxiliary.

The table in the dining room was decorated with yellow and white chrysanthemums, this color scheme featuring the luncheon.

Mrs. Norman Peel introduced Mrs. M. B. Garwood, chairman of the Christmas dinner which is to be given by the auxiliary to newsboys and street boys' clubs December 22.

The honor guests of the occasion were the newly-elected president, Mrs. George Hinman, and the vice presidents, Mrs. J. H. Zachary and Mrs. S. F. Boykin.

The chairman of decorations for Christmas, Mrs. W. D. Marshall, gave her report.

Mrs. Charles Goodman distributed the tarleton stockings to be made and filled as place cards.

Mrs. George Hinman gave details of the Christmas tableaux to be given in the main auditorium of the Y. M. C. A., following the dinner on December 22.

Outlines and plans for the new year's work were discussed and arranged.

Baptist Hospital Auxiliary Meeting.

The regular meeting of the woman's auxiliary of the Georgia Baptist hospital will be held next Friday, December 11, at the hospital at 10:30 o'clock. A full attendance is requested.

MRS. JAMES L. KEY,
President.

State P.-T. A. Endowment Fund To Expand Work in Georgia

The Georgia congress of parents and teachers has so grown in numbers as well as work and has expanded in the field of endeavor that it is found necessary to secure a greater income to properly present the teachings and principles of the organization.

The Alice Hilbun endowment fund was begun at the close of the administration of Mrs. Charles A. Hilbun, of Macon, a president who spared no effort to give the congress to the entire state, and complimentary to her the fund has been named in her honor, has been recognized as the logical means of financing this great movement; of more closely cementing the bonds connecting and coordinating the efforts of the school and home; of creating and stimulating a spirit for greater effort in the interest of education.

This fund, which is to be held in perpetuity, the interest only to be used in the extension of the state work, is prorated among the 12 districts, according to the financial ability and parent-teacher membership. In each district the vice president will appoint a member to act as chairman of this fund—a committee whose duty it is to push to a successful conclusion the campaign for the quota assigned to that district.

Founder's Roll.

Any association or individual paying into the endowment fund the sum of $100 honoring anyone will be known as a founder and will receive a founder certificate and the name printed in the year book of the Georgia congress. Dues from individual membership $2 and honorary membership $5 are to be placed in the endowment treasury. The membership chairmen are urged to secure as many of these memberships as possible, sending the money direct to the state treasurer, Mrs. A. E. Ehrlich, 112 East Thirty-eighth street, Savannah.

Some of the districts report activity already towards raising their quota. There are school entertainments, carnivals, tag days, dollar days and various other ways of raising the money.

There is the Macon Telegraph loving cup that goes to the district sending in the largest amount proportioned to its membership, which this year practically means to the district going over the top with the biggest bound. The active cooperation of every one interested in child welfare in Georgia is solicited.

Following are the district quotas and their respective vice presidents: First district, $3,800, Mrs. O. L. Gresham, Waynesboro; second, $1,500, Mrs. I. J. Hoffmayer, Albany; third, $1,250, Mrs. Goode Price; fourth, $3,000, Mrs. Reynolds Flournoy, Columbus; fifth, $8,000, Mrs. E. Z. Petersen, Atlanta; six $3,200, Mrs. Howard Cutter, Macon; seventh, $1,400, Mrs. M. S. Lanier, Rome; eighth, $1,800, Mrs. Duncan Burnet, Athens; ninth, $1,500, Mrs. W. M. Johnson, Gainesville; tenth, $1,600, Mrs. Hugh Paschal, Harlem; eleventh, $1,450; twelfth, $1,500, Mrs. John Poe, Vidalia.

The board of trustees for the endowment fund members are: Mrs. H. E. Judd, Dalton; Mrs. Reynolds Flournoy Columbus; Mrs. Arthur Tufts, Emory; Mrs. T. G. Tarver, Macon; Mrs. Otto Kolb, Savannah, chairman.

Foreign Extension.

Cooperation in the child welfare work has been sought by Japan, Greece, China, Italy, Switzerland, New Zealand, South America and South Australia, and a committee was recently appointed to consider possible methods of cooperation. Greece is organizing, as also are several South American countries, China and Japan. Japanese bulletins copy national T.-P. A. literature. Italy, seeing the magazines in France, made inquiry about organizing. Switzerland has been organizing and is seeking to establish relations with the national congress; and Russia is asking for literature, especially on pre-school work.

R. L. Hope School Is Dedicated With Exercises

The beautiful new R. L. Hope school on Piedmont road was formally dedicated Monday evening, November 30. Mrs. Howell Dodd, president of the P.-T. A., presided, and the Boy Scouts of troop No. 1, Buckhead, acted as ushers. Dr. Frederick Stevenson, pastor of Peachtree Road Presbyterian church, pronounced invocation.

Mrs. Dodd extended a cordial welcome to the patrons and friends of the school, and in the name of the school offered the beautiful auditorium, with a seating capacity of 300, to the community.

The building was dedicated by the two Girl Scout troops of the school, troops Nos. 20 and 22, the scouts using a simple but impressive ceremony. Mrs. Frank D. Holland, Girl Scout commissioner, and Mrs. Harvey Parry, local Girl Scout director, were introduced to the audience. They spoke briefly of scouting and what it means to girls, touching on preparedness and training in leadership. Those who have long been associated with the school and have worked to help make it what it is today were invited upon the platform.

Miss Ida Williams, for many years principal of the school; Miss Kathleen Mitchell, primary supervisor of county schools; and Dr. R. L. Hope, for whom the school is named, were in a reminiscent mood and drew pictures of the old R. L. Hope, 23 years ago. The first school contained two rooms with two teachers for nine grades, sessions from 8 o'clock to 4 o'clock, with pupils ranging in age from 5 to 30 years.

Principal Speaks.

Mrs. C. C. Julian, present principal of the school, spoke of the splendid cooperation between the school, the parents and the community.

Jere A. Wells, superintendent of Fulton county schools, told of the plans to carry out a building program throughout the entire county so that all the children in the county might have educational advantages in decent surroundings.

County Commissioner Edwin Johnson, W. J. J. Chase, the architect of the school, and Senator Walter C. Hendrix spoke briefly, congratulating the school and community on the beautiful new building.

Francis Smith, president of the seventh grade, extended greetings and welcome from the school.

W. B. Griffin and Thomas Cox, a graduate of the school, on their mandolins with Mrs. Griffith at the piano, rendered several numbers. Mrs. Susan B. Johnson, soloist of Ponce de Leon Baptist church, gave a group of delightful songs, and the school's favorite singer, Chester Kitchings, sang several entertaining numbers.

Dr. Willis Sutton, superintendent of city schools, was the speaker for the evening. The keynote of his address was "Health and Health Education As Fundamental."

At the close of the program refreshments of ice cream and homemade cake were served from the cafeteria by the Girl Scouts.

An invitation was extended for a tour of inspection through the building, which, in addition to the auditorium, consists of eight classrooms, library and teachers' rest room, a cafeteria, where wholesome hot lunches are served at a nominal price.

Kindergarten Building.

The dindergarten has one of the portable buildings, which is connected to the school building by a covered passageway.

This year the pupils are studying the works of famous artists, and each room has bought an excellent copy of some masterpiece—"The Blue Boy," "The Madonna of the Chair," "The Boy and the Rabbit," etc. The pupils have also furnished the teachers' rest room most attractively.

The county is putting the grounds in shape, and the new driveway adds much to their beauty and appearance.

The faculty of the school are: Mrs. C. C. Julian, principal and seventh grade; Mrs. Philip Gates, sixth grade; Miss Martha McLaughlin, fifth grade; Miss Mary Eva Alderman, fourth grade; Miss Lucile Ross, third grade; Mrs. Ethel Cooper, second grade; Mrs. A. Barnett, combination grade; Mrs. Dorothy Landrum, first grade; Miss Jennie Lancaster, kindergarten.

Boys High P.-T. A. Adopts Resolution For School Bonds

A spirit meeting which preceded the annual game on Tuesday between Boys' High and Tech High football teams, was an important feature of the December meeting of Boys' High P.-T. A., which met Monday evening in the school auditorium.

Mr. Floyd spoke of the hard schedule which Boys' High has had this season and what a really good showing had been made, and emphasized the fact that the team was deserving of the whole-hearted support of its patrons.

An important matter was brought up by President Watkins in regard to the senior annual. Mr. Watkins reminded those present that on the occasion of the previous meeting, Burton Hudgins, who was advertising manager for the annual, made an earnest speech soliciting financial support for the annual, the publication of which involved considerable expense. Owing to the sad death of this popular and capable student, who had formulated all plans for carrying out this work, President Watkins suggested that it would be a fitting memorial to him that this meeting provide means to insure the success of the annual from a financial standpoint. The suggestion of Mr. Watkins was heartily indorsed and Albert S. Adams was appointed chairman, with Mrs. Charles E. Dowman as co-chairman of a committee to arrange for underwriting this fund and to formulate plans, in which the members will cooperate to secure the necessary amount for publishing the annual.

After talks by Mr. Hancock, president of the school board; Edgar Watkins and H. O. Smith, in support of school bonds, the meeting unanimously adopted a resolution indorsing the movement for issuance of sufficient bonds to meet the needs of the schools.

The association went on record as being thoroughly opposed to allowing any part of the school grounds or fencing to be used for commercial advertising purposes.

Mr. Davis, director of the Dramatic club, stated that the recent performance at the Woman's club was a great success, both from an artistic and a financial standpoint, and expressed the belief that the club would be entirely self-supporting.

The orchestra under the direction of Preston Epps, appeared for the first time this year and delighted the audience with several well-rendered selections.

Memory of David Mayer Honored At W. A. Bass P.-T. A. Meeting

At the "daddies'" meeting of the William A. Bass Junior High P.-T. A. held Wednesday evening at the schoolhouse, a program honoring the memory of David A. Mayer, was observed. Mr. Mayer, a pioneer in Atlanta educational work, was one of the original Atlanta board of education, which was organized 55 years ago; others serving on this original board were William A. Bass, for whom William A. Bass Junior High is named; Daniel O'Keefe and Major Slaton. In a fitting ceremony, dedicating the library of the school—the David A. Mayer library—Miss Lollie Wood presented the library, which contains 2,000 books; this in behalf of the P.-T. A. and the boys and girls of William A. Bass Junior High school. Miss Wood has been a teacher in the Atlanta schools for many years and her talk was a tribute to the unselfish devotion of Mr. Mayer in giving of himself for the betterment of his city.

Library Accepted.

In response and in behalf of the William A. Bass Junior High school and patrons, J. H. Smith, principal of the school, accepted the library; having known Mr. Mayer personally, every word was a tribute of praise.

Miss Mattie Slaton, sister of former Governor Slaton, and daughter of Major Slaton, spoke briefly of the valued friendship existing between Mr. Mayer and her father; of their untiring efforts in behalf of education. Mrs. John Isham, one of the original staff of teachers, was presented. Mrs. Henry Bauer, granddaughter of Mr. Mayer, and president of William A. Bass Parent-Teacher association, expressed the gratitude and appreciation of the entire Mayer family for the many beautiful expressions of love and tribute given her forbear.

Gifts from the family for the library were a library table and filing cabinet. The great-grandchildren gave a waste basket. Class eight-two A presented two beautiful and appropriate pictures for the library. The final gift, made by the grandchildren of Mr. Mayer, was a portrait of their father. this was unveiled by the great grandson, Scout Henry Bauer. Telegrams from three daughters of Mr. Mayer in Savannah were read. Note from Mrs. Annie T. Wise was also read. Mrs. Susan B. Johnson sang three selections, one from Verdi's "Aida," "An Irish Love Song," by Margaret Lang, and "Break o' Day."

Professor Floyd Fields spoke to the mothers and fathers on "Responsibility of Parenthood." He deplored the apparent lack of home training and discipline, urging that parents realize their responsibility and carefully train the child from its earliest years on through school, in order to fit them for citizenship.

The association voted $1 for membership in better films; also $50 was given the chairman of family welfare.

A check for $3.50 each will be given to grades from the seventh, eighth and ninth, which shows largest attendance at teas given by the P.-T. A. Of these the seventh and eighth have been given; the ninth grade tea will be given Friday, December 11, at 3 o'clock, at the school house. All parents and teachers of the ninth grades are invited.

A beautiful loving cup was exhibited; this trophy will be given the first grade having 100 per cent membership of father and mother in the P.-T. A.

Every member of the William A. Bass P.-T. A. was requested to plant a dogwood tree during the month of December, or on Arbor day.

Resolution Read.

Mrs. George Howsmon read a resolution recently adopted by the Parent-Teacher council, asking that the laws concerning the sale of salacious literature in the city of Atlanta be enforced. This resolution was also approved and adopted by the William A. Bass P.T. A.

Classes winning prizes for P.-T. A. attendance were Seven-B one, Miss Lowe; Eight-B six, Mr. Barksdale; Nine-B 1, Mr. Mullinax. The P.-T. A. pin was given Miss Marian Wayne.

The president, Mrs. Bauer, thanked the mothers and fathers for the unusually fine attendance. The Clapp gym was filled to overflowing and many were forced to stand.

Mr. Hunter Outlines High School Program to P.-T. A. Council

The outstanding feature of the Atlanta P.-T. A. council meeting last Thursday was the interesting talk given by H. Reid Hunter, assistant superintendent of Atlanta public schools in charge of the high schools. Mr. Hunter outlined the program of the junior and senior high schools, showing the mothers the constructive steps being taken to complete a perfect program of study for these schools. Mr. Hunter made a number of valuable suggestions whereby the parents can assist in the education of the child. He stressed the urgent need of more home study for the child and suggested where it was possible for parents to arrange certain study periods in the home and having extreme quietude at that time. Mr. Hunter insisted that parents become acquainted with the teachers of their children and to offer any constructive criticism.

Mr. Hunter was introduced by Mrs. A. D. Gregory, council program chairman and was welcomed by Mrs. George M. Howsmon, council president, who presided over meetings.

Following Mr. Hunter's talk, Mrs. E. D. McDonald, past president of the P.-T. A. council, added an enthusiastic indorsement to his inspiring and elucidating talk.

Appointments Made.

Mrs. Howsmon appointed the following ladies of the different wards to consult with their individual aldermen and councilmen and request their support in the indorsement of a fund to be donated by council for the expenses of the state and national P.-T. A. convention to be held in Atlanta the week of May 2, 1926: Mrs. W. B. DuVall, first ward; Mrs. H. C. McCutcheon, second ward; Mrs. C. J. Foster, third ward; Mrs. H. Rawizer, fourth ward; Mrs. Cliff Barnes, fifth ward; Mrs. Julian Harris, sixth ward; Mrs. W. L. McCauley, seventh ward, Mrs. Roy Collier, eighth ward; Mrs. E. D. Crawford, ninth ward; Mrs. J. L. Jepson, tenth ward; Mrs. Z. V. Peterson, eleventh ward; Mrs. M. G. Parks, twelfth ward, and Mrs. D. C. Shepherd, county commissioners.

Tentative plans were outlined for the convention, the complete program to be announced later. At the January meeting of the council announcement will be made of all chairmen for the convention.

It was decided that the January meeting of the council would be devoted entirely to the work of Parent-Teacher associations omitting the usual program. Mrs. Howsmon announced that Mrs. Fred Wessels, of Savannah, Ga., state P.-T. A. president would arrive in Atlanta the latter part of January to confer with the convention chairmen and complete plans for the meet.

Miss May Walker, illiteracy chairman, reported the following associations that have sent checks for the work of the illiteracy committee: J. C. Harris, $12; Kirkwood, $12; Pryor Street, $3; S. M. Inman, $15; Highland, $30.

Mrs. J. C. Malone, chairman of pre-school age, announced a meeting to be held the second Wednesday in January of all pre-school age chairmen at the White Provision company where lunch would be served and a talk would be given on "Nutrition" by an expert on this subject.

Mrs. Herbert Rawizer, recreation chairman, recommended and urged recreation chairman of each association to purchase the booklet on "Athletic Badge Tests for Boys and Girls," that may be secured from the Superintendent of Documents, government printing office, Washington, D. C., at 5 cents per copy.

Mrs. Louis Elsas, of the Junior Red Cross, spoke of the plans being made by the Junior Red Cross for the Christmas party at Hospital No. 48. All welfare chairmen of the P.-T. A.s were requested to attend the party December 18 at which time the inmates from the Old Ladies' home would also be entertained. Mrs. E. K. Large, council chairman of welfare, requested members of the council to assist in the preparations for the party.

Mrs. Howsmon's Report.

Mrs. Howsmon reported having attended meetings of the following associations during the past month: William A. Bass, Georgia Avenue, Samuel M. Inman, Goldsmith, also attended meetings of the press committee, safety and welfare committees. She reported eight conferences held, including one with the state president, Mrs. Fred Wessels, in regard to plans for national P.-T. A. convention to be held in Atlanta in May. Mrs. Howsmon reported having written eighty letters and made fifty telephone calls.

St. Philip's Church P.-T. A. Meets.

The regular monthly meeting of St. Philip's church school P.-T. A. was called to order at usual hour of 3 o'clock by the president, Mrs. F. A. Shields. Much time was spent in the discussion of new business, also plans for Christmas pageant and Christmas tree.

F. R. Shaw, superintendent outlined briefly the different Christmas entertainments to be given in the church school and the pageant he wished the P.-T. A. to take charge of this year.

Reports were read by chairmen of different committees. Mrs. Hightower, chairman of ways and means committee, gave a good report of the last entertainment given. Mrs. Holland was given a rising vote of thanks for her help in the work to the success of the last entertainment.

It was decided that a committee be appointed each month to take charge of the children during church services so the mothers so handicapped might attend church. Mrs. Howe volunteered to take charge for this month. The rest of the afternoon was given over to Mrs. Arthur Tufts, a very active and interested worker along the line of Sunday school and Sunday school P.-T. A. work. She spoke on the value of P.-T. A. work in the Sunday schools. Her talk was very inspiring and especially valuable to the mothers present.

An invitation was extended by Mrs. Tufts for the association to join the state association. It is hoped that this can be done at an early date.

Peachtree Heights P.-T. A. Daddies' Meeting of Interest

Fathers were honor guests at the December meeting of the Parent-Teacher association of Peachtree Heights school in the school auditorium Tuesday night, Mrs. D. B. Frisbee presiding.

A program, informal entertaining, included several selections by the school mandolin club under the able leadership of Mrs. Clark, music teacher, and E. Rivers. Plans were set for a meeting on Tuesday night, December 8, at 7:30 o'clock, urging all patrons of the school to be present. The present need of the school and the future growth is vitally involved.

J. R. Jameson outlined the delights and joys of the Boy Scout. He received a hearty response, both from the number of boys contemplating membership and from the number of fathers who were present. Morton Rollestone, Alfred Kennedy, J. B. Coppedge and H. M. Root volunteered their service for organizing a scout troop in Peachtree Heights school.

A report of finished work for the first quarter followed the music program.

An art teacher has been added to the school staff, Mrs. J. G. Housmen. A piano has been supplied the kindergarten and cooperation has been extended to the pre-school age circle of mothers, recently organized in this district.

A committee was formed after talks by Alfred Kennedy, Walter Dillard school and the immediate needs to accommodate it. The entire body of guests present offered their assistance to the P.-T. A. and suggested that some weight be brought to bear on the serious problems outling the school's rapid growth.

The Forrest Avenue Parent-Teacher association will sponsor a candy-pulling at the school Wednesday, December 9, at 3 p. m. All mothers are asked to give their cooperation, as it is for the general funds. All children in the neighborhood are cordially invited to come. Tickets 10 cents.

Mrs. Mellichamp Announces Course Of Study.

Mrs. J. C. Mellichamp, citizenship chairman of the P.-T. A. council, announces the beginning of a series of lectures for her committee on the following subjects: The laws governing the body, the city, the state, the United States, and the amendment to all law, the law of love. One of these subjects is to be taken up each month by some speaker especially adapted to the subject. The first, on the laws governing the human body, and the sure punishment where these laws are disobeyed, will be given by Dr. Marion Hull at the Chamber of Commerce Thursday afternoon, December 10, at 3 o'clock. Dr. Hull is especially fine on this subject and the public is invited. All P.-T. A. workers are urged to join the citizenship committee in this course of study on law.

Spring Street P.-T. A. Daddies' Meeting On Wednesday

The Spring St. P.-T. A. "daddies'" meeting will be held in the school auditorium on Wednesday evening, December 9, at 8 o'clock. W. A. Sutton, superintendent of Atlanta public schools, will be the speaker of the evening.

Spring Street P.-T. A. has been working on a membership drive for the past three months, all officers, grade chairmen, co-chairmen and teachers, in the association have been concentrating on getting all mothers and daddies to become members of this organization. By persistent efforts about 75 per cent of the parents have been enrolled and extraordinary endeavors are now being put forth to induce the remaining mothers and daddies to join so that the president may announce 100 per cent membership at the coming meeting.

The Spring Street P.-T. A. is equipping the school with a system of electrical clocks. A master clock, one of the finest in the city, with a mercurial pendulum and weight driven movement, is being placed in Miss Berman's office. This master clock controls 15 secondary clocks, one placed in each school room and auditorium, also one at the main entrance of the building. At the same time the association is installing three gongs, one on each floor of the building, same to be controlled by a push-button system in the principal's office. These clocks are now being placed and will be "on time" to greet the daddies.

Mrs. Joseph A. Mahoney, president of this organization, cordially invites all friends of the school and she hopes that every mother and father will be present at this, the only daddies' meeting of the present school year.

Crew Street P.-T. A. Reports Show Extreme Progress

The P.-T. A. of Crew Street school met November 18 in the auditorium of the school. Mrs. Beall, the president, presided.

The reports from the different committees were given. The treasurer reported a balance of $194.49. Mrs. Levin, chairman of ways and means committee, reported a net gain from the candy pulling of $48.30. Mrs. Moseley, in charge of the kitchen, handed in a report up to date, $68.68 had been turned into the treasury, and a generous number of free lunches had been given to undernourished children. A benefit lunch was planned for the school Tuesday, and the proceeds were to be given to the poor on Thanksgiving.

The association gave $30 toward getting needed kindergarten equipment, and authorized the principal, Mrs. Bloodworth, to purchase a film projector to promote visual education in the school.

Mrs. Bloodworth made a short talk on the condition of the school and its needs, and urged a larger attendance at the picture shows held in the auditorium two afternoons during each month.

Mrs. J. E. Andrews spoke on cooperation and the need to make a concerted warfare on vice in the second ward.

The attendance prizes were won by Miss Jarrell, of low 6, and Miss Dodd of high 1. The door prize was won by Mrs. Wintrauh.

Georgia Ave. P.-T. A. Reports Meeting.

Georgia Avenue P.-T. A. met Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. T. E. Robinson, efficient president, presided. In the absence of the secretary, Mrs. Cundbea, Miss Margaret Kendrick acted as secretary.

Fifty dollars was reported raised by the ways and means chairman, Mrs. Durham, and her committee of able workers gave a candy pulling, ice cream party and a splendid play.

The citizenship chairman, Mrs. B. F. Fontaine, made a splendid report. She reported also for the better films committee chairman, who was unable to attend the meeting. One dollar was voted to pay for the better films bulletin. The association voted to pay the dollar membership for the citizenship chairman to the League of Women Voters.

A motion was made and carried to indorse the bonds for schools of sufficient amount to care for all the needs of the public schools of the city, and also indorsed the movement on foot to prevent the selling of salacious literature in the newsstands and drug stores to children.

The most interesting feature of the meeting was the inspiring talk made by Mrs. George Howsmon, president of Atlanta Parent-Teacher council.

The count of the mothers gave the prize to Miss Mildred Greer, low-one, first grade teacher. The lucky prize was won by Mrs. Bowman.

At the close of the meeting a social hour was enjoyed, refreshments being served by Mrs. E. C. Griggs, chairman of the refreshment committee.

Calhoun P.-T. A. Hears Program.

The meeting of the Calhoun P.-T. A., was called to order by Mrs. Julian Harris, president of the association. A short business meeting followed in which the treasurer's report, Red Cross news and activities of the association were discussed. The meeting was turned over to the children of the kindergarten, fourth and sixth grades.

The kindergarten orchestra played several selections.

A play, "Finding the Thanks in Thanksgiving," was presented by the fourth grade. Little Carrie Mae Johnson gave a delightful little recitation "Thanksgiving." Several beautiful musical selections were rendered by the sixth grade. Little Emily Van Staroven gave an interpretive dance which was enjoyed by all. Martha Girley gave a delightful recitation.

The play, "Miles Standish," was given by the sixth grade.

A prize of $1 was awarded to low sixth grade for having most mothers present.

Church Street P.-T. A. Meets.

Church Street P.-T. A. of East Point held its regular monthly meeting Thursday afternoon, December 3. Mrs. C. W. O'Rear presided at the meeting. The minutes were read by Mrs. Cecil Stanley. Reports were made by the different committees. The class of Miss Irene Singleton won the prize for having the greatest number of mothers present. Plans are being perfected to have a "daddies'" day in February.

East Lake P.-T. A. will meet Friday, December 11, at 3 o'clock, at the school.

The Grant Park P.-T. A. will hold its December meeting Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the school. Mrs. George Howsmon will be the guest of the faculty at its monthly luncheon and afterwards will address the meeting. The primary pupils have arranged a special program. All mothers are urged to come.

The P.-T. A. of State street school will hold its next meeting Friday afternoon, December 18, at 3 o'clock. A cordial invitation is extended to all patrons and friends.

The regular monthly meeting of Ella W. Smillie P.-T. A. Hears Mrs. Rambo.

The outstanding feature of the Ella W. Smillie P.-T. A. meeting held Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock was the wonderful talk made by Mrs. R. K. Rambo on citizenship. It was a most inspiring message to all mothers. Mrs. LaFontaine's pupils, the Houstin twins and Mildred Adams, also one of Smillie's pupils, gave beautiful dances which were enjoyed very much.

The moving picture Thursday, sponsored by Mrs. Hazel Harrison, better films chairman, was quite a success. Miss Smillie reported many clothes given to worthy children. Seventy Red Cross boxes were sent abroad. Fifty dollars' worth of food was sent to the House of the Friendless on Thanksgiving. Forty-four dollars was spent for kindergarten chairs. Five illiteracy bonds will be purchased by the school. The school medicine cheat has been refilled by Mr. Waldon. Mrs. McFarland asked the mothers to save all their old magazines for the hospital.

A delightful social hour was enjoyed after the meeting. Miss Rogers' and Miss Dugas' rooms won the prizes for most mothers.

Daddies' Night At Stewart Ave. P.-T. A.

Daddies' night, in place of the regular November meeting of the Stewart avenue P.-T. A., assembled quite a large number of interested daddies on Tuesday, November 24, at the school.

The president, Mrs. J. L. Jepson, called order with a new gavel presented to the Stewart Avenue P.-T. A. by Mrs. Fred Beam. Mrs. Jepson gave a hearty welcome to the daddies and to the several members of the board of education who were also special guests of the evening.

Mr Brantly gave a short talk in the interest of the city firemen.

On account of the Christmas holidays it was voted to hold the December meeting on the third Tuesday instead of the regular fourth Tuesday.

Mr. Therrell and Mr. Slate, both members of the board, gave interesting and encouraging talks.

Mrs. Couch, better films chairman, asked for clothing that some of the poorer children of the city might be able to attend the children's Christmas matinee.

As this was the first daddies' meeting of the 1925-1926 session, Mrs. Wyke, the principal, introduced the teachers to the daddies, after which the count for the attendance prize was taken.

Whitefoord Ave. P.-T. A. Meets

The Whitefoord Avenue P.-T. A. and pre-school circle held an enthusiastic meeting Tuesday in the school building with a large attendance.

Miss Hattie Rainwater, supervisor of science and nature work in the schools, gave to the mothers in a charming manner a message that will, indeed, be helpful.

Miss Alexander, supervisor of the schools' nursing force, talked interestingly of her work. The association was pleasantly surprised by a visit from Mrs. Howard McCutcheon, president of the James L. Key P.-T. A., whose short talk was enjoyed.

The attendance prizes were won by the fifth grade, Miss Johnson's class, and the ungraded class, Mrs. Coley's class.

After the meeting Mrs. Harry Strickland served tea.

Milton Avenue Community Club.

The Milton Avenue Community club will have its regular monthly meeting December 8, at 7:30 o'clock, in the evening at the school auditorium. All citizens who are interested are requested to be present.

The new officers for the ensuing year are, President, S. G. Davies; first vice president, I. A. Thomas; second vice president, Mrs. Charles Martin; secretary, Mrs. James Haywood; treasurer, Mrs. I. A. Thomas; corresponding secretary, Mrs. B. J Sanders.

Winnona Park P.-T. A. will be held Wednesday, December 9, at 3 o'clock. Miss Dora Barker, of Carnegie library, will talk on "Children's Books."

Circle No. 2 of the S. M. Inman Pre-School Age association will meet Wednesday, December 9, with Mrs. Hipp at 709 North Jackson street.

Fulton County President's Club.

The Fulton County President's club will meet Wednesday, December 9 at 12:30 at Davison-Paxon-Stokes tea room. All presidents are urged to become members and be present Wednesday.

Decatur Junior High P.-T. A. Meets.

Mrs. C. E. Pattillo, president of the Decatur Junior High Parent-Teacher association, called the regular monthly meeting Thursday evening at the school auditorium, in honor of the fathers.

The purpose of this meeting was to create more interest and enthusiasm among the fathers, and to give them an opportunity of seeing first-hand just what had been accomplished. A very interesting program was arranged. The meeting was opened with prayer by Dr. D. L. McGhee.

Mrs. Pattillo introduced Mrs. J. Howell Green, who gave an address of welcome from the P.-T. A., and D. A. Snow, who welcomed the guests of honor in behalf of the faculty.

The speaker of the evening, Mrs. Susanne M. Swing, field secretary of the educational division of the National Safety council, gave a very inlightening address on "Safety of the School Children." In her charming manner, Mrs. Swing convinced the audience that "safety" should be a part of the child's education, that it should be added to the daily school work and a council be put into operation right in the school.

After a brief resume of the association's work by the president, she asked to hear from any of the fathers who felt they had a word of encouragement to the mothers in their P.-T. A. work. Hon. William Schley Howard responded to this call, made a most interesting talk, reminiscing the old school days, when lessons were taught to the tune of hickory stick, drawing marked comparisons.

Al through the evening the Junior High school orchestra rendered delightful music, and displayed excellent talent.

Mrs. P. H. Jeter, well known for her charming and delightful readings, added much to the entertainment of all present.

The meeting adjourned for an informal reception. Delicious refreshments were served during the social hour.

George W. Adair P.-T. A. Meets.

The George W. Adair P.-T. A. held its regular meeting November 18 in school auditorium. C. D. McKinney, of Decatur was the speaker of the afternoon, and gave an interesting talk on "More and Better Schools."

Miss Nolan, principal, made a plea for a 100 per cent perfect teeth school. Miss Nolan stated "that in many instances classes were held back by two or three children."

Mrs. Charles Haynes, ways and means chairman, reported a substantial sum from recent cake sale and announced a bazar to be held in school

KING ON MAIN STREET STARS ADOLPH MENJOU

Howard Picture Also Features Greta Nissen and Bessie Love.

Adolphe Menjou, that delightfully clever portrayer of suave, sophisticated light comedy roles, comes to the Howard theater this week as the star of "The King on Main Street," written for the screen by Douglas Doty from Leo Ditrichstein's New York stage hit, "The King." Greta Nissen and Bessie Love are featured opposite the star.

The story opens with Menjou, as the king of Molvania, a mythical European kingdom, reviewing a long line of cavalry from a gorgeously draped dias. The beauty of this scene is enhanced by the use of color photography. The action indicates that the king is terribly bored with everything that's going on.

In one of the royal apartments a short time later, Menjou's minister of finance and other statesmen are reminding him that the country is in great need of a large loan. The only way it can be obtained is either through a marriage with the house of Slavonia or a trip to America.

The king decides on America, with a visit to Paris as a side issue. The story then goes on to show in a humorous, entertaining way just what happens when the philandering king meets the most famous dancer in the French capital and then, in America, falls in love with a young American girl, only to be forced to return to his own country without her.

Briefly, this is an outline of the story but it fails to tell of the many amusing incidents that crop up during the king's sojourn in the United States. One of these shows the king at Coney Island and chummy with a typical American boy, who takes him about the famous amusement resort and initiates him into the gentle art of eating "hot dogs" and playing a harmonica.

Greta Nissen was never more beautiful than she is in this picture and Bessie Love is charming. Incidentally, Bessie gives an exhibition of the "Charleston" that marks her as a decidedly graceful dancer.

Menjou never had a role that gave him better opportunity for the display of those talents which have made him one of the most popular of screen stars. He makes a jovial monarch, one who has no difficulty in making friends wherever he goes.

"The King on Main Street" is the culmination of a dream of years of both Monta Bell, who directed the picture, and the star. It is the perfect role for Menjou. He has the temperament, the air of sophistication, the finished type of acting for it. He had his heart set upon making this one of his greatest efforts, and, according to all advance reports, he has more than succeeded.

Cameo Theater.

(The Unholy Three.)

"Way Down East" Monday and Tuesday, "Pretty Ladies Wednesday and Thursday, "The Unholy Three" Friday and Saturday make up the Cameo's program for this week in its policy of returning the "big" ones for a second showing.

One of the main reasons why D. W. Griffith is regarded as the leading producer of big pictures is his success of "Way Down East." Just as he gave the south "The Birth of a Nation" so has he given the New England section "Way Down East," and the remarkable feature is that both pictures have been received enthusiastically all over the whole country. The players who made this picture famous have since seen their names adopted as household favorites. Lillian Gish and Richard Barthelmess head the sterling cast.

"Pretty Ladies," coming on Wednesday and Thursday, features Zazu Pitts, Tom Moore and Ann Pennington.

What promises to be the most unusual mystery drama ever filmed is "The Unholy Three," the Friday and Saturday feature. It deals with the criminal adventures of a trio of freaks recruited from a dime museum.

"The Iron Horse," Wm. Fox Masterpiece, Loew's Feature Film

"The Iron Horse," one of the notable sensations of the season, which has been characterized as one of the greatest motion pictures of all time, will come to Loew's Grand theater this week.

In the presentation of "The Iron Horse," William Fox gives to the screen a masterful production of a virile subject, mammoth in its compelling interest, and handled in such a manner that it soars to the highest pinnacle of cinema art.

Not a soul within reasonable distance of this theater or any theater so fortunate as to play this wonder film should fail to see it, for it will leave an unforgettable impression.

From the very first instant it appears on the screen you see that great character of a great nation, Abe Lincoln, loved by the entire world in memory, giving encouragement to the ambition of David Brandon, Sr., the surveyor who had the heroism to pioneer a pathway through the wilderness of our great frontiers, giving his life in the attempt. That great thought later becoming action when General Dodge put these thoughts into a vibrant pulsating reality by President Lincoln signing that immortal industrial document, the authority for the Union Pacific to wend its way westward and the Central Pacific railroad to forge to the east, where they finally welded together, completing the greatest commercial highway known to humanity.

Words fall away when one attempts to do justice to these red-blooded pages of history being unfolded before your very eyes as you sit watching these warriors of pence time engaging in this pretentious battle to lay a pathway of steel across our continent, menaced by the hostile Indians, constantly engaged in death battles to permit of continued work, living on the product of this barren wilderness for bodily nourishment.

The natural attractiveness of this picture is so inspiring, one hardly realizes the love romance spending its way, it seems so much a part of it all.

Still the compelling manner displayed by that young player, George O'Brien, as Dave Brandon, the hero, from the softer moments of his love-making to the big physical encounters with the dishonesty of those attempting to frustrate and divert the route of the great iron horse, one sees that this likable lad with his infectious Celtic smile can go into action quite as easily as he smiles.

The character of Corporal Casey, played by J. Farrell MacDonald, provides about the best alibi to break forth in hilarious mirth one might meet with for many a day. In fact, there is not a weak spot in the entire cast and the subtle artistry of John Ford, director of this production, easily places another name alongside the greatest of the great.

Lest we forget, the innumerable outdoor views given by the camera's telling accuracy are such that one immediately recalls those art creations of the great Fred Remington, who alone knew how to preserve the scenes of America's west, and it is a pity the camera was compelled to withhold the wonderful colors this great part of the country is natural heir to.

William A. Seiter is choosing his cast for Laura La Plante's next starring vehicle, "Doubling for Lora," by Peggy Gaddis. Miss La Plante has been enjoying a two-weeks' vacation, and has been spending it in Los Angeles, buying clothes.

THE GOLDEN PRINCESS PHOTOPLAY AT RIALTO

Oldest and newest stars feature the screen program at the Rialto theater this week.

Betty Bronson, who had movie fame literally thrust upon her, is starred by Paramount in Bret Harte's famous story, "The Golden Princess," and is supported by Neil Hamilton, Rockliffe Fellowes, Phyllis Haver, and others.

Charlie Chaplin—none other—is the other star. A showing of his famous comedy, "A Dog's Life," will be stressed on the Rialto theater.

Whitney Hubner will direct a snappy musical program, and Pathe News will be shown, changing on Thursday.

The true story of the tremendous California gold rush of 1849 is vividly portrayed in Betty Bronson's initial starring vehicle for Paramount, "The Golden Princess," which Clarence Badger directed from Frances Agnew's adaptation of one of Bret Harte's famous stories.

This spectacular melo-romance reveals with almost ruthless accuracy the unbelievable hardships, the heartbreaking disappointments and the poignant sufferings encountered by those early prospectors and their families, who started on a mad stampede to the far west when the cry of "Gold!" echoed throughout the country.

To get the proper historical atmosphere and to obtain authentic backgrounds for this story, which is said to be based largely upon fact, the entire Paramount company, numbering hundreds of players, journeyed high up into the Sierra Nevada mountains of California, in the heart of the gold country. And in reproducing those memorable days of '49, deserted mining camps were rebuilt, old [illegible] properties were resurrected, and half a hundred veteran prospectors re-enacted scenes from their own lives.

Around these picturesque and never-to-be-forgotten events is woven a tender, wistful romance whose wholesomeness and charm are all the more emphasized by contrast with the rough setting against which it develops. Betty Bronson has the lovable role of an orphaned mountain girl, raised by a Spanish padre at an Indian settlement, who comes to the mining camps in search of her long-lost father. Here she finds love and gold, fights through stirring adventures, and comes out with flying colors.

Neil Hamilton is the two-fisted chap who keeps a protecting eye on Betty and wins her as a reward; Rockliffe Fellowes proves an admirable choice as a bandit, and Phyllis Haver acquits herself with distinction.

METROPOLITAN OFFERS "KEEPER OF THE BEES"

Gene Stratton Porter's Latest Novel of McCall's Magazine Fame.

It would have taken bad direction and a thoroughly inadequate cast to have spoiled "The Keeper of the Bees," Gene Stratton-Porter's latest novel which appeared postumously in McCall's Magazine, and which will be shown this week at the Metropolitan theater. In fact, it would have been almost impossible to ruin this story for the millions of readers who have branded the late Mrs. Porter as the most popular novelist of the day.

And when it is recorded that J. Leo Meehan, who directed "The Girl of the Limberlost," has surpassed even that high standard, it is obvious that "The Keeper of the Bees" is destined to be one of the year's really big pictures, as it was heralded to be. Nothing has so caught the spirit and charm of an original as this production. On the stage are Bert Rome and Henry Dunn's harmony singers and fun makers from the Earl Carroll's Famous varieties.

The "Keeper of the Bees" has an excellent cast which might be said to be "headed" by little Gene Stratton Monroe, eleven year old granddaughter of Mrs. Porter. It is extremely interesting to note that the part of the "Little Scout," which she enacts so ably, was written around this delightfully tomboyish little girl; and it is particularly entertaining for the realists to be able to compare their mental pictures of what the "Little Scout" should look like with what she actually did—and does—look like. It is indeed a misfortune for film fans that Miss Monroe is endowed with this world's goods and that as the granddaughter of a famous author she will probably not appear again in the films; for there is a big future for this surprising youngster. She should be the feminine Jackie Coogan.

The story, generally accepted as the greatest of Mrs. Porter's many illustrious novels, deals with the wife of a young world war veteran, who has been shunted from one government hospital to another in a vain endeavor to effect a cure. Told that he has only a year at most to live, he walks bravely out of the Arrowhead Spring hospital and directs his faltering step toward the blue Pacific. He wants at least to reach the sea before he dies. But in a little vine-clad cottage at the head of the great cliffs that front the ocean he finds "The Keeper of the Bees," becomes a Bee Master himself, and undergoes many thrilling experiences, not the least of which is a marriage to an unknown "Storm Girl" who flashes into his life for a brief hour and departs—for the time—as hastily as she has come.

Leide's orchestra offers an overture of par excellence. On the program is a comedy and Fox News.

Coming to the Howard.

"That Royle Girl." D. W. Griffith's first Paramount picture, will be shown at the Howard soon. It is a picturization of one of the most popular stories recently appearing in a well known periodical and features Carol Dempster, James Kirkwood, W. C. Fields and Harrison Ford.

There is plenty of romance, drama, comedy and action in this photoplay. It shows Griffith, the director, at his best.

Theatre Talk

CONDUCTED by LORENZO JONES JR.

'The Student Prince' Held Another Week At Atlanta Theater

Tomorrow (Monday) night the sensational musical play, "The Student Prince," which has broken all records for attendance at the Atlanta theater, will begin the second and positively last week of its local engagement. That the play was held over for the current week was due only to the urgent request of thousands that were unable to see this marvelous operetta the past week. Never in the history of the Atlanta theater have audiences so applauded a company as did the representative capacity houses that last week viewed and enjoyed the performance of "The Student Prince." Sigmund Romberg's melodies were repeatedly encored, particularly "Golden Days," "The Drinking Song" and the plaintive haunting theme song, "Deep In My Heart, Dear." There are 23 beautiful songs in "The Student Prince" and they are sung by a most excellent cast, in fact the best that has been seen in Atlanta for many a moon. "The Student Prince" is something every playgoer should see. No matter what one's excuse for going to a theater is, here is a musical production that combines harmony, beauty, excellent dancing and comedy within a space of three hours and goes to form the greatest operetta of our day. The company presenting "The Student Prince" is of the highest order. In fact, the entire organization is of a caliber seldom to be found on tour. Twenty-three delightful music numbers comprise the score, and much is added to their beauty by the splendid orchestra carried by the company. All in all "The Student Prince" is a rare treat for music lovers, and no one should fail to see and hear it at one of the performances during the coming week.

MYSTERIOUS "DANTE" COMING TO ATLANTA

Dante, famous European conjurer and wonder-worker who will appear at the Atlanta theater for one week beginning Monday, December 14, is the son of an army officer who was stationed in India for a great many years. The unusual psychic powers and magical talents which he displayed as a youth of 14 attracted the attention of an old Hindu mystic and initiate, who induced him to join a band of Mahatma, who made their headquarters in the fastnesses of the Himalaya mountains. One day while watching the boy perform one of his occult illusions the old Hindu said, "It is for you to go to the west and show the great peoples there the power of mind and soul over the body. Go, and you will instruct and enthrall. Go, and you will be acclaimed as one of the world's great magicians." Featured in his performance are such incomparable mysteries and illusions as "The Ghost Woman," psychic phenomenon of the age. You may ask her any question. She is said to be unsurpassed as an exponent of mental telepathy. Also Alvin's six musical wizards, the mysterious Chinese fountain, creation, the phantom woman, the miracle, the great East Indian rope trick, vivisection, broadcasting a woman, and the spirit cabinet. In booking Dante for this pre-holiday week, the management of the Atlanta theater prevailed upon him to arrange a special scale of prices for the week that would fittingly usher in the holiday season. At the night performances the highest price to be charged will be $1, while at the matinees adult tickets will be 50 cents and children 25 cents. Dante undoubtedly will furnish the greatest entertainment at the prices in the history of the theater. Mail orders are now being received. The box office sale of seats will start on Thursday morning.

JACK HENRY AND CO. HEADS KEITH'S BILL

A musical number embodying those syncopated essentials that make for fun and entertainment will be offered patrons of Keith's Forsyth theater the first three days of this week by Jack Henry and a company of excellent entertainers as the headlining feature.

Assisting Mr. Henry in the offering are such well-known entertainers at Evelyn Vee, Dudley Farnsworth and the Gautier sisters. The skit is presented by George Choos, who has produced a number of successful vaudeville turns.

It is a timely musical trifle with musical decorations by Walter L. Rosemont.

Another splendid act on the program for the first part of the week will be the act of James Mullen and Ann Frances company who offer "My Hero." Here is a three-cornered farce with songs that has to do with a corporal, a nurse and a recruit.

Ed Levan and Joe Doris are called "Dispensers of Joy and Cheer." The creed of these clever comedians it let lingpiness hap and their work is to project happiness along its merry way.

George De Alma who is known throughout the vaudeville world as the "Caruso of the Banjo," strums a jig and plays classical music equally well. He keeps things keyed to a high degree of entertainment with his stringed instrument.

Hashi and Osai, "Japanese Wonder Workers," conclude the program in a sensational and colorful number.

A Pathe newsreel and an Aesop's Fables also are features.

Alec B. Francis.

Alec B. Francis concedes much to the law of reciprocity, sure to be operative on a motion picture set, when the members of a cast work as a unit and there is a constant give and take. Mr. Francis has many delightful things to say of the inspirational qualities of certain noted ones with whom he has been associated that added to his own finesse in important climatic scenes. Some time or other he has supported all of filmdom's favorite stars on various programs and should he open his memory book and draw on his power of analysis, he could offer some valuable impressions of different luminaries. And they are all his friends. Perhaps he has been called to an engagement, a stranger. But his interest and zeal surmount the newness of an association and the feeling of comradeship enters. He has his favorite engagements, to be sure, but each actor, he says, has given him valuable things to think about.

West End Theater.

(Reginald Denny.)

With a program that exceeds anything yet attempted at the West End theater, Atlanta's newest and most palatial little movie house, this week's attendance promises to eclipse all previous records since the openi. earlier in the fall, according to Manager Alpha Fowler. Four real big screen offerings are scheduled for the theater this week, beginning with "California Straight Ahead" and ending the week with "The Abandon Bandit."

Prior to the opening of the West End theater Manager Fowler assured movie fans of West End and the city that only the better pictures would be procured for his new playhouse. A glance over the coming week's program attests to his efforts to live up to that promise. On Monday and Tuesday Reginald Denny, screen idol of millions of fans, will be seen in "California Straight Ahead," and all the unusual things one might encounter on a trans-continental trip are included. Denny, in the role of rejected suitor, is trying to "forget" the girl in the case. Its's a tangle that thrills every emotion and a production second to none in lavishness and beauty.

This stirring offering will be presented the first two days of the week and according to all advance claims the picture should jam the house at every show.

On Wednesday Claire Windsor, scintillating movie star, will appear in "The Dixie Handicap." Too much cannot be said about the exquisite settings and the colorful playing which went into the making of this refreshing type of movie. Miss Windsor, strikingly beautiful, is in the leading feminine role and all the thrills of the "Sport of Kings" go to make up the production.

On Thursday and Friday the West End theater will offer "The Signal Tower," a gripping screen plot which is expected to attract the greatest crowds of the week. It would require too much space to set out its plot, its characters, its players. For Saturday the management of the new theater has booked "The Abandon Bandit," with Fred Thompson in the lead. The offering contains all the elements of thrill and daring and romance that the title suggests, with master artists of the screen vieing with each other throughout.

As a whole, the week's program offers that balance and variety which the ardent and appreciative movie fan loves and will be found fully in keeping with the high caliber of entertainment which Manager Fowler has promised patrons of his newest playhouse.

Lewis Stone, who is playing one of the featured roles in "Too Much Money," now in production in New York, has never been outside the boundaries of the United States, except for one brief trip to Mexico.

PRETTY GIRLS STAR IN LINDSEY'S REVUE

Loew's Big Vaudeville Program This Week Is All Stars.

Loew's Grand theater this week will present a strong vaudeville bill which contains several unusually popular acts among them being the headline attraction, Earl Lindsey's Revue.

Pretty girls and pretty costumes are outstanding features of this production which comes here direct from successful engagements in the large vaudeville houses of the east.

In the cast are Thomas Monahan, the Phelps Twins, Virginia Franck, Marjorie Lane, Dorothy Markey, Adeline Thom, Helen Barnum and Mary Lee Reed. A special musical score and special dances will be featured.

Lew Cooper, "A Knight in the Temple of Fun," a sterling entertainer of the old school, will bring his famous line of songs and stories. Lew Cooper is one of the ablest burnt cork comedians on the stage and he has established a wide departure in his fun making methods from most of his conferres in this line of work.

Another comedy number with a touch of pathos in it will be "Huckleberry Finn," a character impression presented by Charles and Grace Keating. A vivid portrait of Mark Twain's famous character is furnished in this turn. Dora Maughan in a comedy skit "The Barrymores and Me" has a clever vehicle with vast un potentialities. It was written for Miss Maughan by Dave Stamper, noted song writer, and Harry Ruskin. Several pretty songs are introduced with Murray Pullman at the piano.

Sensational acrobatic feats will be offered by the Turner Brothers in "Variety Capers." A lot of comedy is injected in the act of the brothers whose trick falls are extremely funny.

The photoplay attraction is "The Iron Horse," the screen epic of all time. Three years of toil in Nevada, South Dakota and California were required to complete the screen visualization, George O'Brien and Madge Bellamy play the leads, with a huge supporting cast of thousands of troops, Indians, Chinese and more than 2,000 horses, 1,500 buffaloes and 10,000 Texas steers.

Charley Chase, Roach star, recommends squash as the best sport he knows to tune up the writing "machinery." In preparing his stories, when he is stuck for a detail, he relies on the squash court for a game or two.

Alamo No. 2.

(Bebe Daniels.)

Bebe Daniels comes to the screen at the Alamo No. 2 theater on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday as "Wild, Wild Susan," a girl who can't live without excitement. Its characteristics are comedy, speed, romance, pep, thrills and general fast-moving entertainment.

Rod La Roque has a featured role opposite the star and Helen Holcombe, whom Ernst Lubitsch, director of "Passion," "The Marriage Circle," etc., called "the girl with the Mona Lisa smile," has a prominent part in the supporting cast.

One gets a pretty good idea of the type of picture "Wild, Wild Susan" is from the very first scenes. A fire engine shoots around a corner blowing and clanging for all it's worth. Everything gives way except a sporty racing car. It's Bebe! Even pacing fire engines is too tame for this up and going metropolitan miss who, in the ensuing scenes, takes to trailing shoplifters and bond thieves after reading a correspondence school book on detective work.

A New Century comedy "Scandal Hunters," will be shown on the same program.

If you really want me to bring joy and happiness into your home, The Atlanta Constitution makes it easy for you to secure me FREE for only a few moments of your time. Take advantage of its great offer at once. Then you will have me all your own. Won't we then have lots of fun? I'm all dressed up in my brand-new clothes, just waiting for you."

"Carrie Joy"

Walks, talks, sleeps and she rolls her eyes. Her clothes are beautiful, but you can take them off and make new ones whenever you like.

She Is 19 Inches Tall
And a Real Beauty

A Suggestion to Mother, Father, Aunts and Uncles

This is your opportunity to get a beautiful life-size baby-doll, 19 inches tall, for Christmas for the little daughter or niece. The doll can be had immediately after orders have been verified and accepted.

This new, rolling-eye beauty—"the doll supreme" can easily be yours FREE for just securing 2 new subscribers to THE DAILY AND SUNDAY CONSTITUTION, Atlanta's most popular home newspaper.

Here Are the Terms of the Offer READ CAREFULLY!

Two new subscriptions to the daily and Sunday Constitution are required, each for a term of six months, subscribers to pay the carrier at the rate of 20c a week, or 90c a month.

This applies to the city of Atlanta and nearby suburbs. For other points in Georgia and adjoining states where we have a carrier delivery service, three subscriptions are required. The extra subscription for contestants out of town is required in order to defray expense of packing and delivery of the doll to the contestant.

We investigate the validity of the order, and the subscriber's responsibility and reserve the right to accept or reject any subscription order at our option for the city and suburbs of Atlanta, and the local dealer outside of Atlanta will exercise the same right.

Anyone may earn a "Carrie Joy" doll. The offer is open to boys, girls, men and women of all ages. Boys and girls who live in other towns and cities where the daily and Sunday Constitution is sold and delivered by local news dealers are eligible.

Clip the coupon blank below and bring or mail to The Atlanta Constitution, circulation department, Atlanta. A subscription book with all the necessary instructions for securing the subscriptions will be delivered to those who present the enrollment blank in person.

Those sending the enrollment blank by mail to The Constitution will receive the subscription book and necessary instructions by return mail. CUT OUT BLANK AND BRING OR MAIL TODAY.

BOYS!

The Atlanta Constitution has a few Constitution "EXPRESS WAGONS" on hand. Any boy who will secure three new six months' subscriptions, acceptable to The Constitution, or its out-of-town dealer, after verifying, can have one of these wagons.
The wagon will be delivered at The Constitution office to city contestants, and sent by express, charges collect, to out-of-town contestants.

R. F. D. Residents

Cut out the coupon, sending to The Constitution with your route number, and you will receive by return mail an offer that will enable you to win "Carrie Joy."

OUR MERCIFUL FATHER:—I will arise and go to my father and . . . say, Father, I have sinned against heaven, and in thy sight; I am no more worthy to be called thy son: . . . And he arose and came to his father. But while he was yet afar off, his father saw him, and ran, and fell on his neck and kissed him. Luke 15:18, 19, 20.

PRAYER:—Our Father, we thank thee that thou art ever true to thy Covenant Promise to receive the contrite sinner who pleads the merits of the Redeemer. We confess our guilt, pray thy pardoning grace and ask that thy Seal may be set upon us, for Jesus' sake.

CONGRESS—TOMORROW.

Farmers suffer more from demagogues than any other class of people. They are to be pitied for the intense "interest" that politicians take in their welfare. They are subjected to the ills of legislative inexperience as to actual farm problems, for those who go to congress even from agricultural districts are usually farmers by proxy, or "farmers" because somewhere back among their ancestors there were some farmers.

Legislative representatives of farm districts, who depend upon the rural vote, too often pile bill upon bill seeking to extend undue credit, fix prices, legislate relief, provide federal marketing agencies, and a hundred other things that strike at healthy competition, tear down all the laws of economics, and undermine conservative government.

Most of the radicalism of the country was given birth by politicians in rural communities, cradled in unrest, and in wild, visionary schemes to "help" the farmers without the farmers being required to help themselves.

When the 69th congress convenes tomorrow the hoppers will be full of farm "relief" bills, most of them either seeking to get them further in debt, without providing any sane methods for paying the debts, or otherwise stultifying their independence with federal yokes of one sort and another.

Every community, whether in the heart of a city's congestion, or a factory village, or a mining camp, is directly concerned in the welfare of agriculture. Every person should readily admit the basic position of the farm in the nation's economic status. Therefore, it is time, assuredly, to stop "playing politics" with farm problems.

The members of congress who are not demagogues—and there are many—ought to put an end once for all time to the plague that has cost the farmer much—the "interest" of the politician who has his eye fixed only upon the ballot box and not upon the actual welfare of the farmer as a factor in the life of the nation.

SPAIN'S NEW REGIME.

Spain has discarded its military government and returned to a strictly civil government—more so than heretofore, for in the new cabinet every suggestion of militarism has been eliminated.

And Spain, despite the fact that Alfonso still holds to his crown, is almost as pronouncedly democratic as any of the European republics.

Fact is, most of the thrones in Europe today are empty. Some of the countries—as Spain, for instance—have royalties that continue to play their little games with apparently as much seriousness as of old, but their responsibilities usually begin and end with their displays.

To illustrate, Austria has no throne and Hungary has an empty one. The hopes of a dozen European houses are pinned upon Hungary's empty throne. Some have abdicated their "rights," while jealousies and intrigues have kept other contenders in the limelight. All nonsense!

Thrones, since the world war, are playthings.

Governments today are of and for the people, even though a throne is maintained as a show place, and a king or a queen as a tradition.

The government of England is soundly democratic. King George is the most orthodox of democrats. So is the government of Belgium. The plainest, most liberal democrat in continental Europe is King Albert. Even Alfonso—though he comes from a long line of old-school monarchs—is thoroughly democratic. It wouldn't be of any particular concern if he wasn't. The people of Spain make the laws, and now—with the voluntary retirement of a military regime—the people will both make and enforce the laws and administer the government.

Democracy is on the throne in the world today.

THE PEOPLE FAVOR IT.

Recent surveys made to ascertain public thought as to America's entry into the world court show that the people are overwhelmingly in favor of the proposal, as originally made by President Harding and Secretary Hughes, and subsequently supported by President Coolidge.

A symposium has just been made public by the American Foundation maintaining the American peace award, which was established by Edward W. Bok of Philadelphia, to administer his $100,000 peace prize. A foreword to the list of statements of opinion on American entrance into the court reads:

"Not more than one in ten in a random selection of leading citizens oppose the adherence of the United States to the world court. Those who have written the American Foundation their views favoring or opposing the court represent all political parties and many diverse professional and business interests.

"The sum of the inquiry results in a conviction that President Coolidge will have thoroughgoing popular support in his announced intention to urge senate action on the adherence to the court on the Harding-Hughes-Coolidge terms at the coming session. The senate debates on the court are scheduled to begin on December 17, next."

And yet, while popular support of the court proposal may be ten to one, as claimed—and it seems to be conservative—it is not improbable that another long-drawn-out fight in the senate may follow the introduction of the resolution, and that the date agreed upon for a vote—December 17—may be deferred. Such a situation can be precipitated by the radical group in the senate—some of whom were of the group of irreconcilables and obstructionists who defeated the peace treaty's ratification in 1920, and precipitated a commodity depression in this country that brought ten million farmers to their knees. It is entirely possible under the archaic senate rules against which Vice President Dawes has waged such a relentless but fruitless fight.

The people of America are outstanding and outspoken for the world court, the entrance into which is the least this country can do in its world duty following a war in which it participated; and the least this nation can do in order to conserve the best human and economic interests of all the people. It is hoped there is sufficient virility in the United States senate that may be mobilized against a little organized group that would put prejudices above duty, to override its designs.

RAILROADS COOPERATE.

The several Georgia railroads, in agreeing to haul free, or at half-rates, carloads of grain from south Georgia loading points to distributing points in the north Georgia drouth area, have proffered a most helpful service to the farmers of both sections of the state.

Of course, such service applies only to relief shipments, but it enables the stricken farmers of the drouth belt, who must buy, or be provided, until the next harvest, or until the winter cover crops come in, with grain from the full barns of sections that have plenty of grain, but poor markets on account of the high intra-state freight rates.

The fact is, with the regular tariff charged, it would be cheaper to get a carload of corn into Athens from Chicago than from Tifton or Valdosta or Bainbridge.

Therefore, unless the railroads had agreed to intra-state reductions, the relief corn would very largely have to come from the central west.

The agreements reached, at conferences of railroad representatives with members of the public service commission, provide free transportation of donated grain, and half rates on grain otherwise provided in the relief work.

The railroads are to be highly commended for entering this liberality into the great work of helping those who need help.

The organization of the drouth relief is most perfect, and the cooperation of north and south Georgia is most encouraging and strengthening.

The counties that felt the drouth most are in no way suffering now as a whole.

There are here and there instances of distress, and such instances are being systematically reached. But every county in the drouth belt is cheerful. The cooperation is inspiring and prophetic. The farmers are going ahead with their winter's work. There will be no such thing as human suffering contrary to unfortunate reports to that end.

Those Georgia farmers who are so abundantly supplied with grain are merely helping those who are not—some with outright contributions, and others by sharing their supplies.

South Georgia, east, west and central, and the great area of middle Georgia, in all fully 130 counties, have had abundant harvests. The day is one of almost unprecedented farm prosperity. In the other 30 counties there is no widespread distress—simply crop shortages of home supplies that must be taken care of until another harvest season arrives.

THE GHOST OF LODGE.

The old obstructionists' tactics to kill the world court proposal by a confusing substitute have been revived by Representative Tinkham, of Boston.

His plan for a "court" attached to The Hague, of our own making, and without any international standing or significance, is merely a resurrection of "the Lodge plan," and this resurrection has also been engineered by a congressional colleague and neighbor who followed the dead Massachusetts statesman in attempting to gag the south with a force bill.

Tinkham's principal concern in congress has been the cutting down of southern representation on the old Lodge cry of disfranchisement. His failure to make any progress is the inherent fairness of the average man, whatever may be the color of his eyes, or the complexion of his politics.

The scheme of Representative Tinkham to appease the overwhelming numbers who favor the principles of a world court but are unfamiliar with international affairs, is but another attempt to throw up a smoke screen so that the obstructionists may hide their actual purposes to defeat the whole proposal.

The charge he makes that entry into the world court means a "clandestine entry" into the League of Nations is an imputation upon the honor of President Coolidge, former Secretary Hughes, and others, whose views on both have been well defined. To illustrate, however, that the old plan of warfare is to be revised one needs but to read the authorized interviews, first with Tinkham, and then followed closely by that of Senator Borah, who will lead, as chairman of the foreign relations committee, the opposition in the senate. Collusion is obvious.

While Henry Cabot Lodge is dead his ghost still stalks in capitol halls. Clothed in robes of hate, the Tinkham plan for a surrogate court is but another voice from the tomb.

AIR BOARD'S REPORT.

The official report of the aircraft board, appointed by President Coolidge as a fact-finding commission, clothed also with instructions to submit recommendations, seems to have traced the viewpoint of the army and navy chiefs as completely as if it had been a voice from the big building that overlooks Lafayette park from the upper end of the avenue. It did not add to the strength of the report that the board took occasion, during the progress of the Mitchell court-martial trial, to severely criticise, condemn and otherwise attack the defendant in the trial. Under the circumstances it was untimely—and assuredly irrelevant and therefore punitive.

The opposition it expressed to unification of the air service, without any facts or arguments, leaving the conclusions as mere opinions, will not be satisfactory to the American people, who are tired—to disgust—of the jealousies, incriminations, and destructive lack of coordination between the two branches. If there is good argument for maintaining the army and navy as separate units of defense controlling land and sea forces respectively, then the same argument seems to make it necessary that air forces shall be unified into a separate unit, without conflicts, overlapping and destructive and treacherous cross-currents, as at present.

Nor will the American people ever be satisfied until the arms of the national defense are divorced from personal and factional politics, as at present—and this cannot be accomplished until all units of the national defense are coordinated under one general department, with only one, instead of two cabinet heads.

In no two branches of government are there so many different kinds of politics, so much intrigue, so little harmony, as in the army and navy.

The uniforms of authority are in continual clash, and even the social and private affairs of officials are disgustingly made to figure in the ever-raging differences.

The president's board seems to think that everything is well, despite the controlling fact that in no branch of government is harmony and coordination so essential as in that charged with the armed defense of the country's flag.

Perhaps no better illustration of the nature of the report may be found than in the very text of the same in its reference to the serious and defensible thought that the next war—if there shall be a "next war"—may be decided in the air. It remarks, to quote its own words, that "the next war may well start in the air but in all probability it will wind up, as the last war did, in the mud."

Just what the board meant is not clear, unless another side thrust at Colonel Mitchell—but the public will be apt to appraise the work of the president's com[illegible] which did not disclose one new [illegible] potent factor, in the light of that flippant paragraph.

While the board finds for "extension," it is not probable there can be any real extension until there is some real harmony.

QUICKENED INDUSTRY.

The elimination of wastes in industry, the taking up of lost motion, and the steaming up of energy, have been the especial functions of the department of commerce since Secretary Hoover took charge in March, 1921. The record made has been phenomenal. In the report just made by the secretary the story is modestly but irrefutably told, not in the sense of glorifying the man in charge of the department, but of acquainting the people conservatively with its activities.

From the report it is ascertained that more than 900 group conferences have been held, while today there are over 200 committees at work on various phases of the program. So far-reaching have been the ramifications of the movement that its scope can only be suggested by pointing to a few of its manifestations. Thus we find the railroads of the country responding by increasing their average freight train load from 653 tons to 731 tons and by speeding up the daily movement of their freight cars from 22.4 miles to 26.9 miles a day; we find the development of such a great water-power resource as the Colorado river, long neglected because of conflicting state opinion on water rights, on the way to realization; we find that the amount of coal required to produce a kilowatt-hour of electrical energy has been reduced from 3.2 pounds to 2.2 pounds, with a resultant saving of approximately 10,000,000 tons of coal a year; we find a new interest on the part of business men in the study of "business cycles," with a consequent increase in the regularity of employment; we find a noticeable tendency toward the elimination of "seasonal" influences in such basic industries as coal mining and building; we find savings of from 10 to 20 per cent in some instances in the cost of construction of homes, due to standardization of building codes; we find economies being effected at an estimated annual rate of $200,000,000 in the lumber industry through simplification of sizes and shapes of lumber, and we find intensive studies being undertaken to solve the problem of street and highway travel, not alone to prevent the wastage of human life, but to relieve a traffic congestion which it is estimated is costing the country billions each year.

The department has not only "made good" but it has given to industry in this country a quicker step, a safer policy, a more profitable plan of operation. All the while the department has encouraged the markets abroad, and assisted distribution to a marked extent. It has fortunately steered clear of politics—the real cause of its remarkable record.

FOR SUFFERING JEWS.

Leaders among the Jews from the Carolinas, Georgia, Florida, Tennessee, Louisiana, and other sections, will hold a Georgia state conference in Atlanta, at the Biltmore, today, to inaugurate a vigorous campaign in the interest of the $15,000,000 United Jewish campaign for reconstructive relief of Jews in foreign lands who have not yet recovered from the after-effects of the war.

The attendance will be large and representative, and the enthusiasm for this stirring cause will be quickened to intensity, for the suffering in some sections of Georgia, especially among refugees, is heartrending, involving tens of thousands of helpless widows and orphans, and tens of thousands of adults who do not ask or seek charity, but an opportunity, a chance, to help themselves.

The Southern Jews have been, and are, in the forefront of every humanitarian effort undertaken by their co-religionists in this country—nor are their benevolences confined to the demands of co-religionists. Every worthy appeal receives from them hearty responses, and America had no more patriotic group of citizens during the war, on the battle front, in the liberty loan drives, in recreational activities—in every enterprise to help win the fight for democracy—than the Jewish group.

The help in this great call of today will not come exclusively from Jews. It should not—and yet the call is directed to those of that faith. It is an appeal that touches every human heart.

Since the war the unleashing of race hatreds has caused more sufferings—heartless and inexcusable, even as an aftermath of war, most of it—among the Jewish races, according to their numbers, than among any others.

The feature that has been most deplorable has been the robbing them of the opportunities for self-support. This they seek—a living chance to live. They deserve these opportunities, and they must have them.

The fund that is being raised is for that purpose—to finance credits, to repatriate refugees, to establish vocational schools, to shelter the homeless, and to carry succor to the starving and health to the sick.

Could there be greater, more appealing humanitarian services?

The south will respond. Georgia will respond. The state's quota is only $200,000. It will be promptly met—perhaps oversubscribed. It shoud be.

AT TWILIGHT WINDOWS

(A Christmas Reverie)

BY FRANK L. STANTON

I.

The little one there, of the gold-brightened hair
(Like mine, in the long ago!)
Says: "It's just like the Spring,
When the birds used to sing,
And we want the Old Man of the Snow!
The Old Man that dresses the trees all in white
While we're dreaming at night.

II.

"O he comes when we're sleeping the darkness away,
So softly you never could know,
And the meadows shine bright
When we wake in the light,
And the hills are like houses of snow.
He lights them with starlight—he builds them, you see,
For you and for me!"

III.

And I—old and gray, at Life's window today,
Look, dreaming and wistful, afar
To the loved long ago
Of a child and the snow—
Alone with the Evening Star.
Too soon falls the snow! . . . Are there joys that I miss
With a child's face to kiss?

Mitchell and Scopes, a Parallel

BY M. ASHBY JONES, D. D.

While the trial of Colonel Mitchell has been winding its weary length through the headlines of our papers, involuntarily my mind has gone back to that other legal vaudeville, which was staged in Dayton, Tenn., during the heated summer months. I wondered why two causes so strikingly different should have this mental association. In both causes the human interest quickly cast into the shadowed background the purely legal issue involved. We might say that this is characteristic of the sporting instincts of an American audience. Principles are quickly overshadowed by the keen interest aroused by the personalities of the contestants. In both of these trials the legal issue seemed so simple, as to require but little court procedure. Scopes clearly defied a legal statute of the state of Tennessee. He made no denial of this fact. However, when the cause came to trial, he attempted to defend his act by attacking the right of the legislature to enact the statute, and appealed to the principles of freedom of research and teaching.

Colonel Mitchell seems to have very clearly violated the well established code of military discipline, by publicly criticising his military superiors. He makes no denial of the language used, nor of the occasion of his utterance. His defense is that what he said was true, and that military authorities have no right to suppress the freedom of speech of one who seeks the welfare of the service.

Discipline or Development?

It seems perfectly clear to the layman that just so long as we have a military establishment, there must be military discipline. To allow a subordinate to question and argue about his orders, or to criticize the policy of his superiors, would very quickly destroy the efficiency of an army. And yet it is equally clear that such a system is deadly to anything like the development of personality. Its whole tendency is to suppress originality of thinking, and to kill individual initiative. Machine-like obedience to orders, and unquestioning conformity to custom, will inevitably crush all personal characteristics, and tend to standardize all the members of the system according to one pattern. In a word, the military system is a direct contradiction to our ideal of a citizen of democracy. Here is another witness to the unmitigated evil of war. So long as the world is threatened with war, the army is necessary, and yet it must be counted as a necessary evil.

Now, let us turn again to find our parallel in the Scopes trial. Was not the idea of the legislature, and those who promoted the statute forbidding the teaching of a certain theory of physical science, the military idea, applied to education? Youth is not to be taught to think. Youth must not ask questions or criticize. One goes to school to be told. This is bad enough when applied simply to secular education, but when this military idea invades the realm of religious education, it seems to me to be entirely vicious. We need to face this fundamental principle, that only what one thinks for himself has any intellectual value; only what one chooses for himself has any moral worth, and only that which he believes for himself has any redeeming power.

The Military Legend.

The world has been so long dominated by the military idea, that it has invaded many phases of our thinking and living. Nowhere has it been more persistent, or more harmful, than in the realm of education. The idea has been that boys should be "disciplined" for life. Therefore, a military school is the proper place for them to be educated. A little clear thinking will reveal the truth, that the life which the boy is expected to live as a citizen of a democracy, is diametrically opposed to the life he would have to live as a soldier. All citizens are equal. A democracy is a self-governing system, and its citizens should learn to intelligently criticize its government, think for themselves, and take the initiative in public affairs. Preparation for such a life cannot be gained under a military system of training. It can produce an imperial Prussian system, but not a self-governing democracy. So long as we must have an army, we must have a military school, but we must face the fact, that such a school can train boys to be soldiers, but it cannot develop boys into self-governing citizens.

Colonel Mitchell has been guilty of the crime of acting as a citizen while holding an office in the army. Scopes became the victim of the military idea applied to public education.

Jones, of Meriwether, First Opposing, Now Favors Extra Session

Editor Constitution: I notice that your paper published my name with other members of the legislature as being opposed to an extra session of the general assembly.

Will you please do me the kindness to state that I am not opposed to an extra session, strongly in favor of an immediate call by the governor, at least for the purpose of submitting a bond issue for paved highways and for paying the old pensioners.

I did write Mr. Milner several weeks ago that personally, at that time, I did not wish to see an extra session, but since writing him I have changed my views on the subject of paved highways for Georgia. There can be no doubt that thousands of Georgians have also changed their views on this subject, which is evident from the large number of counties recently voting bonds and others to vote on the question at an early date for paved roads. The state should also, in my opinion, issue bonds in some amount, for most of the counties are proceeding on the plan that the state and federal governments will match their funds.

Your daily papers and civic organizations have succeeded wonderfully in creating this sentiment for good roads and they should not step back now and let the counties alone issue bonds. There are two reasons why the state should go forward with a bond issue, one, as just stated, that the counties are bonding themselves expecting their money to be matched, the other reason is that a number of the weaker counties cannot possibly pave their roads without state aid. All thinking people and business men now concede that nothing will attract investors as much as paved roads will do.

Henderson Hallman, writing for "The Week" a few days ago, estimates that from three to five million people will pass through Georgia during the next twelve months. He says "to take the tide at its flood, we must have paved roads and everything worth while will follow in proper order. North Carolina did it with paved roads." He says further, "without a state bond issue we will have disjointed roadways and ditches with mud holes in winter and dust pans in summer and that travelers now passing through give thanks when they have crossed our borders."

Shall we wait until 1927 to start? If so, we could not vote on the question of bonds until November, 1928, and then if an enabling act was necessary, this could not be passed until the summer of 1929, which in the final analysis would mean that nothing real could be done until the year 1930. "Let's go, Georgia," and take advantage of the tide." The legislature should be called early in 1926 and submit a bond issue to the people for their vote in November. This step within itself would be the best advertisement and boost for Georgia than all else combined.

As to the pensions now due the old soldiers, I do not believe that there is a member of the legislature who would not vote to pay this debt, and I have no doubt that if an extra session is called they will easily pass the measure to meet this obligation. I think the good old vets were to blame for our failure to dispose of this matter properly at the last regular session. They had the "scrip bill" prepared by their own committee, which was pronounced "o. k." and they would not hear to anything from the committees or members of the house as to a proper substitute. The people voted this debt on the state, and is, in my opinion, a more sacred vote than the one they cast for biennial sessions.

It is an established fact, from a history of all the states, that the more important legislation is always passed in extraordinary sessions. This is true for the reason that subjects for the consideration of the assembly are limited in the call and necessarily members give their whole time and thought to these subjects.

With reference to the extra session of 1923, I want to say that those who have suggested that it was a failure certainly are not informed. Three very important measures were introduced and passed at that session, to wit: The Ennis bill, creating the revenue department, which has added millions of dollars to the state treasury without levying one cent tax; the Milner bill, levying the tax on cigars and cigarettes, which nets about one million dollars annually, appropriated for most worthy purposes; and the bill creating the state audit department, now filled by that patriotic and highly esteemed official, Sam Slate. These three measures went a long way in relieving the deficit hanging over the state treasurer. And either one of them was of sufficient importance to justify the expenses of calling the extra session.

We all know and feel that the past sums due our old soldiers ought to be paid at once for they are fast passing, and I think the time is ripe to submit the bond issue to the people next November. I feel that if I were governor I would call the session and put it up to the members, for it does seem that we will lose the golden opportunity of this most advantageous advertising if we should wait until 1929.

Analysis of In-Coming Congress Shows Republican Majorities Could Easily Be Overthrown

BY MARK SULLIVAN.
(Copyright, 1925, New York Tribune, Inc.)

The sixty-ninth congress of the United States will meet on Monday, December 7. It is a new congress. That is to say, this is the congress which was elected last year, in November, 1924; and the coming session will be the first meeting of it. That a congress should not meet until more than a year and a month after the people elected it is the subject of frequent criticism. A pending suggestion, which may or may not be pressed in the coming session, is to amend the constitution so that congress shall come into being within two months after they are elected.

This is to be the so-called "long session" of the new congress. Each congress, in its two years of life, has one "short" session, which cannot last longer than three months, and one "long" session, which can last a year and sometimes does.

The coming session can last for a full year. Actually, it may or may not last that long. Much depends on the quantity of business before it, and whether that business is of a nature to inspire prolonged debate. It is safe to predict the coming session will last until July at least. It might readily last until September. It can last until December of next year. As has been said, much depends on the issues that arise. The issues before the coming congress will be treated in future articles. The present article aims to discuss the relative party strength and other fundamental aspects of organization.

Party Division in the Senate.

In the senate 55 members are listed as republicans, 39 as democrats, and one, Shipstead, of Minnesota, as farmer-labor. Officially there is one vacancy, although it cannot be known whether this will continue until after the senate meets. One of the senators from North Dakota, Edwin F. Ladd, died last June. A successor, Gerald P. Nye, has been appointed by the governor of North Dakota; but whether the governor has power to appoint is a legal and constitutional question. The probability is the senate will decide that the governor of North Dakota has not the power to appoint, and this vacancy will continue.

With one seat vacant, there are 95 senators. Consequently, 48 will make a majority. Since the republicans have 55, they command, nominally, a narrow though safe majority of six. But the republican majority is much more nominal and narrow than safe. Actually the republicans can hardly be said to have a majority at all.

Among those listed as republican is Borah, of Idaho, who is almost a party himself, and on all occasions a law unto himself. Depending on the issues that come up, he may as often vote against the republicans as with them.

Two others are listed nominally as republicans who are so far from being regular that a year ago they were outlawed from the republican caucus and from republican standing altogether. They are Frazier, of North Dakota, and Brookhart, of Iowa. (Brookhart is subject to a contest over the regularity of his election, and may or may not be deprived of his seat in favor of the democrat who opposed him at the polls.)

Another listed as nominally republican is young Robert La Follette, of Wisconsin. Quite certainly, like his father before him, he will refuse to be bound by party ties and may as often vote with the democrats as with the republicans.

Another listed as nominally republican, Norris, of Nebraska, is roughly in a class with Borah.

Hiram Johnson, of California, listed as republican, has periods of consistent regularity, as on the tariff, and periods of equally consistent irregularity.

Couzens, of Michigan, is listed as a republican, but is markedly eccentric in his relation to party regularity.

Howell, of Nebraska, listed as republican, is of an independent turn of mind.

Both the senators from South Dakota, listed as republicans, Norbeck and McMaster, are inclined to independence.

Here are ten senators who cannot be described as orthodox republicans always available for a party vote. Whenever any four of these depart from the republicans on any pending issue the republicans will be without a majority.

The democrats, among their 39, have one or two with independent temperaments. The democrats, however, have much greater solidarity than the republicans.

Party Division in the House.

In the lower house are 435 members. Therefore 218 make a majority. The republicans nominally have 247. The republicans, therefore, again nominally have a majority. But if about thirty or more republicans vote with the democrats, the republicans have no majority. As it happens, there are about twenty republicans or upward, chiefly from Wisconsin, who are as independent as any of the senators mentioned above.

The democrats have 183. Very few of the democrats have independent leanings such as would lend them to vote against their party.

There are three farmer-labor members, all from Minnesota, and two socialists, one from Wisconsin and one from New York city.

"Wet" vs. "Dry."

Of only secondary importance to the classification of congress as republican and democratic is their classification as "dry" and "wet."

On this point we may accept the figures of Wayne B. Wheeler, whom the "drys" describe as counsel for the Anti-Saloon league, and whom the "wets" invidiously describe as "director of the anti-liquor lobby." Mr. Wheeler's count of noses says that 325 members of the lower house are "dry," leaving 110 "wet." And that 68 of the senators are "dry," leaving 28 "wet." Ane may say that the "drys" are those who would support a measure or a position approved by the Anti-Saloon league; the "wets" those who would not.

Mr. Wheeler's figures are accepted in the lack of any other poll on this point. So far as the writer knows, no other poll has been taken, and Mr. Wheeler's figures, like all the figures and data given out by the Anti-Saloon league, are apt to be accurate. On such matters as the personal history and predilections of individual members of congress, and the influences to which they are subject, the Anti-Saloon league is rather more thorough than either of the great political parties.

Women in Congress.

There will be three women members. Three out of 435 seems infinitesimal, and it is. However, this will be a larger number of women members than any preceding congress has had.

Of the three women members two are the widows of their immediate predecessors. After Congressman Julius Kahn, of California, died, about a year ago, his district held a special election and selected his widow, Florence P. Kahn.

Singularly, after Congressman John J. Rogers, of Massachusetts, died, his district at a special election elected his widow, Edith Nourse Rogers.

The third of the women members, Mary T. Norton, of Jersey City, N. J., is one of the very few women who have come to congress in the normal way and without relation to the public standing of their husbands or other relatives.

If the fact that two of the three women members of the coming congress are the widows of their immediate predecessors be added to another fact, an interesting deduction, or at least speculation, can be made.

Only two women have ever been elected governors of states. One, Mrs. Nellie G. Ross, the present democratic governor of Wyoming, was elected as the widow of a governor who died. The other, Mrs. Ferguson, governor of Texas, was elected in a spirit of vindicating a husband who had been governor and as such had been impeached.

Of the seven women (including the present three) who have been elected to Congress, three were the widows of predecessors, and one the daughter of a predecessor who died.

The Republican Senate Leader.

With the republicans, and to the country, an important question is, can the republicans, as the majority party, consolidate their membership and carry out a party program? In the answer to this question much depends on leadership.

The republican leader in the senate, Charles P. Curtis, of Kansas, is new—new, that is, as a leader. He has been in the senate since 1907, except for an interval of two years. As republican senate leader Curtis succeeds Henry Cabot Lodge, of Massachusetts. Between these two, in the descent of power from a Boston Back Bay Brahmin, to the shoulders of Curtis, of Kansas, there is a contrast which illustrates one of the picturesque aspects of American life. Curtis in his ancestry is one-half New Englander, one-eighth Kaw Indian, with some French. As a child, from the time he was three until he was eight, he lived on the Kaw Indian reservation. From eight to 16 he was a professional jockey, following the horse races. From 16 on he attended school, and used his time out of school partly to drive a bus in Tokepa and partly to study during off hours in the livery stable.

Curtis as leader will not depend on oratory or readiness in debate, which has been the reliance of some former senate leaders. Curtis, judged by his past career, will depend on an infinite capacity for work, detailed knowledge of the background and personal predilections of the other republican senators he is supposed to lead, power to placate, to compose differences, to compromise, to bring men to agreement, to make his program depend on what he knows in advance he will be able to accomplish.

If one were to try to answer the fundamental question, can Curtis get the present republican majority in the senate to agree, and can he, through them, drive through a party program—the answer is hardly. For that answer the reasons are given above in the figures about the narrowness of the republicans' senate majority, and the facts about the insurgent or otherwise independent individuals among the nominal republicans.

The Democratic Senate Leader.

Curtis' opponent, the leader of the democrats in the senate, will be Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas. He has been twelve years in the senate, was nearly ten years in the house, and was for a brief term governor of Arkansas. In many respects Robinson is the opposite of Curtis. Robinson is as forceful and fertile in oratory as Curtis is silent, as forthright as Curtis is discreet, as impatient of compromise as Curtis is disposed to compromise. There is some anticipations that Robinson in the coming session of the senate will be more disposed to compromise than formerly. One is that the responsibility of leadership carries with it the need of compromise. Another reason looks to the next democratic presidential nomination. As everybody knows, the great need of the democrats is a leader free from the incubus of embroilment with either the Smith faction or the McAdoo faction. Some democrats, recognizing this imperative need, and finding nobody equipped to fill it, hope that Robinson may develop into availability for presidential leadership. The theory is that if he shows generalship, if he succeeds in composing antagonisms within his party, if he is successful in his combats with Curtis and the Republican majority, he may, through attracting the favorable attention of the public to his minority leadership—he may, in short, so the hope goes, qualify himself and his party for hope of success in the 1928 presidential election.

Robinson will have an easier job than Curtis, for many reasons. Robinson will have need to compose some differences in his party, and to avoid other differences arising. But the main cleavage in the democrats in the nation, the one between Smith and McAdoo, does not extend noticeably into the senate. Robinson, in short, will find no such differences among his fellow democratic senators as Curtis has on his hands in the difference between, for example, "regular" republicans such as Butler and Watson and McKinley and, on the other hand, such "irregular" republicans as Borah and La Follette and Norris. Their differences will be the steady nightmare of Curtis, the steady threat to any consistent republican program.

The Republican Speaker.

The republicans of the house, having the majority, will name the speaker. He will be Nicholas Longworth, of Cincinnati. Time was when he could be as much a czar of the house as another Nicholas was of Russia. Up to fifteen years ago the speaker appointed all the committees, every committee member obeyed him for gratitude, and every member not on a committee obeyed him for hope.

But that all ended with the speakership of Joseph G. Cannon, whose rather too arbitrary use of his power led to the shearing of it through epoch-making changes in the rules. Longworth will have comparatively little power, as speaker—although as an individual he may have much, because he is popular. Longworth has announced that so far as he has power he will manage this as a republican congress, a "regular" republican congress, with little tolerance for members elected as republicans who fail to follow the republican program. But these insurgent republicans will be there—as many as twenty of them or more—enough to reduce the republican majority to less than no majority at all.

Other Party Officials.

In the party debates and divisions in the house the republican floor leader will be John Q. Tilson, representative from the Connecticut district that includes New Haven. Tilson is a "regular" republican, who has come to his leadership through long service.

Tilson's parliamentary opponent, the democratic leader, will be Finis J. Garrett, of Tennessee, generally conceded to be one of the ablest men of either party in the house.

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

DOROTHY SPEARE.

The Girl Who Cast Out Fear. by Dorothy Speare, author of "Dancers in the Dark," which proved to be a sensational success.

Miss Speare is a young writer but her style is clever and entertaining. In this story it is not the "age-old" question on which she bases the plot, but the question as to whether marriage and business can ever be successfully combined for the girl, or is it to be love v. business?

The author's description of the modern girl is really the portraying of her character, for she says Claire King's solution, is really her solution.

The literary field is full of young writers with modern ideas as to the real position of the young woman who is ambitious for a career and yet—

Miss Speare is a recent graduate of Smith college. Immediately upon the acceptance of her first novel, (this being her third), she went to Nice where she studied voice. Last December she married Franklin B. Christman, graduate of Exeter and Princeton and a naval aviator during the war. They will sing together in opera this winter in Italy.

"Dancers in the Dark" was followed by "The Gay Year," and the many readers of the young author's stories will thoroughly enjoy the love story as well as the argument brought to bear in "The Girl Who Cast Out Fear." (George H. Doran Co., New York.)

NEW FICTION.

Women. By Booth Tarkington, the popular American author who was awarded the Pulitzer prize for his novel, "The Magnificent Ambersons," —and then again for his story-not-to-be-forgotten, "Alice Addams." He is one of the most likable writers in the long list of writers of fiction—in fact he has been called the "dean of American letters" during the past few years.

Mr. Tarkington pleases because his characters are human and clever—if you have read his books and then witnessed these same every-day characters in the silent drama you can well understand why his books please the reading and theater-going public.

Among the interesting characters who continue to live are Penrod, Fanchin and Marjorie, Miss Flopit, the baby-talk girl in "Seventeen," the lovely Lady Mary, and of course "Gentle Julia." What was more familiar than the dinner party to which Alice Addams was invited, and the dance where she pretended she was having such a good time and yet not a single boy had asked her to dance?

This new story is woven around Mrs. Cromwell's daughters, Mrs. Dodge's only daughter, Mrs. Dodge's husband, etc., etc. It would not be fair to the many readers who have been waiting for this story to say more, especially when they know the above characters so well and that the role is Mr. Tarkington's own. (Doubleday, Page & Co., Garden City.)

Booth and the Spirit of Lincoln. By Bernie Babcock, who is the author of quite a number of interesting historical books, among them being "The Soul of Ann Rutledge," "Abraham Lincoln's Romance," of which Sir Gilbert Parker wrote: "It stifles criticism."

This new story is woven around the young and strikingly handsome actor, John Wilkes Booth. Most of the incidents in this story are published for the first time. And as the interest in the story of Wilkes Booth is still fresh in the minds of the people it will be of special interest.

It is an imaginary story and is splenddly written. The romance portrays a wonderful story made up of incidents in the social life of Washington. (J. B. Lippincott, Philadelphia. Price $2.00)

Christina Alberta's Father. By H. G. Wells. Author of "Men Like Gods," "Joan and Peter," and other books that have attracted even world-wide attention. In fact, it would take a whole page of a book to mention all the contributions on social, religious, political and fiction that Mr. Wells has contributed to the literary world.

His new story is located in London and is woven around little Mr. Preemby, and his young daughter who, when left alone, deserted the laundry and left for London in search of a new life.

Little Mr. Preemby's imagination had never had a chance to leave the laundry before, and now he was anxious to try his wings and to fill his life with the beauty to which he thought he was entitled. There is also a mystery around the young daughter which the reader will find interest in solving.

"So Christina Alberta's Father" is a story that is filled with human pathos, original sayings, flashes of wit and humor, in which the daughter's "ups and downs" add to the pathos as well as the human interest that has such a strong appeal from the pen of this noted writer. (The MacMillan company, New York.)

The Emigrants. By Johan Bojer, author of "The Great Hunger," was published as a serial in perhaps the most exclusive Parisian monthly. It also achieved a wonderful sale in Norway where over 30,000 copies were sold in over two months.

This story is woven around the Scandinavian peoples who have come to America, and it is something of a memorial celebrating the coming of the first coming of the Viking race—an event which President Coolidge pleasantly mentioned in complimentary words during the centennial last summer.

The Scandinavian-Americans are many and are recognized wherever they go, and it is said that there are perhaps as many in the United States as in Scandinavia. "This is not because Scandinavia is overcrowded," says the author, "but because the same spirit that sent the old Viking out upon the seas, has sent the new Vikings to the seas of the western prairies. It needed a Viking race, as Theodore Roosevelt declared long ago, to subdue our seas of western lands."

As the reader will recall, Mr. Bojer wrote "The Last of the Vikings," which dealt with the Norwegian fishermen on their annual forays into the Arctic zone. This new novel is equally as interesting and while his style is as "beautifully economical" as in his former story, the theme is so big that it is a much longer story than he has ever written. (The Century company, New York. Price $2.00.)

INTERNATIONAL BOOK REVIEW.

While the November days have passed and December, with Christmas cheer, has arrived, the International Book Review Magazine for November will prove to be just as interesting for this month as it is filled with articles that cannot be confined to months or years.

Joaquin Miller, "The Poet of the Sierras as I Knew Him," by Herbert C. Thompson, is a most interesting criticism in which he reproduces a beautiful little ode entitled, "To the Bards of San Francisco Bay:"

"I am as one unlearned, uncouth,
From country come to join the youth
Of some sweet town in quest of truth;
A skilless northern Nazarine."

A most interesting story is told by Frederick O'Brien called "A Gypsy of the Sea Spins His Yarn"—John E. Rosser "Turns the Spotlight on Mr. Mencken," with a drawing as the cartoonist sees him; Basil King is pictured in his Cambridge (Mass.) home—the house at No. 1 Berkeley street—James L. Ford tells the story of "Willa Cather's Visit to the Cliff-Dwellers of Arizona." Sir Gilbert Parker "Makes LaSalle His Hero," by Harry Hansen, who tells how this noted writer had this splendid story tucked away for many years until the time when he could present it under the title "The Power and the Glory." On December 5 the city of Chicago will unveil a bronze tablet in honor of the great LaSalle. This is Sir Gilbert's first novel in many years. "Friendly Forests and Treacherous Men," by William Arthur Deacon; "Sifting out the First Families of America," by Carl C. Brigham, who bases his article on "The Abridged Compendium of American Genealogy: First Families of America," is a volume which is attracting much attention at the present time. Thomas H. Dickinson weaves a pleasant page article around Herbert Quick, whose book "One Man's Life," should be widely read. Louise Maunsell Field presents a most interesting criticism on H. G. Wells' discussion of the "New Woman," as described in "Christina Alberta's Father." Claude G. Bowers relates in a most original style "The Stormy Friendship Between Two Presidents"—John Adams and Thomas Jefferson. Andre Maurois, the author of "Ariel," has been interviewed by Willis Steel, and Jeannette Eaton had such an interesting interview with Anne Douglas Sedgwick at her country place near Oxford, England, over the tea cups, when the writer whispered to her the story of the "Little French Girl," which has since become one of the most popular stories of the year.

Edward Markham has written a splendid comment on "The Light in the Valley," a story by Mabel Wagnalls, whose "Misere," "The Palace of Danger," were fine, and whose "The Rose Bush of a Thousand Years" has taken a popular place in the silent drama under the name "Revelation," in which Madame Nazimova has attained a wonderful success; Richard Le Gallienne's tribute to Amy Lowell will be read with misty eyes as he tells how she fought for poetry with the same earnestness that the American soldier fought, for she believed that humanity deserved it. He makes an appealing comparison between Amy Lowell and Theodore Roosevelt, believing one meant as much to the field of poetry as the other did to politics. This most interesting article contains Amy Lowell's poem to Eleanora Duse in answer to a letter received from her. It was not published until after her death; it also contains reproduction of a medal in honor of Walt Whitman, who originated the movement which Amy Lowell led. It was designed by Alexander Finta for the Author's club, New York.

And this is not all that this attractive issue contains, it is so very interesting that it should be passed on from library table to library table, from friend to frined, until it is forced aside by the Christmas magazines with their greetings of "Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men."

BOOKS FOR BOYS.

Three Rousing Cheers for the Rollo Boys. By Corey Ford, one of "Life's most brilliant humorists. Of course all boys remember the Rollo Boys, and it is only a writer like Mr. Ford that can tell us about them with the same enthusiasm, and to make us enjoy their exploits, adventures, or any kind of funmaking with the same zest as they "win football games and chase cannibals, escort Sabatini to Joseph Lincoln's Cape Cod, go fishing with Zane Grey, and accompany Oliver Curwood on his trip through God's country."

The book is dedicated "To the marching spirit of the reb-blooded 100 per cent American boys of this nation."

In making his bow as one of America's young humorists, Mr. Ford is sure to prove a winner, not only with the boys of today but with the boys of yesterday, who are especially fond of a humorous story. (George H. Doran Co., New York.)

The Snow Patrol. By Harry Sinclair Drago, author of "Out of the Silent North," who when he returned from his last trip to the northwest went immediately to the solitude of his country home at Bargas Lake and wrote a story of the Northwest Mounted Police which expresses a sincere feeling for the heart beneath the red coat.

This book is not especially written for boys for it is a strong story of the great Arctic country, with its setting at a little post "on the very rim," but it's description of the country will appeal to any reader who loves the great out-of-doors." (The Macaulay company, New York.)

On the Side Lines. By A. May Holaday. This is a real boys' story of a year spent at Stanford university in which the fine friendships of a democratic little group of sophomores and the many incidents and adventures they have experienced, as well as the heavy responsibilities they have to carry and which is assigned to that all-important second year.

Boys will enjoy this story and will call it a jolly book, and girls too will like the style of the writer in which he displays the courage and the loyalty that belongs to the boys who pride themseves on playing the game on the square.

It is a jolly, tense, dramatic story by a new author with a fresh touch and with the ideas about young people and about the writing of fiction. The characters in "On the Side Lines" talk and act as real boys do, and the author has not been afraid to reproduce their vigorous, breezy and colorful "slanguage." It is a wholesome, stimulating story that honest-togoodness boys, and girls, too, who would be pals of that sort of boy, will welcome with enthusiasm. (The Century Co., New York.)

JUNIOR BOOKS.

Peggy's Prize Story. By Kate Dickinson Sweetser, who wrote "Mickey, of the Alley," and the two books "Ten Boys and Ten Girls from Dickens." This is a most interesting story of a Mediterranean cruise that the Orville News offered to the senior boy or girl in the high school who should write a synopsis of a play with a historical theme best suited for a five-reel screen play. Paul Day wins the prize and Peggy Emmons is chosen to play the lead.

It proved to be a most delightful cruise for Peggy's family decided that they too wanted to see Aligers, Constantinople, Madeira, and other old countries they had read about. There's a splendid plot running all through the story which is founded on facts, and as the author made this trip you will enjoy immensely her description of it. (Barse & Hopkins, New York.)

Little Tiger. By Anthony Hope, author of "The Prisoner of Zenda," "The Dolly Dialogues," etc., is written in such interesting style and the little heroine is so charming that it can be classed as a story for boys and girls as well as the grown ups. (George H. Doran Co., New York.)

Rain on the Roof. By Cornelia Meigs, author of Master Simon's Garden," and other charming stories. The story is woven around an old house at the harbor's edge in a well-known seaport town. It is a thrilling story of the sea. (The MacMillan Co., New York.)

Chatterbox, 1926. It would not be like winter if the good news was not on the way that Chatterbox would be here in time for Christmas, for what would the little folks do during the long winter evenings without they could gather around a new Chatterbox. Or during the dull rainy afternoons when they have to stay indoors? But the Chatterbox never fails to make an engagement with Santa Claus.

This handsome book was first originated by Rev. John Erskine Clark in 1878, and it has been an annual gift ever since. Nine years ago the publishers celebrated its golden anniversary and it is still greeting the little folks with all the attractiveness of "When we were very young." (L. C. Page & Co., Boston.)

Brownie. By Alen Chaffee, who tells the stories of the Engineer of Beaver Brook. With illustrations by Paul Branson. This beautiful book is for children of six to twelve years.

Brownie, is the Utah beaver, who is most interestingly portrayed by his biographer. He tells the story how he is the engineer of the forest and the waterway and how he changes the roads in his country just like we do in ours. But Brownie is not all there are other interesting animals characters who are his neighbors and also his friends, among these are the otter, the coyote. The book is filled with stories of nature which will appeal to the child who loves animals. Milton Bradley Co. Springfield, Mass.)

The Lost King of Oz. By Ruth Plumly Thompson. Founded on and continuing the famous Oz stories by L. Frank Baum, with illustrations by John R. Neill. The boys and girls who kept up with the stories of the "Royal Historian of Oz," will thoroughly enjoy this new book.

The author writes a most interesting letter to the boys and girls in which she says: "A whole book of news had happened in Oz since I wrote you last year. Well the most surprising news right now is about the Lost King." Now watch out for this new story which I am going to tell you about in this new book which will make a lovely gift. (Reilly & Lee Co., Chicago.)

The Musical Tree—Song and Pictures by Sarah Stillwell Weber. Among the contents of this lovely book are "Bluebeard's Wife: The Little Bird; The Sleeping Beauty; Skating Song; The Three Wishes, etc." This book is for the little folks and it gives the music as well as the words of the music. Another book which will make a beautiful gift. The Penn Publishing Co., Philadelphia.)

Jockey and Other Stories. of a boy life on a southern farm. By T. Oregon Lawton. This little volume is filled with stories that the little as well as the big boys will enjoy. The author has dedicated the stories to his own children, Sam, Mary, Frances and Max, to whom the stories were first told—also to little "Bill" the first grandchild. The book is published by T. O. Lawton, Greenville, S. C., Price $1.00.)

BOOKS FOR THE LITTLE FOLKS

Tony Sarg's Book of Animals has come to see us again in its new dress of all the gorgeous coloring that is so popular now, and with just lots of new interesting stories in verse. It is a most attractive book, there's just the nicest book for the wee tots called Tony Sarg's Zoo. It has a very attractive cover and is just ready for mailing to some little girl or boy whose books are read to them mostly in the nursery. (Greenberg, Publisher, Inc., New York.)

The Sandman Series is always a welcome guest to the little folks who spend a great deal of their time in the nursery, and they are all quite familiar with the Sandman and his songs and rhymes, his Animal Stories, His Kittycat Stories, His Bunny Stories, His Puppy, his Indian and his Fairy Stories. In the last book the Sandman comes in person and takes little Joyce to the wonderful Land of Nod. (The L. C. Page Co., Boston)

Captain January—Baby Peggy Edition, is a charming idyl of the New England coast. It is profusely illustrated with scenes from the photoplay. Price $2.50.

Five Mice in a Mouse Trap in which the author tells the story about each little mouse and there are quite a number of attractive pictures to help little folks enjoy the story. (L. C. Page & Co., Price $1.75)

The Blue Bonnet Series is another story that cannot be forgotten for Blue Bonnet and her little friends are real girls and the author has woven all their bright sayings into a delightful series of books as follows:

A Texas Blue Bonnet. By Caroline E. Jacobs.

Blue Bonnet's Ranch Party. By Caroline Jacobs and Edith E. Read.

Blue Bonnet in Boston, By Caroline Jacobs and Lela H. Richards.

Blue Bonnet—Debutante, By Lela H. Richards.

Blue Bonnet Keeps House, by the same author.

Blue Bonnet of the Seven Stars, by the same author. (Price $1.75. Page Books.)

The Brownies In Fairyland. By Palmer Cox. Lyrics and music by Malcolm Douglas. This is a cantata for little children in two acts and has been presented with great success many times. The illustrations are attractive. (The Century Co., price $1.50.)

S. N. P. A. Code of Ethics

(Adopted by the Southern Newspaper Publishers' Association at their 1925 convention.)

A newspaper's first duty is to print the news honestly and fairly to all, unbiased by any other consideration, even including its own editorial opinion.

Its second duty is to construe honestly and fairly, in its editorial columns, happenings at home and abroad, that the people may realize their full benefit under a republic and require of public officials faithful performance of the duties entrusted to them as servants of the people. It must protect its readers, insofar as may be reasonably possible, from evil influences in public life and from dishonest or misguided persons who, through its own advertising columns, might seek to mislead or exploit its readers.

Lastly, its duty is to itself, and its stockholders; for unless a fair return on their investment is yielded, the publication must cease and, with it, its opportunity to be of any service to the public.

In furtherance of these duties, we hold these principles to be compatible with both high ideals and sound business conduct of a successful, prosperous and useful newspaper:

1.—SERVICE to the community, the state, our country and to civilization. Our criticisms shall be constructive. Our columns, whether editorial, news or advertising, must be governed by the public welfare; no other consideration for suppression of news is defensible, nor should advertisements detrimental to the public be accepted.

2.—FAIRNESS to its subscribers, its advertisers, its competitors and the public. Recognizing honest differences of opinion exist, we may vigorously maintain our own position without denouncing others as dishonest or unfair. Under no circumstances must we countenance the use of our columns to vent personal spite nor permit inuendo, often more deadly than direct charges. We should not be deterred by consequences to ourselves in speaking out boldly in the public interest, but unfairness in any cause is an unforgivable sin. We regard it as unwise to underestimate our competitors, unethical to disparage them and dishonest to misrepresent them.

3.—DECENCY, which should be the guiding star in the printing of news, editorials, advertising and all feature articles or illustrations. Even though, at times, pruriency, morbidness and a desire for sensationalism may seem to be in demand by the reading public, it is a newspaper's duty to keep its own columns decent and thus strive to hold steady the public mind in the path of right, morality and the service of God. "Is it fit to print and be read by my own mother, wife or daughter?" should be the test, rather than "will it sell more papers?" Let us be enterprising without being sensational.

4.—CONSIDERATION for the unfortunate and for the guiltless victims of the faults of others. Since publicity is the greatest deterrent of crime, we must expose fearlessly and without favor the names of law-breakers, but we should protect the names of members of their families and other associates. No story justifies needless damage to a good reputation nor wanton pain to the innocent.

5.—RESPECT AND TOLERANCE for those of different religions, races and circumstances of life. Ridicule may bring only pain to them, but its author can not escape real injury in loss of respect in which he is held by the public and by himself.

6.—HONESTY in our dealings with our readers, our advertisers, our employees, our competitors and all with whom we do business; to give a dollar's value for every dollar received and to pay a dollar for every dollar's worth of service. We should do no less and should be expected to do no more.

7.—TRUTH, first, last and always, to the limit of our ability; to be as accurate as human fallibility on the part of others as well as of ourselves will permit; to willingly mislead none and to be fair to all. There are two sides to every story. Let us tell both. If we do anyone an injustice, we should correct it at once, whether the injured person demands it or not.

Though temporary prosperity may be achieved by violation of some of these ideals, we conceive our duty to hold steadfast to these principles, and believe permanent success will reward their faithful performance.

NEW YORK FAVORITES TO APPEAR AT METRO

Ushering in the seventh week of joint programs of motion pictures and high-class vaudeville which has broke all records for attendance at the Metropolitan theater, Manager Willard Patterson announces the appearance here this week of Bert Rome and Henry Dunn, harmony singers par excellence and chatterists de luxe. These two stars, fresh from the footlights of New York with Earl Carroll's Vanities, will be heard as an addition to the feature movie, "The Keeper of Bees."

Following a week in which the Metropolitan offered Bernardo De Pace, mandolinist, and the Leviathan orchestra, Rome and Dunn are facing a real test to prove greater drawing cards. In fairness to them, however, it must be said that the management had this in mind in scheduling each entertainer and feels confident that Atlantans will agree with him that this week's offering is greater than any presented in the past.

In the six weeks of combined vaudeville and movies local fandom has placed its emphatic stamp of approval on the arrangement. The result has been that attendance records have jumped to tremendous figures and with this week's attraction and a few more which they are holding back as "ace cards," it is expected that new all-time records will be established. Movie lovers have approved of interspersing movies with vaudeville and vice versa. Figures don't lie! No sir, and anyone who has tried to surge past the Metropolitan when shows are beginning will agree that Metropolitan crowds have been enormous.

In "The Keeper of Bees" Gene Stratton-Porter has reached new heights in movie production and the lavish film offering, heralded as few movies ever have been heralded in the past, is expected to prove all that advance claims have made for it. It is the screen production of the story which was so widely read in McCall's Magazine. Its story appeals to every human emotion and its reaction has been of tremendous influence wherever shown.

But back to Rome and Dunn—Let's not forget that they are bringing a goodly portion of Broadway to Atlanta with them, that the popular prices here are considerably below the rate in New York and that theatergoers have a chance to see two genuine stars who have literally swept Gotham with their harmony and line of chatter.

Let's see the Metropolitan show this week.

Palace Theater.

"The Dressmaker from Paris," with Leatrice Joy, on Monday and Tuesday; "Fools in the Dark," with Matt Moore and Patsy Ruth Miller, on Wednesday; "Welcome Stranger," film version of the Broadway stage success, on Thursday and Friday, and "Beauty and the Bad Man," Peter B. Kyne's famous story, on Saturday. This is the program of entertainment at the Palace theater, in Inman Park, for the coming week.

Jimmy Collins and an ensemble of three girls will present a special dancing number as a prologue attraction on Monday and Tuesday. The feature of the act will be "The Charleston."

Leatrice Joy furnishes a wonderful characterization in "The Dressmaker from Paris," portraying the role of a French midinette who later becomes a famous modiste. Ernest Torrence, Allan Forrest and Mildred Harris head an exceptional supporting cast in this glowing story of Paris and America.

"Fools in the Dark" is a clever mixture of comedy, thrills, romance and excitement—a story of a modern knight who dares valiant deeds for the sake of the woman he loves.

"Welcome Stranger," from the great Broadway play by Aaron Hoffman, is different. Different in that it presents a new theme which grips in its intensity and enthralls in its sincerity. Yet there is comedy galore, built around the character of a small-town Jewish merchant.

"Beauty and the Bad Man" is a picturization of Peter B. Kyne's romance of the desert, wherein a singer attains an international reputation through a chance meeting with what the world terms a "bad man."

Peter Milne, widely known newspaper man and publicist, has taken charge of publicity for the Robert T. Kane productions. Milne entered the motion picture field with the old Kinema-color company and has since filled important positions with Famous Players-Lasky, Fox Film corporation and Pathe. His first work, in his present capacity, will be the direction of publicity for Kane's new production, "The Reckless Lady," now being made at the Cosmopolitan studios, New York, for First National release.

NOVELTY DANCE ACT ON HOWARD PROLOGUE

An elaborate program of entertainment has been arranged for this week by the Howard theater in celebration of its fifth birthday anniversary. Monday evening, Mayor Walter A. Sims will start the celebration and will be introduced by Julian Boehm, who bought the first admission to the Howard on the opening night five years ago.

In connection with the showing of the big feature picture, Adolphe Menjou in "The King on Main Street," Ralph Pollock and his orchestra have arranged to stay over another week to take part in a stage presentation called "Bits From Broadway." This number tells in songs, dances and music how a Broadway show is put together. It is a decided novelty, originated and staged by Mr. Pollock.

Eight graceful dancers also will take part in the elaborate stage presentation, offering some dance numbers arranged especially for this production. In addition, the McGees—Jack and Jill—premier dancers, will offer a delightful dancing number, demonstrating dances of the olden days and those that are so popular with the younger set of today.

As this week is being generally observed over the country as national dance week, these dancing numbers will doubtless prove of much interest to all patrons of the Howard.

Three very tuneful numbers will be featured by Mr. Pollock and his orchestra. They are "Manhattan," "Sugarfoot Stomp" and "Charleston Back to Charleston."

Special scenic and lighting effects will be used in the stage presentation, which promises to prove one of the most entertaining ever offered at the Howard. Mr. Pollock's orchestra has scored a pronounced hit and has lived up to its reputation as being one of the best synchronizing organizations in the country.

"Zampa" will be the overture rendered by the Howard orchestra, and "Gypsy Airs" have been selected by Jan Rubini as the number he will play as a violin solo. "Dixie Melodies" will be played by Melvin P. Ogden, the Howard organist.

Musically and in every other way, anniversary week at the Howard is certain to offer unusually attractive entertainment.

Norma Talmadge.

When Norma Talmadge begins making "Kiki," her next First National feature, in Hollywood shortly, she will have the very antithesis of her role in "Graustark," her latest success. In "Graustark" she is the blue-blooded modern princess. The title character in "Kiki" will reveal her as a Paris street waif—an irresistible gamin with the soul of a lady. David Belasco, at the time he sold the screen rights to Joseph M. Schenck for a new record price, stipulated that only Miss Talmadge should star in the picturized "Kiki."

William Cameron Menzies, the Talmadge art director, is designing the art effects and settings for "Kiki." He made a special trip to Paris to gain ideas for the undertaking.

Mr. Schenck has placed every facility at the command of the Norma Talmadge company, with the expectation that "Kiki" will be the crowning achievement of the star's career, surpassing even such of her triumphs as "Smilin' Through," "Secrets" and "Graustark."

Ronald Colman, leading man who was loaned to Mr. Schenck by Samuel Goldwyn, and other eminent players are being lined up for the "Kiki" supporting cast.

BUILDING HEALTH SINCE 1873

The human system demands certain foods rich in health-building vitamins to assure health and normal growth.

Eminent scientists agree that cod-liver oil is one of the greatest forms of concentrated medicinal food ever discovered.

Scott's Emulsion contains cod-liver oil, also glycerine and hypophosphites of lime and soda, a combination that seldom fails to bring the desired result. Millions have successfully used this vital food-tonic since 1873. It is a creamy, white, easily taken health-builder—just what is needed for those who are rundown.

You will never regret your having taken Scott's Emulsion of invigorating cod-liver oil yourself or having given it to your child.

RAILS LEAD UPWARD MOVEMENT IN STOCK MARKET

Traders Believe Market Will Resume Bullish Trend After Christmas Holidays

Speculators Hold Stock Until Public Is in Buying Mood, Willing To Buy at Higher Prices.

BY C. H. PLATT.
(Special to The Constitution.)

New York, December 5.—The stock market has been rather calm during the past week if compared to the exciting sessions of a month ago. Although the volume held around 1,500,000 shares that is considered light trading now and as for actual motion the common characterization was dull and weak.

There has undoubtedly developed a tremendous short interest, which, of course, is professional, for the public does not go short as a rule and then only temporarily. The "shorts" are holding on with might and main, hoping that profit-taking after the first of the year will give them much heavier profits than the recent liquidation has brought about.

The two elements, one holding stocks on which profits are still large despite recent slumps and the other short at much higher levels but anticipating further declines, combine to make a rather uninteresting market because the real life is taken out of it.

Legitimate buying and selling of securities never did make a spectacular market that draws public participation.

Money Rates Firm.

A little firmer tone in money had a more pronounced effect on industrial stocks than on other divisions of the market because bankers are chary about any further extension of loans on industrial securities at this time, anyway, unless "sweetened" with a proportionately large amount of other classes of issues. Dividend and interest payments on the first of December are among the largest of the year, only being exceeded by January and July first. This naturally results in some calling of loans and a momentary tightening up of rates, but it is just for a few days and were it not for the fact that a great deal of financing will be done around December 15, money would probably have been cheaper after one day's advance.

Interest in the stock market invariably slackens during the early weeks of December, that is, so far as the public is concerned, and it is most notable in odd-lot trading, which has rightly been called the real backbone of finance. Take away the odd-lot traders and the market would always be dead, and the best criterion as to whether we are in a bull or a bear market is the amount of odd lots going out of or coming into the security trading centers of the whole country.

Buyers Hold Stock.

A great deal of stock is out of the market, bought and paid for and locked up in safety deposit boxes, while most of the rest is in so-called strong hands, i. e., bankers, brokers and big speculators, who will hold it until the public is in a buying mood again and willing to purchase at higher prices.

Less volume and steadiness of prices indicate plainly that the market is in a trading area and while individual stocks may be expected to advance and recede from time to time, the trend is fairly horizontal. Lack of fireworks for a while tends to build up confidence in the public mind that the next move will be upward and a gradual buying resumption may be expected. This has been the case invariably in the past and the general opinion, therefore, is that after January 1 prices will again start forward. The bears do not believe it. They never do. During the past month we have seen such a number of dividend increases and the resumption of dividends in so many cases that bearish interests claim all the good news is out.

Motor Issues Lead.

The motors have been the leaders in these developments as they were in activity, and yet mergers in this industry have not come about and everyone believes that mergers are an immediate prospect, in fact, an announcement of consolidation of Cleveland concerns has already been made and clearing of accumulated dividends by some other organizations seems preliminary to merging that may extend into Detroit and South Bend.

Many split-ups are in sight and these are used ordinarily to stimulate a quiet market. Congress convenes Monday and while this factor is being considered with extraordinary equanimity by financiers, it does have an effect on trading and has led to a waiting attitude very evident during the past week. The French situation is improving although the fluctuations in the franc have been erratic. The coal strike is attracting an increasing amount of attention but there are no signs of the miners going back to work and coal users are thoroughly disgusted with both parties to the argument and not very much impressed by the efforts being made towards a settlement. Public utilities are becoming heavy investors in coal properties to avoid in the future the problems confronting them now. Coal stocks are weak and the oil stocks are coming to the front.

Oil Stocks Strong.

Prices of gasoline and fuel oil are advancing steadily. A number of the Standard Oil units are making preparations for further financing, split-ups and stock dividends and the independent oils are not far behind in this favorable action. While oil stocks are not showing the wild movements to which the speculators have been accustomed in the past, the general underlying strength in these securities is apparent and the upward urge in all of them is fairly uniform. For years there has been a fixed opinion that oil stocks are gambling stocks, that every dollar put into them is placed in jeopardy and that it is such an extremely hazardous business as to be taboo to the conservative investor. The oil industry is as stabilized as any of our major industries and there is as little risk attached to the shares of the sound dividend-paying oil stocks as to other industrial shares. The old opinion, so prevalent for years, is fading away and this fact is best illustrated by the orderly advances in shares which, under old conditions, having the same reasons for upswings, would have bounded upwards wildly. Foreign oil supplies are in sharp demand and the South American oil stocks are responding to large purchases.

Public Utilities Default.

There has been a noticeable increase in defaults on public utility bonds during the past year, and this fact is being brought to the attention of investors with deterrent effect on the stocks of these companies. Earnings of these companies are increasing in most instances, but there is such a pyramiding of company on company that the "middleman" condition in them is more noticeable and probably more in need of correction than the same problem that confronts the distribution of food and other necessities of life. The "middleman" in the essential industries at least have the excuse of time and place utility. Mail order sales are going up by leaps and bounds, showing an average of about 12 per cent above the same time last year. The chain stores are in a way a partial solution of the problem just mentioned.

Money ruled at stronger levels during the week as a result of December 1 financing, but brokers are finding it more and more advantageous to use time money, which is comparatively much cheaper than "call" funds. Six-months borrowers are being solicited by lenders. Firmer money has not had any great effect on stock prices within the past few days, for while there have been sporadic attempts to put some stocks up, most of the pools are in the process of laying their lines for future operations rather than negotiating banking credits for immediate use.

Railroad stocks came forward, some on the belief that they are overdue for a good advance. The president's speech is expected to be favorable to the carriers. Earnings are excellent and improving. November earnings will probably show an increase over those of October which were up 6.7 per cent from the same month in 1924. The southern roads are doing particularly well, and many low-priced rails have reached the high for the year. The roads operating in the bituminous fields are in favor with speculators for the railroad rise.

Copper Sales Increase.

Copper sales to foreign buyers were larger during the past week than in the preceding 30 days. The signing of the Locarno pact is a good omen for copper producers, as it will probably improve the credit position of countries badly in need of copper. While the price of the metal has been weak there is not much likelihood of further declines, as the companies are well organized to prevent over-production. Several of the copper companies have increased dividends, and more are expected to do so soon.

The turnover in bonds has been very small and the whole market was exceedingly quiet. Even the foreign, so active a week ago, has calmed down. There is some congestion in the foreign issues and they are not moving very well. Dealers' shelves are sufficiently supplied with domestic issues just now. The offer to buy Liberties by the treasury department is more of a "gesture" than a means of effecting economy. The secretary thoroughly understands the value of advertising, especially just before a large new issue.

Steel Issues Advance.

The steel companies report heavy bookings for delivery after the first and the steel stocks are responding to fine earnings. Rail orders are large and steel prices as a whole are almost certain to advance several dollars a ton in the next few months. Billets are below the level of this time last year. Western steel mills are doing the largest business of the year and even the small companies are showing tremendous profits. Further gains are noted in daily pig iron production. The industry is flourishing.

The cotton market has been steady within a narrow trading range. Exports are heavy, but the market is in such a speculative position at the moment and news is of such an uncertain tone that traders hesitate to take a decided stand on either side. Considerable arbitrage business has appeared for foreign accounts and a great deal of switching between months, but until the trade adjusts itself to production conditions, and gets exact knowledge about qualities, the market will probably remain irregular. Low grades may get cheaper but the high grades are well situated for strength to appear. Goods buying is excellent.

MOODY'S REVIEW

Moody's Weekly Review of Financial Conditions in its current issue says in part:

"Call money rates usually average higher in December than in November, and will probably do so this year. Yet stock prices more often than otherwise move up or down parallel with interest rates.

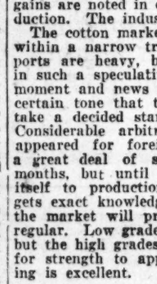

"Besides this, December is a more comfortable month for the New York money market than it was before the establishment of the Federal Reserve system. It is so because the interior Federal Reserve banks now finance the autumn boom to a large extent, whereas the New York city banks formerly carried this burden.

"As a consequence the loans of member banks in this city now have a habit of diminishing as compared with deposits during December, although formerly they used to increase.

"So it is that the monetary situation is satisfactory, and that in view of the good condition of general rate the security markets ought to continue their present healthy action."

News, Views And Reviews

Stock Letters.

LIVINGSTON & CO.

New York, December 5.—The stock market this morning gave an excellent account of itself. After opening strong the usual week-end realizing developed and for about an hour stocks were quietly reactionary. Selling was well absorbed and in the last hour a sharp recovery developed. Traction and railroads started the recovery. The motors recovered easily. Stocks, after reacting somewhat, were in good demand at close. The feature was that on selling activity lessened while on the recovery near the close the market reached its greatest activity of the week with tape still running 10 minutes after the close. This is a pretty good hint of higher prices.

JOHN F. CLARK & CO.

New York, December 5.—End of the week profit-taking on both sides of the market was responsible for irregularity in prices today. Motors did better as an outcome of covering and of the belief that such issues had been driven to a point where they again were a purchase. Toward the close prices generally turned upward under the leadership of rails. The final tone was strong.

The rails are generally forging ahead in speculative favor as likely to be the medium of important constructive operations in the near future.

FENNER & BEANE.

New York, December 5.—Stocks continued in brisk demand all through today's short session. Further advances took place in various representative issues under continued vigorous bullish demonstrations. The oils showed further appreciation with particular demand centered in Marland Oil, establishing that issue at a new high record.

Movement in the rails was featured by Missouri Pacific preferred and New Haven. There also was steady accumulation of Pennsylvania in anticipation of an increase in its dividend.

There was some sign of profit taking over the holiday, but this selling was well absorbed and had only a temporary effect on prices as at the close the market showed a most buoyant tone.

Cotton Letters.

LIVINGSTON & CO.

New York, December 5.—We have a "Micawberish" market again today. The trade seems to be growing a little sure of a 15,500,000-bale crop, but is waiting to see if their conclusions will be confirmed by next Tuesday's report. In the meantime, the little business passing except for a very small amount of routine hedging or necessary price-fixing representing a reduction in the outstanding interest no doubt.

H. & B. BEER.

New Orleans, December 5.—As yet the cotton market shows no recuperative power, having ruled barely steady this morning.

The government's annual crop estimate will be released Tuesday and will report as to the indicated yield and ginnings to December 1.

Meanwhile, the trade is ignoring the enormous takings by spinners of American cotton so far this season 5,902,000 against 4,932,000 to even date last year, or nearly 1,000,000 bales in excess of one year ago, of which 518,000 for the corresponding week last year.

In the event of the market declining on the government report, we favor buying, October preferred, owing to its big discount and low price, now about 17.67, which means about 17 cents island, or about the cost of production, which makes it more attractive than old-crop deliveries as an investment.

C. P. ELLIS & CO.

New Orleans, December 5.—Opinions are useles pending the bureau report. The general expectation is for bearish figures and any disappointment in this respect would be quickly reflected in advance. Meanwhile, regardless of the bureau report, we consider prevailing prices for cotton reasonable, and we think the offtake will continue large while they obtain.

ORVIS BROS. & CO.

New York, December 5.—If private crop estimates are to be borne out the government report Tuesday should approximate 15,500,000 bales.

Too frequent reports have been the means of keeping the trade unsettled for six months. The outlook now is for steadier market developments after impact from Tuesday's reports. Then the questions of consumption and the price level can be measured against the crop's full size.

Considering the changed buying power of the dollar values look particularly sound. With these ideas running through the trade there prevails considerable confidence in the plan to buy cotton as breaks occur anticipating the result will ultimately prove profitable and unless Tuesday's figures are overwhelmingly bearish we think that operations of this kind are advisable.

PYNCHON & CO.

New York, December 5.—Textile interests advise us cloth buyers have recently been purchasing cautiously, fearing the bureau estimate may prove a disconcerting surprise by a large estimate. Effect would, it is believed, be of but temporarily bearish influence. Spinners report no evidence of a burdensome weight of desirable cotton having actually been produced and it seems to be generally believed that if prices should decline in response to an increased yield prospect that a most advantageous opportunity would be presented for acquisition of contracts.

We see no tangible evidence of desirable cotton having been grown this season in price depressing quantity and therefore would agree with the conclusions reached by spinners and investors who are contemplating purchasing in this market if today's report causes a material price decline.

FENNER & BEANE.

New Orleans, December 5.—Cotton prices moved but little today and closed practically unchanged. Trading was largely of an evening up character on account of the holiday and bureau report next Tuesday. The general expectation is for little change in the government figures unless the ginnings fall short of current estimates. There is also a general feeling that the market will do better after the bureau is out of the way owing to the rapid outgo of the crop, large amount of untenderable cotton and advance in stocks and other commodities.

HUBBARD BROS. & CO.

New York, December 5.—Market was very dull all day with some pre-bureau liquidation taking place as a result of the increased private reports and indications that there would be a large ginning report. The report is looked forward to with much interest as it is understood that the government is going to make some sort of an estimate as to the amount of low grade and perished cotton in this crop.

Grain Letters.

JOHN F. CLARK & CO.

Chicago, December 5.—Wheat: Sentiment in most quarters was quite bearish today and the market was under pressure during the first hour. But once more contracts found lodgment in strong hands and in a very short time the market recovered most of the losses of yesterday and early today.

It is within reason to expect a letup in export demand from time to time, with occasional reports of reselling, which will usually be found to represent profit taking by speculative exporters. The market has had a big advance and the price might look high but it is fully justified by conditions and will very likely extend further unless there is a material change.

Coarse Grains: Corn had a firm tone most of the session, even when the wheat market was weak. Speculative interest has improved materially in the past week with the result that the effect of cash grain pressure is minimized. We cannot subscribe to the idea that the movement from first hands will overwhelm the commercial demand, having in mind that the feeding value of the grain will discourage marketing at the present level of prices.

Weekly Metal Review.

New York, December 5.—The inflow of orders in the steel market continued during the past week with no signs of abating and the outlook for December was considered favorable as the new business was evidently in excess of the deliveries. The mild demand was smaller, but railroads were buying other material, especially sheets, and automobile manufacturers placed good orders for sheets for first quarter, anticipating large business. Prices displayed decided stability with firmer trend. Pig iron was very firm and higher on large orders.

The copper market was dominated largely by developments abroad. Weakness in London caused hesitation. A partial rally in London toward the close of the week brought about a somewhat steadier market here, and after selling at the 14-cent level, electrolytic stiffened and producers at the close of the week were asking 14¼ cents.

Tin was erratic. Consumers bought heavily on the dip below 63 cents for straights, but withdrew when prices rallied. Spot metal is scarce.

Lead was steadier toward the close of the week following early weakness in response to a rally abroad.

Zinc was lower early but rallied with a better domestic demand.

Behind the Scenes In the Business World

New York.—The business situation might be summed up as follows:

Money—Abundant, too much so but money rates a little uncertain.

Bonds—Stable and at top price.

Stocks—Profoundly uncertain and overpriced.

Industry—Production rising at a safe but quite definite rate.

Trade—Wholesale and retail selling at record breaking proportions.

Profits—The best since the war.

This leaves two important factors to be accounted for—building and the farm. Both were major influences in the good business of this year.

The building boom shows no sign of abating. Its demise has been predicted weekly for three years. It continues because its observers refuse to see the simple fact that building must not only make up the great post-war shortage, but must take care of replacement and keep pace with the country's natural growth. With all the furious building of the last three years it is not abreast of the actual demand yet. Hence building should continue active.

The farm is in good shape. An examination of farm prices shows that through the year farm products have commanded prices hovering around the general level of commodity prices and that at this moment farm prices are well above the general level of other prices.

The credit supply grows ever. It is measured by the proportion of deposits to loans. By that measure it has grown to unprecedented proportions through the year. It is for this reason that bankers are so keenly interested in pushing forward more foreign loans. Hence foreign lending has been resumed again. Bond issues during November were larger than in several months. Italy got $100,000,000. Several large German issues were floated. An additional $60,000,000 of Italian bonds scattered among private industries is contemplated. Many more are coming.

While all business is good, speculation has outrun trade at an alarming pace. Now a reaction has set in. Uncertainty rules in the stock markets. But the best opinion seems to be that before the market can be called on a sound basis some over-expanded values must be deflated. Stock prices have gone beyond the growth in earnings. This is bound to force a correction.

Retail selling has exceeded all records. The Christmas season has started earlier than usual. Sales in department stores are nearly 20 per cent ahead of last year. In some places the increase is much greater, particularly in the Chicago district. Of course there is some question as to how sound this growth is. A good deal of it has been stimulated by installment selling which is at a rate not altogether wise. But also the growth has been stimulated by price reductions, which is sound. Increasing turnover cuts operating costs and benefits the consumer.

Prices have not advanced much this year. They are lower than they were at the beginning of the year. There has been an advance recently but no one looks for it to go forward. The policy in the most successful lines now is to make things as cheap as possible and keep goods moving. Moreover the public has manifested a decided resistance to price boosts. A level somewhere around 60 per cent above the old pre-war figures seems to be the point at which prices are settling.

One of the spots where trouble may develop is the automobile industry. Competition is fierce—fiercer than in any other industry and recalls some of the old battles in days gone by. Prices have got down now to about as low a point as is safe. So the makers have shifted the ground to the terms of sale. Cars can be bought at the most ridiculous terms. Moreover one sees signs of a return of overdoing the used-car evil. A few large companies are advertising almost frantically for old cars—old cars for new. Nevertheless the automobile companies have had a successful year. Profits have been large. But the industry cannot be said to be on a very desirable foundation when so much of its profits are tied up in outstanding payments.

Congress is now about to meet and we will begin to hear rumors of laws of all sorts. But the general impression is that there is little disposition among the law makers to interfere unduly with business. The general belief is that this congress will do nothing but what will be helpful to business.

The Day in Finance

BY R. L. BARNUM.

Bankers Well Pleased With Trend of General Business During November—Doubt Expressed as To What Will Happen in Building Next Year.

New York, December 5.—Wall street banks are agreed in the December reviews on the general financial and industrial situation and outlook published this week that the trend of general business in November was very satisfactory, that there was no letting down in industries, that confidence in the future is well sustained. It is agreed in these reviews that the railroad industry is on the most solid footing in many years with the long trend indicating continued improvement. Considerable doubt is expressed as to what is going to happen next year in building. It is agreed that the steel trade has a promising outlook for at least the first half of 1926 with similar predictions made regarding other basic industries.

In these reviews, however, the industry to attract the most attention is automobile building. There are many reasons why this should be so. This year has been one of unending surprises in the automobile industry.

Production of passenger cars during the first quarter of this year reached only 797,000 against 994,000 for the corresponding period of 1924. In the second quarter there was an unexpected spurt to a new high record of 1,138,000 against only 857,000 for the same months of 1924. In the third quarter with everybody in the trade thinking in terms of new high records there was an unexpected let-down to 852,000. Then, with everybody prepared for a continued seasonal slowing down the figures just made public for October show a new monthly high for all time. Here are the figures by months and quarters for the first 10 months of the past three years.

January	212,921	293,824	228,872
February	252,803	343,460	260,336
March	332,151	357,045	327,059
First quarter	797,875	994,329	816,267
April	391,302	346,405	351,649
May	382,714	286,324	358,685
June	364,806	225,079	344,022
Second quarter	1,138,822	857,808	1,054,353
	1925	1924	1923
July	357,883	244,544	308,544
August	222,505	255,232	318,888
September	272,418	263,528	302,352
Third quarter	852,801	763,304	924,784
October	406,569	260,881	335,023
Ten months	3,196,067	2,876,322	3,130,430

For the first ten months of this year a new high record was established for production of passenger cars, 1923 being the last high. For the first ten months of this year production of trucks was at a new high of 422,587 against 321,897 for the same period of last year and against 377,344 for the full twelve months of last year which was a high record. With two months of 1925 still to go there is no question but that for both cars and trucks the 4,000,000 mark will be reached and passed. It was this situation and outlook that made the automobile shares the leaders in the bull stock market of last month which was the wildest experienced since 1901.

In the December bank reviews on the general siuation and outlook published this week in which the automobile industry comes in for much discussion no effort is made to hide the fact that this year's high production was made possible through development of the partial payment plan or that the question uppermost in mind is how long production can continue at its existing high rate. Several times in recent years the question has been raised as to whether the automobile industry had not at last reached the point of saturation, but each time something unexpected has developed to give automobile buying a new impetuous. This year's contributions include drastic price cuts with the prices now only half of those of 1913, the exchange of closed for open cars with old cars accepted as part payment, a remarkable growth in the demand for trucks, a remarkable growth in exports, further development of the partial payment plan whereby only from 15 per cent to 20 per cent of the cost of cars is demanded as a cash payment with the balance due in installments running from a year to a year and a half.

It is estimated by Wall street bankers that the total value of paper now being carried representing automobiles sold on the partial payment plan reaches $3,000,000,000. Within the past few days secret meetings have been held here in Wall street for the purpose of bringing about standard rules for increasing the amount of cash paid down and shortening the period covered in time payments. From what could be learned, however, competition in the automobile industry is now so severe that no headway was made at those conferences.

Wall street is of the opinion that production in automobiles has been stimulated about as much as possible by price cutting with manufacturing costs remaining at the existing level. It is believed too that there is no more room for development along the lines of partial payments or in the exchange of open cars for closed cars. There is room, however, it is believed, for further expansion in trucks for domestic use and in exports for both trucks and passenger cars. Every month this year to date 35% ahead of the corresponding period of 1924. For the whole or 1924 there was an increase over 1923 in exports of 17 1-4%.

As Wall street banking people in close touch with the automobile industry see it, however, the most promising field for this industry in the near future is in replacement of new cars in this country for ones worn out. In view of the known sales of cars for the past decade for domestic use it is estimated by Wall street bankers that the annual replacement of light trucks and cars in this country alone with 20,000,000 now in use will now provide for annual production of 3,000,000 cars. With building of good roads on the increases that are possible in exports. And along with domestic replacements and exports the automobile industry has now reached a point where the business of furnishing parts is a large one. Of the $8,000,000,000 annual automobile bill of this country only $2,000,000,000 is for new cars, the balance for parts, gasoline and other expenses.

COMBINED DEPOSITS OF ATLANTA BANKS SHOW BIG INCREASE

Combined deposits of Atlanta banks up to the close of business on November 30, showed an increase of $37,282,856 over the corresponding period for last year, according to records made public Saturday. Combined deposits were placed at $199,180,407. For the same period last year the total reached $161,897,551.

Combined resources of the various institutions reached a total of $228,893,802 on November 30, as compared with $198,069,545 for the same period last year. This reveals an increase of $20,824,257 in combined resources.

Bank clearings in Atlanta also continued to show considerable gain during the past week. Clearings for the week were placed at $82,031,161.58, against $64,831,597.21 for the corresponding week last year or a gain of $17,199,564.37.

Atlanta bankers point to these figures as the best indication that Atlanta is enjoying a period of prosperity, which they declare will be even greater during the coming year.

CURBS CONTINUE TO SHOW GAINS

New York, December 5.—(By the Associated Press.)—Market trend and volume on the curb exchange today continued to follow along similar lines that developed on the recent spirited recovery in many sections. Several issues that had attained prominence on the upturn were given support which was effective in lifting those quotations to new high levels. Chrysler Motors, when issued, rose 3¼ points, selling to a new high at 53½ and Singer Manufacturing moved to a new high at 410, a gain of 10 points from the previous close.

Public utility issues were quiet, due in part to the diversion of speculative activities to the petroleum group.

Trading in the last hour was on an extremely large scale with oil stocks scoring material advances which in many instances moved to new figures for the movement. Several lower priced oils were in active demand at rising quotations, the feature being Lago Petroleum, which sold from 7⅞ to 8 on sales totaling about 40,000 shares.

The week on the curb market was one of an unusual degree of activity and strength. The petroleum stocks as a group demanded most attention partly because of special developments including the stock dividend on Standard Oil of New York and the resumption of dividends on South Penn Oil. The last named stock ranged from 168 to 173. Magnolia, which participated in the Standard Oil of New York dividend rose from 181½ to above 190. Humble Oil made a gain of over 7 points to 81 and International Petroleum, which was influenced by reports that it would be absorbed by Imperial Oil, rose 4 points to above 35. Gilson occupied the most prominent position in the miscellaneous oil issues advancing about 2 points and making a new high record.

There were many important movements also in the industrial group. Chrysler Motor new stock moved up from 46⅝ to 53½ and Stutz Motor advanced over 6 points to above 25. Florida Land was exceptionally heavy, selling coming into the market after the news of the Miami rains and that stock dropped from 65 to 51. Glen Alden Coal after selling at 147 dropped to 140 under selling influenced by the failure of the coal conference.

EXCESS RESERVE SHOWS DECREASE

New York, December 5.—(AP)—The actual condition of clearing house banks and trust companies for the week shows excess reserve of $2,495,370. This is a decrease in reserve of $7,566,070 compared with last week when excess reserve totaled $10,061,440.

FIRST CHRISTIANS TO STAGE ANNUAL MEMBER CANVASS

The First Christian church will take its annual every-member canvass for current expenses, building fund and missions on Sunday. Seventy-five persons under leadership of F. E. Maffett, chairman of the finance committee, will visit all who are not present at the morning service in their homes to receive subscription to the 1926 budget.

Rev. C. R. Stauffer, pastor, will preach at both services Sunday, having as his morning subject at 11 o'clock "Victory Through Faith" and in the evening "Noah, in Favor with God." The First church supports Mrs. J. D. Montgomery as its "Living Link Missionary" to South America. Mrs. Montgomery will be the guest of the church for a week and will deliver an address at the meeting of the women's council Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock and at night at 7 o'clock at the church night service.

Governor Will Head Georgians Urging Chattahoochee Work

Governor Clifford Walker announced Saturday that he would head a delegation composed of the two senators, the entire Georgia congressional delegation and the board of trade of Columbus, which will call on the United States engineering department at Washington to urge favorable report on a project for deepening the Chattahoochee river and for establishing a steamer line from Columbus to the sea.

At the last session of congress a bill was passed authorizing federal engineers to survey the river with this object in view, and this survey is now under way. The delegation going to Washington this week will discuss the plan in detail with engineers and urge upon them the desirability of reporting the project favorably to congress.

New York, December 5.—(By the Associated Press.)—Railroad shares assumed the leadership of the upward movement in the stock market today. With buying stimulated by reports of pending merger developments and the maintenance of earnings and freight traffic at unusually high levels, the average price of twenty representative carrier stocks listed on the New York stock exchange, was carried to the highest figure of the year.

Week-end profit taking swept over the industrial list but sales were fairly well absorbed and price recessions were confined to narrow limits. The irregularity in this section of the market was more than offset by the sustained strength of the rails.

Renewed activity in southern and southwestern rail issues was attributed to reports that merger proposals would be hastened by a desire to complete voluntary consolidations in advance of new legislation of carrier groupings.

Buying converged on two outstanding groups—the so-called Walters Roads in the southeast and the Loree Lines in the southwest. Atlantic Coast Line, Louisville and Nashville, and Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis, which are apparently scheduled for combination into a single system reached the highest levels of the year on gains of one to 9 points. Expectations of early developments in the Loree merger also enlivened bidding for Kansas City Southern, St. Louis Southwestern and Missouri-Kansas, Texas issues.

With New York Central and Southern Railway directors scheduled to meet next week for dividend action, speculative interest in these issues was revived on reports of "favorable developments." Other high grade investment stocks such as Atchison and Union Pacific also were in good demand.

Although many industrial shares were hampered by realizing sales, leading motor issues regained speculative favor. Chrysler soared almost 10 points on rumors that the new shares soon would be placed on a $3 annual dividend basis. General Motors, Hudson and Mack Trucks also moved up but yielded most of their gains before the close.

United States Steel, after selling as high as 135 5-8 closed a point below this figure for a fractional net loss. American Can was hammered down almost 5 points and Dupont lost 2 points but gains of 1 to 3 points were registered by Consolidated Cigar. Detroit Edison, General Electric, Fairbanks-Morse, New York Canners and Postum Cereal.

A rise in sterling exchange to a new high on the current movement above $4.85 left little doubt on the favorable effect of the recent advance in the London bank rate. Today's quotation was only fractionally below the high level reached last May. Other European currencies were quiet with French francs holding firm.

New York, December 5.—(AP)—The cotton market was very quiet again today and prices moved within a range of 10 to 15 points. After selling off to 19.43 at the start, January rallied to 19.53 and colsed at 19.47, the general market closing steady at a net decline of 10 to 15 points.

The market opened steady at a decline of 8 to 15 points under a few overnight selling orders from the south and some local selling which was supposed to reflect expectations of continued free movement of cotton to the market and a tendency to increase estimates of the crop.

December sold off to 20.08 and March to 19.35, net declines of 15 to 18 points.

Week-end covering absorbed the comparatively small offerings at these prices and the forenoon markets rallied on a little trade buying. December sold up to 20.16 and January to 19.48, within 5 or 6 points of Friday's closing quotations. This attracted realizing, apparently, and the last prices were a few points off from the best.

A private crop estimate pointed to a total of 15,725,000 bales which was considerably above the average of previous reports. Nine or 10 of these reports have appeared, with an average crop indication of about 15,400,000 bales, while the average of recent private ginning reports has been in the neighborhood of 13,700,000 bales.

Private cables said hedge selling in Liverpool had been offset by trade calling and continental buying, but houses with Liverpool connections were moderate sellers here during the morning.

Manchester advices reported increased cloth sales for India and an improvement in home trade, but complained of unfavorable conditions in the yarn market.

Fall River cloth sales for the week were estimated at 75,000 pieces.

ORLEANS MARKET PROVES QUIET AFFAIR.

New Orleans, December 5.—(AP)—The cotton market was a quiet affair today even for a short Saturday session. Trading was restricted almost entirely to evening up of commitments in advance of the government report due Tuesday and for over the week-end. Prices fluctuated within very narrow limits, and after an opening decline of 6 to 12 points due to fair weather in the western belt and to rumors that the German cabinet had resigned the price movement was almost negligible. From that low point prices gradually recovered to about even with yesterday's close right near the end, and the close was slightly under the best, showing net losses for the day of 2 to 5 points.

After easing off a few points to 19.20 for January, 18.77 for March and 18.54 for May, or 6 to 12 points under yesterday's close, the market ruled steady for a time and finally rallied, making new highs right near the end, with January at 19.21, March at 18.18 and May 18.61, or 7 to 11 points up from the lows. The close was a little under the best.

Exports for the day were moderate, totaling 18,784 bales.

Only one private estimate was issued today, but that was the largest which has yet appeared, making the crop 15,725,000 bales. Fall River reported sales for the week of 75,000 pieces of print cloths, which is the largest total in a considerable period.

SPOTS IN NEW ORLEANS.

New Orleans, December 5.—(AP)—Cotton spot closed steady at revised quotations; middling unchanged; sales 4,779; low middling 16.96; middling 19.46; good middling 20.46; receipts 7,966; stock 418,794.

Georgia Urged To Increase Yearly Wheat Production

The wheat crop is the most variable, in point of acreage, of all the major crops in the United States. Of wheat, there is either over-production or under-consumption more often than of any other crop.

In addition, the world's crop totaled 3,204,672,000 bushels. The United State crop totaled 797,381,000 bushels or 24.2 per cent of the world's crop. The 10 cotton states produced 68,572,000 bushels, or 8.5 per cent of the United States crop.

Georgia is not a wheat state, but she can produce comparatively large crops whenever she determines so to do. In 1860, when we successfully and uniformly practiced systematic crop diversification and livestock farming, our per capita production of wheat was two and two-fifths bushels.

The annual average production for three years, 1918, 1919, 1920 was 2,495,333 bushels, a per capita of only one and one-sixth bushels.

There were years other than those just mentioned, notably 1915, when Georgia produced 3,575,000 bushels of fine wheat; 1916, 3,808,000 bushels. Results were directly traceable to better grain, treatment of grain against rust, more liberal fertilization.

The per capita consumption of wheat in 1923 was 5 bushels. We produced only 1 1-6 bushels per capita, hence we had to go into the markets and buy enough to supply the deficit.

While it is true that the United States annually produces only 25 per cent of the world's crop, we annually export 150,000,000 and import 30,000,000 bushels. An aditional fact: United States per capita of wheat exceeds per capita requirements 2 1-2 bushels a year; if we include 65,000,000 bushels of rye, the excess is 8 bushels.

There seems to be a purpose in Georgia to seed a larger acreage than usual in wheat this year. That would be a fine departure. In order to have protection against the Hessian fly, which attacks wheat in the spring, the practice is to delay sowing until one or

New York, December 5.—(By the Associated Press.)—Bond prices continued to forge slowly ahead in today's quiet trading, which was featured by the strength of the railroad issues. Both investment and semi-speculative members of the carrier group shared the improvement which marked dealings in these companies' stock.

With railway earning for October estimated at close to $140,000,000, car loadings continuing at the rate of more than a million a week, and several dividend and merger developments in prospect before the end of the year, buying of these obligations reached fairly wide proportions. Southern Railway 6 1-2s reached a new top price at 113 and substantial gains also were recorded by "Katy" adjustment 5s, Chesapeake & Ohio convertible 5s, Frisco income 6s, New Haven convertible 6s and Missouri Pacific 4s.

In the foreign division, Belgian 6s made a belated response to the extension of additional credits for stabilization of monetary conditions. French government and municipal obligations also made good showings, while the Paris-Orleans railway 7s rallied 1 3-8 points.

Trading in industrial bonds was featured by the decline of almost 6 points in Hoe & Co. 6 1-2s. The selling movement was unexplained.

Other heavy spots were Empire Gas 7 1-2s, Midvale Steel 5s and American Beet Sugar 6s.

New financing in prospect for next week included a $16,000,000 bond issue for the Northern States Power company.

Cottonseed Oil.

New Orleans December 5.—The cottonseed oil futures market was quiet again today and although ruling somewhat easier on near positions was firmer for the more distant months. Lard was a shade lower. The dullness is attributed to lack of desire to trade in advance of the forthcoming ginnings report. Prime summer yellow oil was quoted at 9.70 or down five points. Prime crude at 8¼ unchanged. Futures closed quiet. December, 9.68; January, 9.65; March, 9.67; May, 9.71; July, 9.79.

New York, December 5—Cottonseed oil was quiet today with the trend lower, underselling of the late months by refiners and local liquidation on the downturn in lard and less active cash demand. Closing prices were unchanged for July and 4 to 10 points net lower for the balance. Sales, 3,400 barrles. Prime crude, 9.00 asked; prime summer yellow, spot, 10.20; December closed 10.44; January, 10.11; March, 10.15; May, 10.23.

Liverpool Cotton.

Liverpool, December 5.—Cotton spot, quiet; prices steady. American, strictly good middling, 11.25; good middling, 11.00; strictly middling, 10.70; middling, 10.30; strictly low middling, 9.90; low middling, 9.50; strictly good ordinary, 9.10; good ordinary, 8.50.

Sales 4,000 bales, including 1,900 American; receipts, 15,000 bales, all American.

Futures closed steady: December, 10.06; January, 10.05; March, 10.08; May, 10.09; July, 10.02; September, 9.85; October, 9.77.

Sugar.

New York, December 5.—An easier undertone developed in the retail sugar market early today. Offerings were more liberal. Sales reported included 40,000 bags of Cuban from store late yesterday at 4.08 and today 20,000 bags for second-hand December shipment at 4.15.

Increased offerings in the spot market and a private Cuban crop estimate, placing the yield at 5,089,000 bags, led to renewed selling pressure in raw sugar futures, with final prices 2 to 4 points net lower. December closed 2.83; March 2.39; May 2.50; July 2.59. The refined sugar market was quiet and unchanged at 5.00 to 5.50 for fine granulated.

VITROLITE COMPANY REPORTS RECORD YEAR

Headquarters of the Vitrolite Products company, 10 West Baker street, Atlanta, reports a new high record for sales and installations this year. During 1925 the company has handled a volume of business far exceeding that transacted by this branch in any preceding year.

Although in business here only three years the Vitrolite Products company has been so successful in serving the south it has made an enviable record in every line and the results have far exceeded the company's most sanguine expectations.

E. J. Jones is president, W. W. Draper vice president and treasurer and A. T. Hicks, secretary and general manager of the Vitrolite Products company. The service given by the company is much broader than indicated by its title for in addition to vitrolite, a material marvelously growing in popularity, it also makes installations of marble, tile and terrazzo.

Here in Atlanta the Vitrolite Products company has handled quite a series of interesting contracts, among which may be mentioned the following:

Carlton apartments; marble, tile and terrazo and also bath accessories and cabinets. Pringle & Smith, architects; the Foundation company, contractors.

Bath accessories for 750 Ponce de Leon apartment house. G. Lloyd Preacher and company, architects; H. J. Carr, contractor.

Fulton county high school on Washington street; marble installation. Hentz, Reid & Adler, architects; C. F. Nonemaker, contractor.

The company has made marble installations on two telephone exchange buildings this year—buildings of the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph company at Asheville, N. C., and Montgomery, Ala. Marye, Alger & Alger were architects for both buildings and the Barge-Thompson company, contractors.

In Florida the Vitrolite Products company has handled a large number of contracts this year, many of them of substantial character. Its Miami contracts include the following:

Realty Board Building; marble, tile and terrazzo.

Allison hospital, marble and tile. John B. Orr, contractor.

Central arcade, tile and marble.

Old McAllister hotel; tile and marble. George W. Langford, contractor.

Windsor properties; marble, tile and terrazo.

Bank of Bay Biscayne; marble and tile; Fred T. Ley & Co., contractor.

Miami Bank & Trust Co.; marble, tile and terrazzo; George W. Langford, contractor.

New McAllister hotel; marble, tile, terrazzo and vitrolite. George W. Langford, contractor.

Hi-Li building; marble, granite and tile.

Venetian hotel; tile, marble and terrazzo. Pringle & Smith, architects; Turner Construction Co., contractor.

Watson hotel; tile, marble, terrazzo accessories and cabinet. G. Lloyd Peacher & Co., architects; Realty Construction Co., contractors.

McAllister Arcade; marble and tile. George W. Langford, contractor.

Out of its Tampa office the Vitrolite Products company has handled quite a number of jobs in that city and also various installations in Sarasota, Lakeland and other cities; handling exclusively the marble, tile, terrazzo and vitrolite work of several of the larger contractors operating in Tampa and other cities in that section. Among its Tampa contracts is the installation of marble in the Tampa Terrace hotel, for which Hentz, Reid & Adler were architects and Adair & Son, builders.

The Vitrolite Products company installed the marble in the new Andrew Jackson hotel at Nashville, Tenn., for which the Southern Ferro-Concerte company was contractor.

This company is also the marble contractor for the new Masonic temple at Jackson, Miss. N. W. Overstreet, architect.

Th ecompany made marble and tile installations in the new Sigma Nu fraternity house at Auburn, Ala.; Warren, Knight and Davis, architects and C. A. Fulghum, contractor.

Vitrolite, a material expertly installed by the Vitrolite Products company, is 30 years old, but it is only in recent years that it came into general use in this section. It is rapidly increasing in popularity and numerous installations are being made. Its advantages for the purposes for which it is ordinarily installed are obvious.

Stop Speeders in Turkey.

The Oriental has always been ingenious in devising original methods of police administration, and, since the citizen rarely has any rights that government need respect, these methods are employed without compunction. We understand that the prefect of Constantinople, annoyed by the careless and excessive speed of which the drivers of motor cars are often guilty, has equipped his police officers with pieces of plank thickly studded with nails, which they are authorized to throw down in the street in front of any motor car that seems to be approaching too rapidly. The report adds that the threat has been sufficient, and that motor car traffic in Constantinople is proceeding today with extreme deliberation.—Youths' Companion.

Atlanta Getting Ready For Christmas Business Behind Merry-Making

Humdrum Activity of Working Hands Goes on Amid Trees and Tinsel Trimming.

Even in the midst of Atlanta's busy whirl, few stop to think of the tremendous part Atlanta and Atlantans are playing in the Christmas festivities of the south.

Christmas is a wonderful occasion for the assertion of unselfish emotions. Throughout every Yuletide holiday there seems more than the usual warmth of human nature in the blood and the pulse beats faster with the throb of merry-making.

Yet behind all this tinsel and glitter, back of the wreaths of red and green and the pyramids of pine needles known as Christmas trees—in the rear of all this gorgeous and dazzling display there is a very humdrum machinery at work. The hand of man is hammering 10-penny nails into two-by-fours and tying ribbons round thorny limbs.

This off-stage business of preparing Christmas for the south is now going on in Atlanta. This activity, in fact, has been in progress for some months past. Preparations for Christmas in the capital of the southeast are approaching a climax.

A glance at the houses advertising on this "Buy-It-From-Atlanta" page will indicate the variety of services, products and stuffs radiating from Atlanta along the highways and the byways, into every city and hamlet of the south. Surely, here is the center of the earth for buyers and purchasers in the less fortunately situated parts of the south.

Have you stopped to think what you may need this Christmas—from Atlanta? Have you checked your needs on the "Buy-It-From-Atlanta" page? Write for any service or article to the advertiser signing the announcement and tell your needs for Christmas and the New Year. You will find every advertiser on this page giving the kind of service of which Atlanta is proud—the kind of service which has helped build Atlanta from a crossroad in the hills to the great metropolis of today, the gateway to the south. Ask for it—Atlanta will produce it for you.

NEW GATEWAY TO WEST FOR SOUTH'S PRODUCTS

Knoxville, Tenn., December 5.—(Special.)—In connection with its new John Sevier terminal, located six miles east of Knoxville, the Southern Railway system has established a transfer station which is now the clearing house for package freight, moving from Virginia, Carolinas and east Tennessee territory to the west and southwest, and is greatly expediting the movement of manufactured products and merchandise from the south.

John Sevier transfer has capacity for handling 120 cars per day and is now handling an average of 500 cars per week. Freight for the west is loaded to this transfer where solid cars are made up for a large number of points including Cincinnati, Louisville, East St. Louis, Memphis, New Orleans, Cleveland, Detroit, Indianapolis, Chicago, Minneapolis-St. Paul, Kansas City, Springfield, Mo., and Cheyenne, Wyo.

For Chicago proper cars are loaded to move via four different routes, while to insure the prompt movement of freight for points beyond, cars are loaded to three leading transfer stations in the Chicago territory. Similarly cars are loaded for direct delivery to three northbound lines at Cincinnati, as well as to the Southern's own freight house, and to two western lines at East St. Louis.

A great volume of freight is now being loaded direct to John Sevier, which was formerly handled at the Southern's transfers at Spencer, N. C.; Hayne, S. C., and Inman, Ga. As a result backhauling and indirect movement have been eliminated and the movement generally accelerated.

FULTON MARKET REPORTS HOLIDAY TRADE BOOMING

The Fulton Market company, now operating three stores in Atlanta, reports an unusually large demand for turkeys this season, and for oysters with which to make turkey dressing and for other sea foods and meats.

For the housewife who is not familiar with the fancy variety of meats and vegetables at any Fulton market in Atlanta one visit will suffice to thrill her with delight. Fish, oysters, poultry, fresh vegetables and fruits and fancy western meats are some of the tempting items listed on the Fulton market menu for shoppers.

This company also offers to retail houses in the southeast prompt shipments of sea foods ordered from the Atlanta headquarters of the Fulton market. Fish of the season can be supplied promptly and on short notice. Retail dealers throughout Georgia and the southeast are invited to call on the Fulton Market company in Atlanta for shipments of fresh fish, oysters, other sea foods and western meats.

SANTA FE SYSTEM WILL RUN SPECIAL TRAIN TO PASADENA

J. S. Rose, general agent Santa Fe railway, Atlanta, states that the Santa Fe system, following its custom of some years, will operate from Chicago night of December 28 "Special California Limited train to Tournament of Roses, Pasadena," which is held at Pasadena, Calif., each New Year day.

This luxurious train will be composed of most modern all-steel Pullman equipment, with many innovations recently inaugurated, and its popularity with the public is evidenced by the demand for space on it at this early date.

HUGE SCALES SOLD FOR FLORIDA ROAD

Three tremendous scales with a capacity of 150 tons each have been installed for the Florida East Coast railroad by the Howe Scale company, headquarters at 9 Stewart avenue, Atlanta. This is one of the largest orders of this kind ever filled in the south. Local representatives of the Howe Scale company have given excellent service in this particular work.

The Howe Scale company's factory at Rutland, Vermont, was established in 1857. The southern branch was established by W. Frank Daub, on January 1, 1916, Mr. Daub being the southern manager. Seven salesmen now cover North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida and Alabama.

In the labor shops of this company at Atlanta are 15 experienced scale mechanics brought here from the factory. They can be called on when needed to serve scales, warehouse trucks, safes and refrigerators.

The Howe Scale company reports a very satisfactory increase in business and the future for the southern division with headquarters at Atlanta is considered brighter than ever before in the history of the company.

Kamper Market To Have Reindeer Meat for Sale

Everybody remembers the childhood stories of Santa Claus and his wonderful reindeer, and this is one holiday in which the reindeer, sometimes regarded as a myth, will actually make his appearance in Atlanta, and this is how it comes about.

Thirty years ago the Eskimos of northern Alaska were facing starvation because the white people had killed off the walrus, seal and other animals upon which they had fed for many generations. To correct this condition the department of education of the United States imported a few hundred reindeer with Lapland herders to teach the Eskimo the art of raising reindeer. The climate and food of Alaska has proved so conducive to this enterprise that the government now estimates that there are 250,000 reindeer in Alaska, although many thousands have been slaughtered for domestic needs and for export.

From these vast herds the Kamper Grocery company market has obtained a shipment of meat and the skins will be on display and the meat on sale during the holiday season.

Game meat is the healthiest meat in the world, and, while the reindeer is a domestic animal, his venison is as pure and palatable as any wild deer in any part of the world, with the additional advantage that during his whole life he lives upon the purest of food—reindeer moss—and is reared under climatic conditions that produce the most delicious meat obtainable.

All animals exported are young steers and are slaughtered at a time when they are prime and fat. The refrigeration they undergo in shipment only serves to make them more tender. The people of Atlanta will appreciate the enterprise of the Kamper Grocery company market which has prompted it to obtain for the holiday season a quantity of this rare meat and will await with interest the display of reindeer skins which will serve as notice that reindeer steak is now ready to serve.

A rocket designed to travel six miles a second has been invented.

In Siam monkeys are made to bite coins to see if they are counterfeit.

WRIGHTS SUPPLYING MANY LARGE PLACES

Max Wright, president of the Wright company, 425-427 Whitehall street, Atlanta, reports steady increase of business in supplying equipment for hotels, restaurants, cafeterias, colleges and similar institutions throughout the south.

Just now Mr. Wright's company is carrying on a campaign to introduce the Wright line of equipment into southern institutions not fully familiar with the merits of the Wright line. This special offer, which is limited in time, will enable proprietors who get in touch with Mr. Wright to enjoy the advantages of the special terms offered during the limited period of this sale to introduce the Wright line to new friends and customers.

The policy of Mr. Wright's company is proving particularly popular here in the south, where he is following a plan to build up a great southern industry, not by fighting representatives of competitive lines of other sections destructively, but by constructively erecting a factory with sales and distribution which will far surpass any products in articles of this kind obtained in this section of the country.

Mr. Wright's policy is broad and far-sighted. His field, according to his plans, will not be confined simply to the south, but will embrace territories throughout the nation and eventually throughout the world.

WEYMAN AND CONNORS SHOWS GOOD RECORD

Increased demands for real estate bonds and mortgages are reported by Weyman and Connors, headquarters on the fifth floor of the Grant building. Weyman and Connors handles direct first mortgage bonds and real estate bonds. They make sales ranging from $1,000 to $10,000.

For 35 years Weyman and Connors has been lending money for private investors without a single loss in principal or interest.

The personnel of this company is exceptionally well known in the social, business and fraternal life of the south and many of the members of the Weyman and Connors organization are nationally known among leading financiers of the country.

Weyman and Connors reports a gratifying increase in business and looks for a continued growth of the south with corresponding prosperity in every part of this section.

DEMAND FOR SEALS IS LARGE, LOCAL COMPANY AVERS

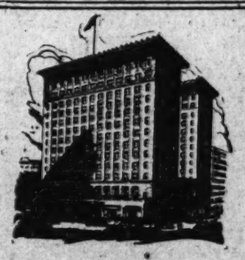

Few houses prove more generally useful to a business concern than does the Dixie Seal and Stamp company, with headquarters at 33 Walton street, Atlanta.

This company handles rubber stamps, numbering machines and stenciling machines for business houses. Through conscientious service this company has succeeded in establishing a high-class clientele of business houses, factories, textile mills and other institutions in Atlanta, Georgia and the south. Many orders are received from distant points and these orders are handled by the Dixie Seal and Stamp company with dispatch and accuracy.

Catalog will be mailed on request, according to representatives of the company, who invite correspondence from firms interested.

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

SUNDAY DECEMBER 6th, 1925

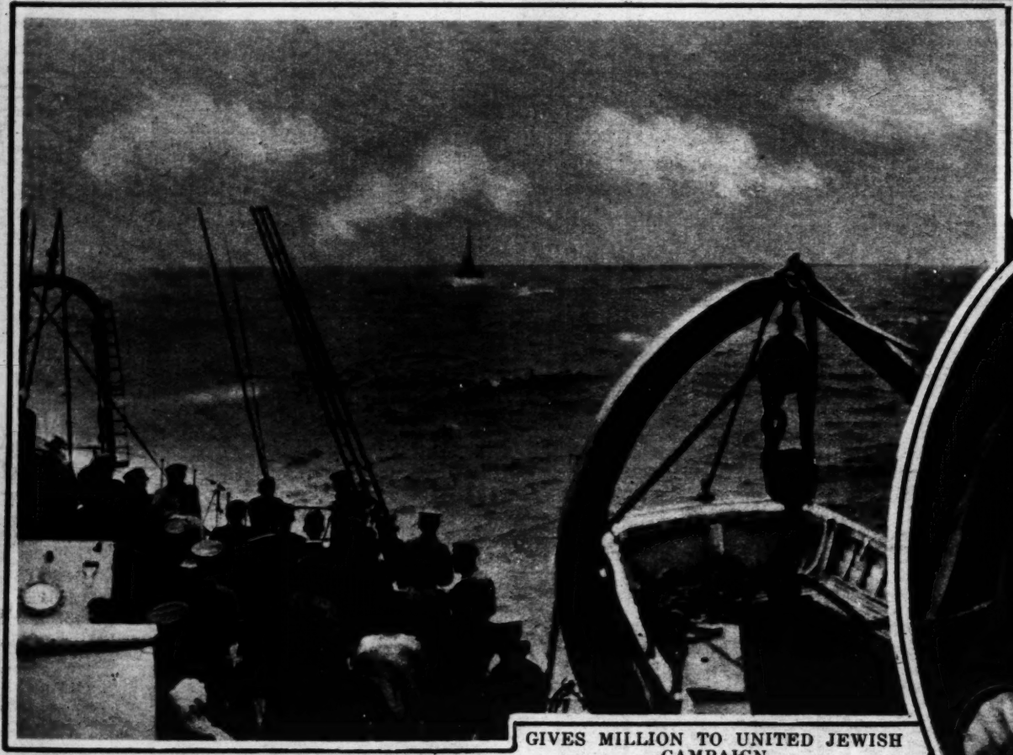

CALIFORNIA'S BIGGEST SMILE.
This monster gave people a whale of a smile even when it was stranded at Long Beach, Cal. His smile didn't help him, though, for he was shot by a policeman. (Photoworld)

(Warlick, Macon)

ADOPTED BY THE ENGINEER WHO OHPHANED HER
Evelyn Castle's mother and father were killed when a Southern Pacific train hit their car at a crossing near Harrisburg, Ore., but now Evelyn is happy again because she has been adopted by Harvey Carpenter, engineer of the train that struck the car. (Henry Miller, Inc.)

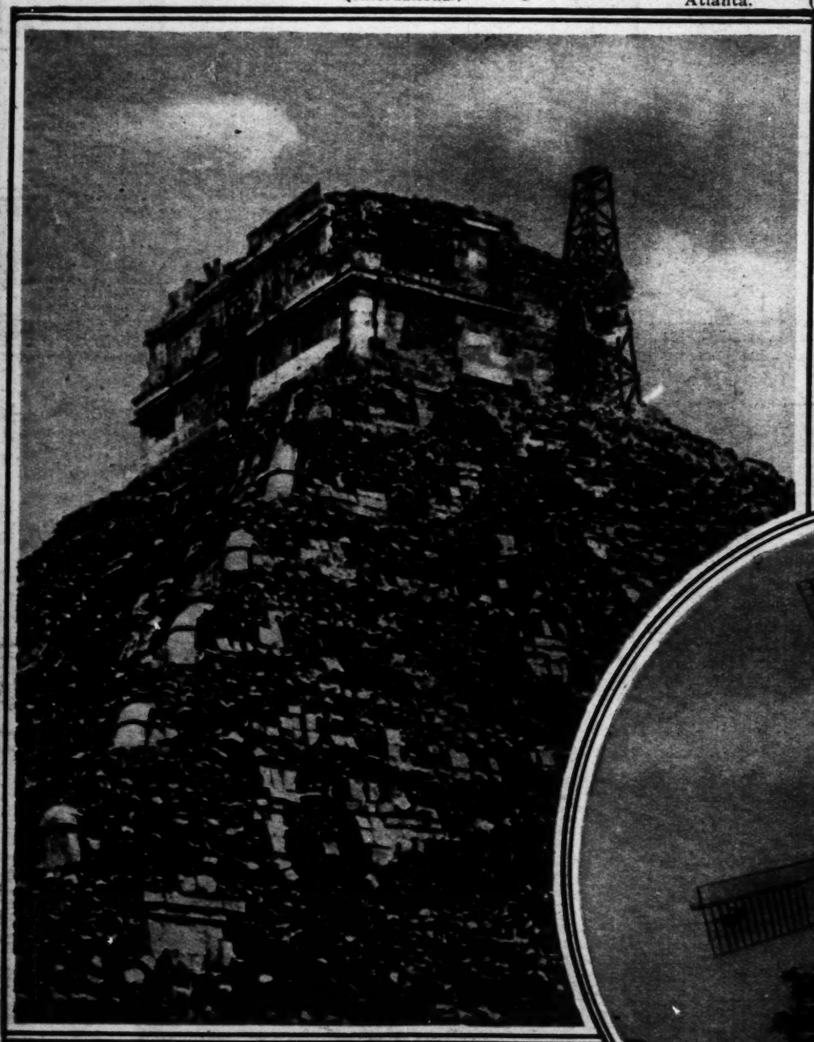

SEEKING THE GRAVE OF ILL-FATED BRITISH SUB
Rescue vessels are pictured here during the course of their search for the British submarine M-1, sunk during maneuvers off the British coast.
(International)

GIVES MILLION TO UNITED JEWISH CAMPAIGN
Julius Rosenwald, of Chicago, who has given $1,000,000 as the first contribution to the fund of $15,000,000 for the United Jewish campaign. Mr. Rosenwald will attend the opening of the campaign in Atlanta. (C. J. Holleran)

A BEVY OF BEAUTIES
The state railroad commissioner, O. R. Bennett, member of the Georgia Public Utilities Commission, and Mrs. Bennett, with their seven attractive daughters. In the picture are left to right, front row, Ethel Bennett, Annie Bennett. Mrs. Bennett, the commissioner, Miss Bessie Bennett and Ruth Bennett and, standing, Miss Mabel Bennett, Miss Nelle Bennett and Miss Blanche Bennett.
(Kenneth Rogers.)

SHOES FROM HATS
This is the novel way a department store made use of a surplus of panama hats. It had them changed into panama shoes. The hat and the shoe are pictured. (Kadel & Herbert)

THE METHUSELAH OF PARROTS
is this ancient bird, "Pat Callahan," of Denver, 70 years old. In 1875 "Pat" helped white settlers rout a band of Indians with his screaming. After several attempts to shoot the bird, as he flew over their heads shouting "Give 'em hell, boys," the Indians fled. (International)

AFTER THE DANCE

(When the old-time fiddler reeled off the tunes for American Legion dance at Helen, Ga.)

All night long with the fiddle and the bow
The old-time fiddler of the Long Ago
Played the old-time tunes for the dancing feet
To the place where Night and Morning meet.

"Rabbit in de Brier Patch"
And "Ol' Camp Groun',"
"Swing yo' pardners
Till de room spins roun'."

All night long, by the music led,
Till the stars were sleepy and went to bed,
And the nodding fiddler, of the tired hand,
Said: "De geats an' de ladies is in happy land!"

Then 'twas "Goodnight now
To the fiddle and the bow,
And the old-time fiddler
Of the Long Ago!"

Be Slender Again

As you once were. It is easy now

Note how slenderness prevails today. All ideas of style and beauty, health and fitness now demand it. In every circle you can see that excess fat is not one-tenth so common as it was.

The reason lies largely in a modern discovery, in Marmola Prescription Tablets. Millions have employed them. For 18 years they have been reporting their results to others. As a result, people are now using over 100,000 boxes of Marmola every month.

Marmola combats the cause of the trouble, which usually lies in a certain gland. It reduces one to the weight desired, then that normal weight continues.

One simply takes four tablets daily. No abnormal exercise or diet is required. When reduction is sufficient, stop.

Reduction is not too rapid. It rarely exceeds one pound per day. So the body adjusts itself to the new conditions. Wrinkles are avoided.

The results are reliable. So reliable that after 18 years of proving every druggist signs a guarantee.

Countless people all about you know what Marmola does. They have gained by Marmola, not only slim figures, but additional health and vitality. Every user will urge you to employ this modern method.

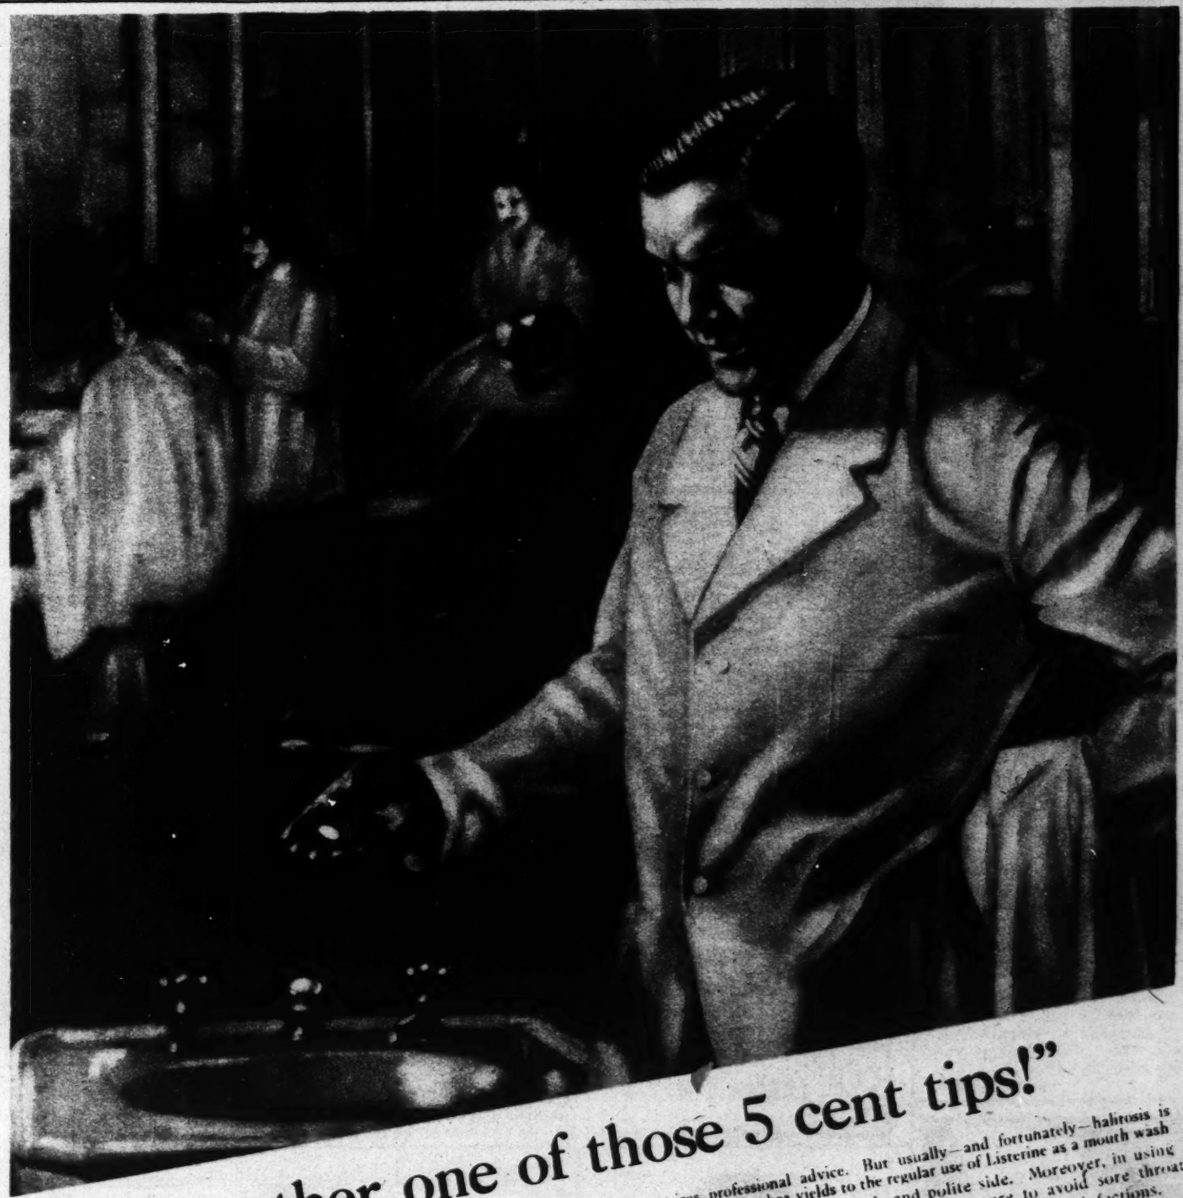

Investigate Marmola. You owe that to yourself. Excess fat is an offense. It has no excuse today. The coupon will bring you samples free. Also a book which states every ingredient, tells how Marmola acts, and why. And it brings you our guarantee. Clip the coupon—do it now—in fairness to yourself.

Marmola Prescription Tablets are sold by all druggists at $1 per box. Send this coupon for our latest book, a 25c sample free, and our guarantee. Clip it now.

"Another one of those 5 cent tips!"

HE was a good-looking fellow and one of the best barbers in the shop.

He did his best to be agreeable to customers yet he noticed that patrons often avoided his chair and many, many times his tip was so small that it seemed almost beggarly.

He was at a loss to understand why.

You, yourself, rarely know when you have halitosis (unpleasant breath). That's the insidious thing about it. And even your closest friends won't tell you.

Sometimes, of course, halitosis comes from some deep-seated organic disorder that requires professional advice. But usually—and fortunately—halitosis is only a local condition that yields to the regular use of Listerine as a mouth wash and gargle. It puts you on the safe and polite side. Moreover, in using Listerine to combat halitosis, you are quite sure to avoid sore throat and those more serious illnesses that start with throat infections.

Listerine halts food fermentation in the mouth and leaves the breath sweet, fresh and clean. Not by substituting some other odor but by really removing the old one. The Listerine odor itself quickly disappears.

This safe and long-trusted antiseptic has dozens of different uses; note the little circular that comes with every bottle. Your druggist sells Listerine in the original brown package only—never in bulk. There are four sizes: 14 ounce, 7 ounce, 3 ounce and 1¼ ounce. Buy the large size for economy.—Lambert Pharmacal Company, Saint Louis, U. S. A.

Overhead

BLUE RIBBON FICTION

Margaret Culkin Banning

The Story of a Young Man With Money Who Always Counted the Cost.

He noticed the girl with her tomato scarf still around her and her hat on the floor, lying asleep on the narrow brass bed.

EVERY one knew what Kenneth Badger's point of view would be before he began to speak. He talked reluctantly, as if he hated to spend an opinion, his shy eyes deliberately expressionless behind their glasses, his competent mouth set in decision.

"I don't think the club needs a new building," he said. 'This one is good enough. Cut down the overhead instead of increasing it. The University club is eternally in debt, and now we contemplate a new building with increased expenses, higher taxes, new furnishings, all the rest of it. What do we get out of it?'

Sidney Blair chewed his cigarette, and looked reflectively at Kenneth. He was the chief advocate of the new building but unfortunately in no position to finance it. He knew he was at a disadvantage, but the other men waited for him to reply to Kenneth and he took up the cudgels blandly.

"Well, Badger, we'd get a good deal of pleasure out of it. We would have something to be proud of, a place we could enjoy. If we bought that site on the hill the property would probably appreciate in the next ten years considerably. And in the meantime we'd have one of the best university clubs in the city, a place to entertain visitors to the city, an institution to be proud of."

Badger let the arguments sink into a pause of unanswering contempt.

"You asked me how I stand," he said at length, "I'm only telling you what I feel. I don't think real estate speculation is the function of a university club, and don't believe in increasing overhead expenses. If it's possible, they ought to be cut down."

It was an ultimatum on any possible contribution which he might have made to the new club, and his contribution was almost necessary for he was one of the richest university men in the city. The meeting broke up in little trickles of discussion. Badger said good-night and left the room, conscious that the eyes of some of the others followed him. He knew what was in their glances. Estimate, unwilling admiration, resistance to his point of view, approval—he was used to it and confident that his arguments were sound. But he also knew vaguely that there was hardly enough friendship in the group to warrant his hanging around for a game of pool or a rubber of bridge.

He had a last glimpse of Blair dealing out cards to a group around the card table and still chewing the cigarette which he had forgotten to light.

"That bird," Blair was saying, raising leisurely eyes to follow the other man's exit, "is a blight."

"What does he do with his money anyhow?" some one wondered.

"Counts it," suggested Blair.

"They say he sometimes carries a checking account of half a million."

"And made it in the last ten years."

"Lives at a high-class boarding house.".

"Married?"

"O, my God, no," said Blair, "think of what the overhead would be!"

The subject of comment went out of the club and down the street. He noted the line of cars parked there. He saw Blair's car—Blair had picked him up the other day—a beautiful heavy automobile with great tires and a perfectly fitted body—Stevenson's shining sedan, and other coupes and roadsters and touring cars which he could not identify. He wondered if Blair had paid for his car yet. That fellow was in pretty deep. Instead of buying cars and looking out for new club houses, he ought to be in his office figuring how he was going to take care of the new factory building the Blair interests were putting up. It was the kind of night that provokes a thousand compliments. But Kenneth paid no attention to its silver and black beauty. He was still thinking about the proposed university club and the folly of it. It had become a habit with him to reflect on such follies. He saw them everywhere contrasting with his own success. Why couldn't those fools see that the only way to get ahead was to cut down on overhead? It was overhead and display that ruined people. Look at these fools paying and paying for houses like these he was passing, great structures that were only synonyms for taxes and repairs. Look at these cars parked everywhere. That was what was making living so unsound. Money wasted. Why didn't people take taxis? Or walk?

He stopped at a plain brick house set close on the street. It might be a boarding house but it was an exceedingly comfortable one. And it cost only a fixed sum for board and room. No tricky expenses creeping up on him all the time.

His rooms were on the third floor—front ones and quite as good as the corresponding ones on the second that Mrs. Davis had vainly urged him to take to save himself from climbing another flight of steps. Kenneth closed the hall door quietly, and went up the neatly carpeted stairs. He liked to think that in another moment he would be inside the friendly walls of his own rooms. Tonight, after the almost hostile atmosphere of the club, they seemed especially welcome.

As he turned the second landing, he saw a girl going up ahead of him. It was the Dale girl, doubtless just home from the newspaper. He knew her slightly for she had been in the boarding house only a couple of weeks and seemed regularly to absent herself from most of Mrs. Davis' meals.

Hearing his steps, she turned.

"Hello," she greeted him, informally.

"Good evening," said Kenneth.

SHE had reached the second landing, and stood with her hand on the railing. A red scarf, matching a dab of straw hat, swung from her shoulder.

"Boarding houses all smell alike, don't they?" she asked, "even the awfully clean ones like this."

"Smell?" asked Kenneth, unconsciously sniffing the air.

The girl's shoulders raised.

"It may not be an actual smell. It's an atmosphere. You know when you come in here that the place doesn't belong to any one. All institutions reek with shared air."

"You don't sound very sociable," said Kenneth, for loss of something better.

She confronted him as he came on her own level on the landing, her eyes serious and tired.

"I'm ghastly sociable. That's the trouble. You can't be sociable with shut doors. In rooms that are hired."

"No," he agreed. "I suppose not."

She still did not offer to let him pass her, and he could hardly push by. There he was, stopped on the landing, with his own desirable door in sight, by an intrusive, tomato colored girl, or so he regarded her in that moment. She seemed lurid to him. His theory of keeping away from the type of girl that the Dale girl was had grown into a habit. He didn't like girls who worked on newspapers and started conversations and probably tried to be shocking. Her eyes were on him impudently, but with decency.

"I suppose you haven't anything to read that you'd lend me? I simply can't face that room of mine with-ammunition. My own books I've read to limpness."

"What kind of book do you want?"

"Anything to destroy the environment."

Kenneth stiffened.

"Sorry," he said, "I've nothing you would like."

She let him pass, and he went into his rooms and closed the door, dropping his hat and coat with relief that the incidents of the evening were over. He lit the green lamp on his table, and looked around with satisfaction at the fine stability and good sense of his rooms. There were the three bookcases, glass doored to keep out the dust—the fine deep leather chairs, the soft Morocco couch. The door to the bedroom was open, and he knew the room was in order like this. With his first breath of satisfaction over, he went methodically to fill his pipe, and began to reflect on the Dale girl. Volatile — discontented — full of wrong ideas. Girls who had been brought up as she had in ill-balanced luxury and had lost it, would be marked. She ought to be glad she could live in a place like this and enjoy the environment without trying to destroy it. Destroy environment! That wasn't what books were for.

He went over to his bookcases and regarded the books proudly. Of course, he could have lent her something. Not Conrad—not any of the political stuff—she wouldn't care for most of these. His eyes fell on a book bound in yellow cloth. There was the sort of thing she was looking for—that book which he had bought by accident, misled by the title, and which had kept him awake one night with its absurd mocking magic. He took it out and fingered it. He'd like to show her he had it.

For ten minutes he resisted the impulse as a foreign and dangerous one, then found himself going upstairs to the girl's room. He knew where she must live, because all the other people on that floor had been there a long time and there was only one possibly vacant room, which the Dale girl had taken. At first he thought she must be out of the room. The door was open and the light was on. He looked in meaning to leave the book.

IT WAS a smaller room than either of his. Neat marquisette curtains at the windows, neat wicker chairs painted sky blue, a neat green blue rug without much pile. Against the background of the clashing blues a wardrobe trunk lined in velvet and half open stood out, and a dressing table covered with beautiful and costly brushes and combs and toilet articles. In the center of the table which Mrs. Davis provided for books was a statuette—a strange wisp of marble, a sculptured nude. The cover had been taken from the oak table, and the plaintive little statue stood starkly alone on it. A pair of oxfords in shoe trees—a soft heap of embroidered mauve silk across a chair—all these things Kenneth saw before he noticed the girl with her tomato scarf still around her and her hat on the floor, lying already asleep on the narrow brass bed.

The electric light streamed on her from the unshaded burner above. She lay in a desolate little heap, as if she had been too weary or disconsolate to undress. Her hair was soft and thick and curly and her mouth sweet in repose. Kenneth had never seen a woman except his mother, really asleep, as he remembered. His mother had always been surrounded by a halo of curl papers. It seemed to him that he was looking at something very sad at first, and then it changed from sadness into something less definable. Only a minute he stayed—then his habitual caution prodded him fiercely. What on earth was he doing alone in a young girl's room at this time of night? Or at least on the threshold of the room? His retreat was an act for farce comedy. He lifted his feet high in withdrawal but unnecessarily so for the girl did not stir and no doors creaked along the hall.

Again in his room Kenneth breathed in relief, and reflected that he had been indiscreet. But the picture of the girl stayed with him as he tried to compose himself for sleep. She looked so lonely and abandoned, asleep desolately with her red hat on the floor and the quiet beautiful pagan statue in the middle of her table. She ought not to sleep that way—and with the light on. The light might be left on all night. Whether the irregular light or the neglected girl kept him restless was doubtful. But they stayed in his mind, harassing it.

For some reason he took an extra look at himself in the mirror above his orderly chiffonier the next morning, a look which failed to exhilarate him. His eyes, exaggerated a little by his glasses, were not inspiring. He looked like an average man, average height, average weight, with the average amount of dull brown hair on the top of his head. Once or twice a year Kenneth gazed at his reflection in the glass appraisingly, and then went back with renewed zeal and skill to making money. He had used to look at himself when he was in college rather more frequently and more discouragedly. No girl had ever glanced at him with interest as he walked across the campus, and then he had not the secret comfort of an amazing bank account.

Now he had ceased to care whether girls saw him or not. In fact, he had become wary of sudden friendly invitations to dinner by men whose fortunes were intertwined with his own. He had gone to some of the dinners and met some of the daughters. They had been pleasant to him—occasionally coquettish, but they hadn't liked him, he knew. They didn't like him any more than the men who courted his favor and his ready money liked him. But he had the whip of the ready money and he always meant to have it. Those early years on the farm, the great, overtaxed, hopeless farm, which had killed his mother first and then his father, had taught him that the inner secret of safe existence was ready money.

Kenneth had fought his way through the university through every course relating to money and banking. He sat in the classrooms, a shabby, intense scarecrow of a spectacled boy, and learned the theory of high finance. Then he had come to the city to work in a bank among men who knew nothing of theory but much of practice. The bank was his laboratory. That was ten years ago. He had his own investment house now.

In Mrs. Davis' dining room the guests, as Mrs. Davis said, ate at small tables. It was a pleasant room with fresh flowers in the little glass vases twice a week, little mimeographed menus on the tables, and neat waitresses in black and white. Kenneth had a table for himself, as was fitting—a table for two so that he could occasionally if he wished bring in a guest. But usually he ate alone, bowing gravely to the other members of the boarding house family who took great pride in him, feeling it was quite a thing for their mutual place of residence to shelter a young man of such orderly habits and so much prestige and money.

The Dale girl was eating breakfast as he went into the dining room. She was sitting at one of the larger tables between an elderly man and an elderly woman, and she was apparently gay, for all three were smiling and the rest of the people at the table were trying to listen in. Kenneth shot a shy glance at her. She looked rested. He felt intimate with her, as he looked at her morning freshness and remembered how she had looked last night. She was brave. There was no doubt about that. After all, she had been caught in the wheels. The smash of the Dale fortune had been spectacular.

She was not wearing the tomato colored scarf and hat this morning. Her dress was blue, which was all Kenneth could tell about it except that it was not navy blue, a color with which his tailor had familiarized him, and she had another inconsequent small hat dragged down over her hair. Kenneth remembered the hair as it had looked last night, then recollected himself, tapped neatly on an eggshell, and began to plan his day. Afterward, as he left the dining room, he glanced casually in her direction with an elaborately arranged for recognition in the back of his mind. But she did not even look up.

THE next time he saw her was three days later, and all he did then was to take off his hat and mumble a greeting. She was just getting into a car which stood beside the curb of Mrs. Davis' boarding house. It was Sunday afternoon, and the car was the one belonging to Sidney Blair. Kenneth caught her quick, friendly nod at him, a glimpse of still another hat, and the casual wave of Blair's hand. That was all he had. Blair had the rest, he realized suddenly. They were going off somewhere to enjoy themselves, to seek enjoyment that they hadn't earned. He was left with his soundness of argument, his unassailable bank account, and the Sunday night supper of salmon mayonnaise and preserved pears which Mrs. Davis would provide. Kenneth became restless, and went to his room to think the thing over, and for a walk on which he condemned people of the Blair type thoroughly. He saw them everywhere. That night he stayed downstairs until he heard the Dale girl come in. It was about eleven thirty. He had the yellow covered book in his hand, and met her casually on the stairs, proffering it.

"Here is something I am reading," he said, mendaciously, "I think it may interest you, if you haven't read it."

Ellen Dale looked at him with her clear, brave eyes that remained friendly even when they were tired, discouraged, or mocking, eyes which had bewildered and disconcerted many another man, more experienced than Kenneth. She was used to these maneuvers of men to attract her attention, but, having just told Blair that Kenneth was priceless and should be in a museum, she was startled.

She thanked him, and from the expression on his face, the quick rush of color to his cheeks, knew exactly what was happening to him and what the progress of the next few weeks would be. In her own room she put on the mauve dressing gown, and wondered if she ought to let it happen. But Kenneth was rich and Ellen was poor, not minding her poverty so much as cherishing a fierce resentment against rich men who let other men go bankrupt and suffer and die. What Blair had said about Kenneth had not endeared him or his type to her. She decided he could take what was coming to him, and if she was the instrument of his discomfort, well, that was coming to her, too. So, casually, she was in the dining room next morning when Kenneth came in, and when he asked her if she wouldn't breakfast at his table, she did so and the old game was on.

The next few weeks were marked by a number of small duplicities all taking place under the roof of Mrs. Davis' resident hotel, adopting the nomenclature of that august and prideful lady. One was that Kenneth bought all the books by the author who had written the yellow backed novel, cut the pages carefully, and read a little of them so that he might lend them to Miss Dale, as from a well stocked library. Another was that Miss Dale said that she was lonely one evening and had nothing to do, when she had deliberately refused to go to three different social events. Another was that Mrs. Davis looked inside the covers of all the books in Miss Dale's room, just to see how far that affair had gone—as if she could tell by Kenneth's resemblance to a circulating library; another was that Kenneth confided to Miss Dale that he didn't have a car simply because he couldn't satisfy himself as to what make to get.

The last duplicity led to a rather hastily considered purchase of an expensive car, for Miss Dale proffered advice. Kenneth bought the car. His learning to run it was a simple matter in comparison with his careful budgeting of it. He figured out the exact amount of depreciation on it each month, the expense of gasoline, tires and garage rent, and charged it to the item of amusement as well as to business. It did not make much impression on the items which were catalogued under business expenditures, but it swelled the amount he allowed himself for amusement most prodigiously.

It was the car which first gave Miss Dale a qualm. Not that she regretted the purchase of the car. That was only decent, as she told Blair, who thought it a huge joke. But the sight of Kenneth sitting at the wheel, so ingenuous in his pride about owning and running a car, so anxious to play the man of the world to her on the first occasion he took her out in it, was, to her sophistication, a rather pathetic sight.

FOR Ellen Dale had imagination, and it was imagination that was making her valuable to her newspaper and giving her a chance to sign her own columns now and then. Besides, it was the first time that any man had bought an automobile purely because Ellen wanted him to—except, of course, her father before his smash. It somehow put Kenneth in the group of men who belonged to Ellen. So she put up with a good deal of boredom during those weeks, listened to some homilies which seemed to her most unpleasant and reactionary, reactionary in a world which should be progressive.

After a little she didn't listen much to Kenneth's dictums of the world and society. She basked in lazy thought when she was with him. She learned, too, that when she could get Kenneth off his moralizing he was amazingly acute, and that he knew all about queer financial transactions, all about the reasons for successes, more about the background of failures, and that he could explain to her something of the money structure on which the society which had ruined her father rested. When Kenneth forgot to moralize, he talked sometimes as if he were a pirate, or a general in charge of an army in battle, or a clever bandit.

She kept Blair informed more or less of the way things were going.

"Are you going to marry him?" asked Blair.

"Would you?"

Blair turned on her with astonishment. His question had been meant to bring a laugh.

"Look here, Ellen," he said, "you'll please remember that that bird is a hard boiled, selfish, egotistic, financial vampire. Why, my dear girl, don't get any ideas in your head. He'd give you a pair of shoes a year, and half sole them himself."

"I might change him," suggested Ellen.

"You're crazy," said Blair. "Besides, you're going to marry me. I've got an option. You gave it to me."

"It expired," said Ellen, "you're a dear, Sidney. But I'm not going to marry you. I know what it would be. An expensive woman and an expensive man without enough to live on. My parents all over again. It eats into your happiness, Sid. It's like trying to go to live on top of a volcano—keeps your married life nervous."

"O, well, I'm going to make a lot of money."

"And lose it. And make a lot more and lose that. O, Sidney, don't you see I care for you just because you're like my father. And just because I

Believers In Marriage : : —BY— DORIS BLAKE

Take Up Their Cudgels in Behalf of the Silent, Though Happy, Majority.

ONE reads and hears so much about unhappy marriages and divorce these days, we wondered if it wouldn't be well to let the other side of the married world speak. There is another side. In fact, it outbalances in number by many, many thousands the unhappy couples of the world.

A tactless query was made of a small girl, aged eight, about her father. The child disclosed that her parents were divorced. Her father went away a long time ago. To change the subject, the adult questioner asked the little girl what she was going to be when she grew up.

"I suppose I'll get married and be unhappy like my mother," the child replied.

"O, no, you won't," the grown-up attempted to convince her, "you'll marry a wonderful Prince Charming and live happily ever afterward, just like they do in the story books."

"No," the child returned. "My mamma says that only happens in story books."

The story was related to me by a neighbor of the small girl. This neighbor has a daughter of the same age. Later her own child came to her with the query: "Is everybody unhappy when they get married?"

Inspired by the theory that what marriage needs is the spread of wholesome propaganda, I recently printed in my daily column a letter from a woman who resented the too current impression that married life is a dull life, an uninteresting life. She reviewed her full day and her 10 years of perfect contentment, at the same time suggesting she was but one of countless thousands of wives who are happy, though married.

Other correspondents took her cue to contribute to a campaign that would prove marriage the happy state, and possible of attainment for the greater number of people.

"Are you snowed under with letters from happy wives?" asks E. A. "Probably not! We are such a contented lot and our lives so uneventful we don't think it worth writing about. But we ought to rise in our might and let the world know there are millions of us who do not have the word 'divorce' in our vocabulary.

"We, my dearly beloved and I, have been married nearly a quarter of a century, and I have never threatened to go home to mother, and he has never told me he wished he had married the other girl.

"We haven't always agreed, by any manner of means. We both have good, strong minds of our own. But we talk over our serious disagreements until we arrive at an amicable agreement, or agree to disagree and keep sweet.

"Yes, we have a family of three, not much more than a home financially, but it is a happy one.

"He hasn't kissed me in more than 10 years except when leaving on a trip. But he isn't the kissing kind, and so long as I know he isn't kissing other women I don't let that worry me.

"I have a double chin and wrinkles, long hair and freckles, but he treats me like a queen. As for him: his hair is thin in places. He has one rheumatic knee. He snores when he sleeps, but he's Lochinvar to me."

GERTRUDE L. believes that playing the game fairly is the way to get happiness out of your marriage.

"We were two foolish kids," she writes. "We married while my husband was in his junior year of the university. I held to my job in spite of sneers and slights of friends, relatives, and employers.

"Both of us are earnest and industrious, but when my husband took up the task of breadwinning, he was hampered by long periods of unavoidable idleness. I, therefore, got back in the harness again and have kept in business practically all the time we have been married.

"My husband's work makes our lives nomadic. We were married 10 years before we purchased a home and our first furniture. This constant moving about has kept us from having the social life and contacts we would have had under a more permanent type of living. We have been apart for months at a time, oftentimes.

"Until about three years ago it

Sunday Health Talks :: BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

Noted Physician and Author

A NEW YORK dentist writes that he feels it incumbent on him to bawl me out for my articles on brushing the teeth. The unfortunate part of it is, he says, "that fundamentally you are right, actually, and in practice, you are not altogether correct."

Where I spilled the beans, I suppose, was in declaring flatly that the tooth-brushing rite is only a sad waste of time. My New York dentist friend isn't an enthusiast about brushing the teeth, and a few years ago he made some sensible public assertions about it which rather startled the plain people, but I do not remember exactly what his views were and he does not point out where I am not altogether correct. He does kinda flap my sails by asking some pertinent questions:

"Do you brush your teeth—presupposing that you are not edentulous? If not, how long is it since you have stopped the villainous habit? I have told you often that an individual with a perfect occlusion, on an ideal diet, would not have to brush his teeth. I guess in my years of practice I have seen one perfect occlusion."

Now I remember that my New York dentist friend maintains that some artificial method of cleansing the teeth is required whenever the occlusion is faulty. In that he is at least logical—and it is somewhat disconcerting to encounter sound logic in a mere dentist.

Answering the questions, I am not over 9.3 per cent edentulous, and I lost these three at the culmination of 20 years of assiduous tooth-brushing, lost 'em because I had so much faith in the toothbrush that I failed to seek the services of the dentist in time to prevent irreparable damage to the teeth by caries. I ceased brushing my teeth with anything except unpretentious soap ten years ago. I discarded the toothbrush five years ago. My dentist discovers no new trouble, no caries or decay beginning since I hung up the toothbrush for keeps. Brushing the teeth usually does no harm, but I stopped the rite in my own case after thirty years' trial and I believe, now, that I wasted all the time I gave the rite in the 30 years.

A St. Louis dentist writes that he agrees with me in "99% of your ideas," and he says, "Your article 'Use Your Jaw to Save Your Teeth' was excellent, but the difficulty is to get it into the heads of the people that good teeth cannot be taken out of a tube of tooth-paste." My St. Louis dentist friend asks me to tell the expectant mother that she won't mark her offspring if she has her teeth repaired or extracted in the course of pregnancy, which I have been telling her for several years, and he hopes I will impress on the Wisenheimers that the first permanent molar (commonly called six-year molar) is not a baby tooth.

Back to little old N'Yawk for a curtain lecture from another dentist friend who says if he were writing articles for newspapers and suddenly found himself mentally stale, without any real subject of value at hand, he would confine himself to answering the queries of correspondents, and not be so undignified as to criticise a profession (meaning dentistry) of which he knew so little. Somehow this friend reminds me of the old woman who is always referring to a "certain party." I reckon my friend was annoyed at some truths I uttered about some of his profession, of course, in my charming sarcastic vein, in a recent article he mentions, "Here's Something to Chew On." He quotes a particularly annoying sentence from that article:

"The only trouble with the dental profession is that some members of it get to thinking they know about as much as the doctors do." That, my dentist friend opines, certainly doesn't apply to ordinary knowledge, and he thinks I should have said "as much as the doctors know about medicine."

THE amendment is accepted. That's what I meant. I had just been pointing out in the article in which that sentence occurred how dentistry is really a medical specialty, but unfortunately it has drifted too far away from the parent profession and has grown too independent. Certainly, I mean medicine—medical science. The earlier years in the course of instruction in the dental school are the same in all subjects as the earlier years in the medical school. And my curtain lecturing friend reminds me that dental state board examinations (for license) are as rigid and difficult in the fundamentals, anatomy, histology, physiology, pathology and chemistry, as are medical state board examinations. That is as it should be, too.

In fact, the only trouble I can find with the dentists is that they have cut too far adrift. Of course, nursing is not a profession, but there is a growing inclination or tendency among the nurses to attempt to establish for themselves an independent status—independent of the medical profession, I mean. It can't be done. Not nurses, but little tin doctors, are seeking such a status. A good nurse is the doctor's accomplice and the moment she undertakes to secure independence of the medical profession, marks the beginning of her downfall as a ministering angel to the sick, even though it enables her to engage in a kind of unlicensed practice of medicine.

Modern dentistry is unique among medical specialties, in that one may legitimately enter upon the practice of this specialty without first having qualified for a license to practice medicine. In no other specialty is this possible, within the law. Goodness knows it takes the dentist long enough these days to get through the course laid down for him and secure his license to practice dentistry. But that is not as it should be. It should take him as long as it takes the medical student to obtain his degree and then such special or technical post-graduate instruction as the educators may deem necessary to make the man safe to let loose on the public. Nowadays a dentist requires at least an elementary medical and surgical knowledge, since he assumes medical and surgical responsibilities and he should be prepared to deal properly with the emergencies which occur in his practice.

If the dentists are right in carrying on without even a liaison with the parent profession, then we ought to license oculists, orthopedists and gynecologists without regard for their medical training.

Meanwhile, let us formulate these rules for saving the teeth:

1—Consume a quart of pure raw milk daily.

2—Make the leafy vegetables an essential part of the daily ration.

3—Take some raw potato, carrot, turnip, beet, cucumber, parsnip, tomato or other vegetable daily.

4—Put not your trust in tooth-paste nor in the 1,001 styles of brushes.

5—Have the dentist examine your teeth regularly, remove any tartar, cleaning them if necessary and promptly detecting and repairing beginning cavities.

6—Consider the cow, a vegetarian

VII. Three Priceless Gifts.

W. J. BRYAN

THE Bible differs from all other books in that it never wears out. Other books are read and laid aside, but the Bible is a constant companion. No matter how often we read it or how familiar we become with it, some new truth is likely to spring out at us from its pages whenever we open it, or some old truth will impress us as it never did before. Every Christian can give illustrations of this. Permit me to refer briefly to four. My first religious address, "The Prince of Peace," was the outgrowth of a chance rereading of a passage in Isaiah.

The argument presented in my lecture on the Bible, in which I defend the inspiration of the Book of Books, was the outgrowth of a chance rereading of Elijah's prayer test. I was preparing an address for the celebration of the Tercentenary of the King James' Translation when, on the train, I turned by chance to Elijah's challenge to the prophets of Baal. It suggested to me what I regard as an unanswerable argument, namely, a challenge to those who reject the Bible to put their theory to the test and produce a book, the equal of the Bible, or admit one of two alternatives, either that the Bible comes from a source higher than man or that man has so degenerated that less can be expected of him now than nineteen hundred years ago.

In preparing a Sunday school lesson on Abraham's faith I was so impressed with the influence of faith on the life of the patriarch and through him, on the world, that I prepared a college address on "Faith," a part of which I have reproduced in my lecture on "The Spoken Word."

Subject Still Important.

It was a chance rereading of an extract from the account of the Ten Lepers which led me to prepare this chapter. The subject to which I invite your attention is as important today as it was when the Master laid emphasis upon it. As He approached a certain village ten lepers met Him; they recognized Him and cried out, "Jesus, Master, have mercy upon us." He healed them; when they found that they had been made whole, one of them turned back and, falling on his face at Jesus' feet, poured forth his heart in grateful thanks. Christ noticing the absence of the others, inquired, "Were there not ten cleansed, but where are the nine?" This simple question has come echoing down through nineteen centuries, the most stinging rebuke ever uttered against the sin of ingratitude. If the lepers had been afflicted with a disease easily cured, they might have said, "Any one could have healed us," but only Christ could restore them to health, and yet, when they had received of His cleansing power, they apparently felt no sense of obligation; at least, they expressed no gratitude.

Some one has described ingratitude as a meaner sin than revenge—the explanation being that revenge is repayment of evil with evil, while ingratitude is repayment of good with evil. If you visit revenge upon one, it is because he has injured you first and the law takes notice of provocation. Ingratitude is lack of appreciation of a favor shown; it is indifference to a kindness done.

Ingratitude is so common a sin that few have occupied the pulpit for a year without using the story of the Ten Lepers as the basis of a sermon; and one could speak upon this theme every Sunday in the year without being compelled to repeat himself, so infinite in number are the illustrations.

The Child Is Example.

THOSE who speak of ingratitude usually begin with the child. A child is born into the world the most helpless of all creatures; for years it could not live but for the affectionate and devoted care of parents, or of those who stand in the place of parents. If, when it grows up, it becomes indifferent; if its heart grows cold, and it becomes ungrateful, it arouses universal indignation. Poets and writers of prose have exhausted all the epithets in their efforts to describe an ungrateful child. Shakespeare's words are probably those most quoted:

"How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is To have a thankless child."

But it is not my purpose to speak of thankless children; I shall rather make application of the rebuke to the line of work in which I have been engaged. For some thirty years my time, by fate or fortune, has been devoted largely to the study and discussion of the problems of government, and I have had occasion to note the apathy and indifference of citizens. I have seen reforms delayed and the suffering of the people prolonged by lack of vigilance. Let us, therefore, consider together for a little while some of the priceless gifts that come to us because we live under the Stars and Stripes—gifts so valuable that they can not be estimated in figures or described in language—gifts which are received and enjoyed by many without any sense of obligation, and without any resolve to repay the debt due to society.

These gifts are many, but we shall have time for only three. The first is education; it is a gift rather than an acquirement. It comes into our lives when we are too young to decide such questions for ourselves. I sometimes meet a man who calls himself "self-made," and I always want to cross-examine him. I would ask him when he began to make himself, and how he laid the foundations for his greatness.

We Inherit Opportunities.

As a matter of fact, we inherit more than we ourselves can add. It means more to be born of a race with centuries of civilization back of it than anything that we ourselves can contribute. And, next to that which we inherit, comes that which enters our lives through the environment of youth. In this country the child is so surrounded by opportunities, that it enters school as early as the law will permit. It does not go to school, it is sent to school, and we are so anxious that it shall lose no time that, if there is ever a period in the child's life when the mother is uncertain as to its exact age, this is the time. I heard of a little boy, who, when asked how old he was, replied, "I am five on the train, seven in school and six at home." The child is pushed through grade after grade, and, according to the statistics, a little more than 90 per cent of the children drop out of school before they are old enough to decide educational questions for themselves. They are scarcely more than fourteen.

Taking the country over, a little

Things New and Old About the Bible :

THE MacMillan company are the publishers of "The Man From an African Jungle," by W. C. Wilcox; "Must We Part With God," by Ernest F. Champuess, and "Sunday School Lessons for 1926," by J. H. Snowden. A publication by this well-known company is itself a recommendation.

"The Man From an African Jungle" is a demonstration of the old saying that truth is stranger than fiction. The only way to avoid reading this volume is to avoid beginning it. It can hardly be surpassed as a fascinating narrative of adventure.

To say that it is by a missionary and about missionaries is true, but likely to convey the untruth that it is dull, prosy, preachy and whatever other synonyms for these the dictionary may contain.

Instead, it is a story of African exploration told by the exploring pioneer himself, who puts into the telling the same picturesque, graphic, rough and ready shrewdness and resourcefulness that he put into the task of where to begin and how to proceed with the civilizing of a primitive tribe of blacks in the heart of Africa.

If your taste in stories runs to tales of adventure, you will enjoy the humor and humanness of "The Man From an African Jungle."

"Must We Part With God" will prove a helpful volume to any who are perplexed in faith as the author was and who are seeking in the "mental whirlpool" of our age a firm foundation.

This work is a fragment of spiritual autobiography, the results in brief compass of endless journeys of thought by which its author came to a knowledge of the main highway out of agnosticism into the acceptance of the Great Adventure involved in casting in our lot with God.

It is the kind of very thoughtful, worthy book which can be depended upon to receive respectful treatment from the intellectual rebels among our college undergraduates.

Sunday school teachers who want to get at the heart of the lesson, who desire a sane exposition of the Scripture, can do no better than to secure the small volume of Dr. Snowden. This is the fifth annual volume, and teachers who have used preceding volumes will secure this one and also recommend it to others.

The MacMillan company have recently published "What and Why Is Man?" by Richard LaRue Swain, Ph.D. The author says of his book:

"After the appearance of 'What and Where Is God?' which he commended, perhaps too unreservedly, the late Dr. Lyman Abbott was the first one to suggest that I write on this 'cognate' theme. He called attention to the fact of the many who are missing 'real life' because they have adopted a false goal.

"Therefore, I have undertaken to give very human answers in 'What and Why Is Man?' to perplexing questions that are universally being asked concerning (1) human origin, (2) human birth, (3) human struggle, (4) human destiny and (5) God's relation thereto."

You might as well read this volume, for you will be certain to hear much about it.

The interesting character of the book may be seen from the table of contents: Who Made God? How Did God Make the Human Body? Is the Method of Human Propagation Ideal? How Is the Soul Made? Did God Make Man at All? Why Were We Not Born in Heaven? Does God Cause Earthquakes and Cyclones? Where Did Sin Come From? Did Man "Fall Upward"? Why Did Jesus Die? Why Do We Pray? For What Do We Live?

It is impossible aside from reading the book to form any adequate conception of the fascinating style and forceful reasoning of the author. Whether or not the reader agrees with the viewpoint of the writer, he will be charmed by the spirit which pervades the volume.

There is space only for one extract from the chapter, "How Did God Make the Body?"

"What the world needs is light and not fight. A change of view came to me forty years ago during a session of the Geology class. I forgot the class around me and tried to conceive of God making a full-sized man directly from the dust without following His common biological method. How did He assemble the dust? I decided that He did not gather the dust with His hands and mould it into human form.

"Did He catapult the dust together as by magic? That, too, seemed utterly improbable. Did He animate the requisite amount of earth and cause it to rise up and walk off as a living man? Did He turn clay in the lump directly into the bone, tissue, vital organs and brain? I did not limit His power, but putting no limit on His power, something within me said that He never did it that way. Did God either literally or figuratively blow into the mouth of a clay man in order to enable him to become a living soul? The more I meditated upon the idea, the less real and the more distasteful it all appeared.

"That was not the way the Almighty worked. At any rate, that thought lost all grip on my mind. Then I asked myself the question, Why do we object to evolution? Is it because animal flesh is unclean? But animal flesh is clean enough to eat; and to whatever extent we use animal food, to that degree our own bodies are made up of elements transmitted from animal flesh. Do we object to evolution because man would on this theory begin too low down mentally and morally? But I could see that no physical organism would be entitled to be called man before it became a fit instrument for a soul; and the moment it became possessed of a soul it would cease to be an animal.

"An animal with a soul is man."

Charles Scribner's Sons announce the publication of "The Religion of Undergraduates," by Cyril Harris.

This is a challenging book. This colorful, accurately drawn study of the undergraduate mind impartially and sympathetically discusses the religious situation among college students. After a vivid analysis of the undergraduate religion as one finds it today; including quotations from undergraduates themselves, there follow closely knit chapters in which point after point is constructively discussed. The author is not an alarmist but a careful investigator and a reliable reporter.

The author recognizes that as stu-

ALICE JOYCE in the flesh looks, talks and conducts herself exactly as you had imagined she would. The day I met and talked with her she was just commencing work on Paramount's "Dancing Mothers," in which she portrays the particular "dancing mother" we're concerned with. Her hair is bobbed in what appears to me to be a most becoming and attractive manner. Her barber, it would seem, is not the usual sort who apparently isn't happy until he's left milady practically bald, and whether she knows it or not, looking particularly frightful.

Those large green eyes of Miss Joyce, well, much could I write of those eyes. She's just the height she appears to be on the screen, which isn't such an inane statement after all when I tell you (for the ninetieth time) how minutely small Gloria Swanson really is.

Miss Joyce says she thinks her best work was in "The Little French Girl," directed by Herbert Brenon. That's why she's so delighted she's to play "Dancing Mothers," for Mr. Brenon again holds the megaphone. She also liked the part she had in "The Home Maker," in which she appeared with Clive Brook.

By the way, when I asked Miss Joyce what had become of her old movie sweetheart of Kalem days, Carlyle Blackwell, she said she had seen him in England last summer and he was then appearing with Betty Blythe in "She." You, of course, remember when Miss Joyce used to play the invariable Indian maid she was always rescued from whatever plight she was in by the just-in-time Mr. Blackwell.

Miss Joyce says of the current New York plays she likes "Craig's Wife" best. She says she thinks the part is, of course, an unsympathetic one, but after I asked her said she thought she'd like to play it in movies. By the way, while on the subject of movies, she said she thought the new Laurence Stallings picture, "The Big Parade," in which John Gilbert is starred, is one of the best, if not the very best, picture she's ever seen.

The Flamingo is the latest and smartest supper club to which the stay-outs are flocking these evenings. This night club, be it known, is the one which last year was known as "The Trocodero," where Fred and Adele Astaire did their dancing. At the Flamingo, Basil Durant and his partner are dancing, and Mr. Durant, in particular, is one of the most graceful exhibition dancers in New York. It has been my sad experience to learn he is equally as good as a bridge player.

Quite the better element of the night-club set find their way to the Flamingo. Then, too, some of the theater and screen contingent seem to like it. The other night a table at which Mae Murray, Constance Talmadge and Rudolph Valentino were guests, was throwing some two-weekers from Dubuque and Peoria into a state of nervous hysteria.

The Flamingo is done in those particular shades of orange and green you see so much in Florida, and coupled with the presence of palm trees here and there, I'm almost positive you're supposed to imagine yourself in a Florida atmosphere.

JUDGE A. W. COZART, of Columbus, is a Georgian who believes in original salutations when called upon, in his capacity as orator, to greet and welcome various conventions, conferences and reunions of his fellow-citizens.

There was the Chattahoochee Valley Medical society, composed of earnest-faced, bearded, bespectacled and noble-purposed gentlemen, whom Judge Cozart welcomed to his home city. It was necessary, in his judgment, to tell what a doctor is, and so to this notable assemblage of physicians and surgeons he quoted Voltaire's celebrated definition: "A doctor is one who takes drugs, of which he knows little, and pours into a human body of which he knows still less."

The bearded gentlemen had looked up with smiling anticipation when Judge Cozart told them he was going to define the profession. Their expressions were slightly different after he gave them this volley from Voltaire. But after the look of bewilderment and slight shock there came a laugh, for doctors, you know, are pretty good sports for all the solemn way they read long medical papers and propound their ethics.

ADDRESSING the lawyers on one occasion Judge Cozart made this broad confession in behalf of the legal fraternity: "Some lawyers are like necessity—they know no law."

The policemen of Columbus invited Judge Cozart to address them. They assembled—all who could be spared from duty at that time—a body of heavy, solid, serious-looking men. The orator of the occasion recalled a verse of Scripture—this itself suggested another thought—and so he told the officers, gravely:

"A policeman is a NEVER-present help in time of trouble!"

Some of those honest direct-thinking law-enforcers have never understood to this good day just exactly what Judge Cozart meant by that remark; the phraseology impressed them at the time as rather peculiar!

ED JERGER, editor of The Thomasville Times-Enterprise, is an enthusiast on his home town and on south Georgia, and is very easy to listen to when he gets started on this favorite subject of his. He has been in the newspaper business at Thomasville ever since he got out of college and has an intimate, personal acquaintance with folks and conditions in Thomas county that is not simply "very good"—it is "perfect."

Mr. Jerger is in home with his home town and his home folks. He is particularly enthusiastic on the subject now that Thomasville is fairly launched into a period of improvement and development that promises to surpass any of its previous experiences along that line—and to be permanent. He warms up, too, to the great progress and notably bright prospects of south Georgia. His devotion to his home city and section is so genuine that it is impressive.

The Thomasville editor says he wouldn't live anywhere else on earth—he has not seen, heard of or imagined any other town quite so well adapted to Ed Jerger as his own—and we do believe he means every word of it!

ALTHOUGH red blood circulates in him, and he is full of the joy of life and all that, James A. Hollomon, associate editor of The Atlanta Constitution, is not exatly a betting character. Still—

Mr. Hollomon was in the midst of the atmosphere that enveloped and thrilled all Atlanta and all Georgia just before the Georgia-Tech game, and it was impossible not to respond to it, at least in degree. He participated rather mildly, but most ingeniously. It was not his desire to have to part with the family silver, heirlooms and his own personal bank account in case either Tech or Georgia won, and so he safeguarded against calamity. There was an ingenious system of checks and counter-balances and the like. We have never been able to understand how Mr. Hollomon did it, but he gently confessed, just before the game that, no matter WHO won, or how many or how few the points, he was bound to lose fifteen dollars! He was so philosophically reconciled to the result in advance, that we could not shed tears with him over the impending disaster, but are wondering to this good day how he so arranged his commitments as to make absolutely SURE a loss of three five-dollar bills!

A FLORIDA story, next. And about real estate—truly a strange combination of themes.

The incident is related by a former Atlantan now engaged in the real estate business in the wonderful state just south of us. We don't know of a more truthful product on earth than one whose veracity has been shaped, encouraged and developed by such conditions of heredity, environment and profession, and so accept the story explicitly. In the first place, he had the advantage of his early training in truth-telling, in business circles in Atlanta, and is now further fortified in that good habit by the inspiring nature of his work in Florida. But to the incident:

A wealthy doctor in one of the Florida towns was an active investor in real estate. A certain realtor of the town represented him in a good many of these transactions. One day the doctor was standing in front of the postoffice telling a friend what he thought was a particularly good joke. In the midst of it the realtor rushed up, apologized for interrupting, and said:

"Doctor, Jones offered that Main street lot to us this morning for $40,000. Shall we buy it for you?

"Yes," said the doctor, and waved him aside a bit impatiently as he proceeded with the joke.

The story was one of these elaborate—introduction affairs—purposely a bit rather complicated in the start so as to make the climax a regular thunderbolt of humor—and the doctor, greatly relishing his narrative, plunged into the delightful details. It took several minutes, so deliberate was he in springing his bombshell of wit. Just as he was about to reach the point, the realtor came rushing back and said:

"Doctor, excuse me for interrupt-

ABDUL HAMID looked at her sternly. "Be careful of what you say," he admonished. Remember the wound caused by the lance head is curable, but that caused by the tongue cannot be cured."

"Yes, yes. I know. The tongue is the neck's enemy. Very well—let my tongue be his enemy and—Allah grant it!—his executioner."

"Whose? Whom do you accuse?"

"Zado Kaboolian, the Armenian banker."

The sultan laughed. It was an amused, rather relieved laugh.

"No, no!" he said. "I am not altogether a fool, and I have a spy or two in my employ. I know you owe him money—ho! are you blushing, lotus petal?—and you would like to pay off the debt with his own head, his own blood—naturally, since you are a woman and a gypsy. Zado Kaboolian is too friendly toward the British, in spite of all his protestations of loyalty, I admit. But to murder—why, that Armenian hasn't the spirit of a louse except should gold or treasure be his goal."

"Exactly!" cried the gypsy, triumphantly. "Treasure was his goal!"

"Be more explicit. Prove what you say."

"I shall. Kaboolian is coming to my house tonight, between ten and eleven. Come, too, Heaven Born, and you shall see the proof with your own eyes. You will come?"

"Yes."

He was silent.

Then suddenly he let out one great, fierce cry, deep from his chest, a roar of pain and fury.

The gypsy was startled.

"Heaven Born! What—?"

"Ah!" He clinched and raised his puny fists. "If O'Malley has lied to me! If, indeed, he—!" He choked with rage; he brought his fists down on a tabaret covered with coffee cups and glasses. Crash, crash, crash!—the noise of the bursting, splintering glass and porcelain cracked like pistol shots. "By Allah, Holder of the Scales of Justice! Would he send Tcherkessy to the grave? He—he himself? I shall send him the silken bow string."

"Heaven Born!" Bibi Fathma threw herself on her knees before the sultan. All at once she realized she had overplayed her hand, and a terrible fear entered her heart, stabbed it as if with the point of a dagger. O'Malley's disgrace? Yes. She had reckoned on it; had not cared; had, in fact thought that the greater his unhappiness—his double unhappiness should Ellen disappear from his life and should his career be ruined—the more readily would he turn to her for consolation. But—this threat of death? "O!" she cried; and this time she was not overacting a part. "Please—you cannot mean it!"

"Why not? An O'Malley—and a traitor!"

"The O'Malleys have always been loyal servants of your dynasty!"

"Yes! And all the loyal O'Malleys in paradise will say I am right and just in punishing with death the one of their line who is disloyal."

"He is not disloyal!"

"He lied to me—if, indeed, you spoke the truth! And—by Allah!—I believe you did! He tried to have Tcherkessky arrested and executed—an innocent man—because of his own rotten jealousy! There is no forgiving such a crime."

But the gypsy kept on pleading, begging, imploring, until at last he felt a little moved.

"Yours is a soft heart, lotus petal," he said.

"Yes—yes—" She clutched at the straw. "I am sorry for O'Malley—so sorry! You see—I can understand jealousy—it bites, burns, burns! I know! I—I, too, am jealous."

"You? And of whom?"

"Of all the women in your harem-lik!" She watched his expression carefully; saw that her battle was half won. "I hate them—all these women! Ah, how I hate them!'

"But, lotus petal, they do not matter!"

"They do! You lie!'

"Fathma!"

"Yes—you lie, you lie! O!—I am so unhappy! Because I love you! Because I am jealous! And so is O'Malley jealous! Pah!" She rose, stared at him; walked away a few steps; threw the words over her shoulder; "Go back to your other women. You do not understand. For your heart is ice, hard—and cold, cold! You love nobody!"

"I love you!"

"I do not believe you. If you did you would understand another's love, another's jealousy. You would forgive O'Malley!"

He followed her to the door; took her in his arms.

"I do understand," he whispered.

"Then—you will forgive him? Love—why—it breeds jealousy, and jealousy breeds lies! You will really, really forgive him?"

"No. I will not forgive him. I cannot. But—"

"You will spare his life?"

"Perhaps."

She was too clever to press the point. She kissed him.

"My lord," she said, "you are indeed the sultan, wise and splendid and generous! My heart is beneath your feet!"

. . . . . .

IT was on the afternoon of the same day, in Stamboul's Egyptian bazaar, where the latticed palmwood roof filtered the sun on silken rugs and rugs of wool, on copper pots and pots of clay, on swords and daggers and jewels, and thin, gold inlaid attar bottles in ever shifting patterns, rose and heliotrope and purple and elfin green.

Treasure of ages, treasure from half the Orient was piled up in that narrow bazaar; things exquisite and grotesque, things delicate and baroque, and here and there a horribly clashing European incongruity, the machine made products of Birmingham and Berlin and Vienna jeering at Asia's patient, meticulous handicraft—painted porcelain atrocities, shoddy wood carvings and tawdry cotton prints, boots and overalls, and suspenders, and false teeth and highly-colored lithographs, chemical perfumes and chemical sauces, cheap watches and cheaper knives. Europe pushing Asia to the wall with its low priced, catchpenny, wholesale efficiency, destroying a nation's ancient, significant crafts for the sake of five hundred per cent profit and a bill of lading marked C. O. D.

Here screamed the coiling symphony of barter and trade, seller and buyer disputing with hot eyes and chilly gestures and occasional blow: an ebony black Saharan giant bargaining with a laughing Saloniki Jew over a yard of cobwebby chebka lace; a Kurd trying a German knife on his calloused thumb, snapping the blade, then, when the Armenian merchant clamored for his money, throwing the broken pieces in his face and stalking off arrogantly; a scented Tunisian dandy in silk burnoose of ashes of roses, a jonquil stuck over his left ear to show that he was a "fast man," sampling French pefumes with tongue and nose; a loutish, bovine Anatolian peasant staring wide eyed at a Birmingham cuckoo clock and paying for it with the few hundred miserable piastres, three years' cash gain of his stony acres, with which he had intended to buy seed and a new brace of plowshares.

Buyers and sellers everywhere; and amongst them, guided by Haydar Nazir, O'Malley Pasha and Ellen McIntyre and, a few feet away—haggling over clay pots while his red rimmed eyes roved and watched—Bibi Fathma's husband, Shafizullah.

"Cousin mine," said Haydar Nazir to Babar Latiff, the trader, "I have told the Pasha effendi you are an honest merchant. Be pleased not to prove me a liar. If you do"—with naif ferocity—"I shall cause your obese backside to echo your unclean lips with loud cries of pain!"

After which calm presentation of persons and intentions the Albanian returned to his carriage, where, sitting on the steps, he smoked a peaceful cigaret, keeping an eye on his cousin. The latter's booth was the first in the Egyptian bazaar, almost within the shadow of the Rustem Pasha mosque that untwined its sinuous arabesques of olive and ochre faience beneath the pigeon blue glare of the sky.

BABAR LATIFF was a short, fat man, with the eyes of a philosopher and the hands of a diplomat. He looked from his cousin to his customers and from his customers to his wares, where he squatted on his haunches like a ground hog on its winter hoard of nuts.

A rich pasha and a rich Amerikani, he thought. It was almost a challenging of the decrees of fate, a refusal to avail himself of Allah's benevolence, not to fleece them until their skins showed pink and raw. Still, there was the threat of his cousin's heavy and lawless fist, and even honest trading would turn a pretty penny.

So he smiled courteously. With the help of Yakoob, his plum colored Soudanese porter, he spread his wares, and he praised them as they deserved to be praised.

For there were here silks and velvets and brocades from Persia, from Bokhara, from Khiva and Samarkand and Kashgar and Yarknd, from all Central Asia. Fabrics blue as the sky is after rain when viewed through a rift in the clouds, and blue as summer water but with a white overweave like the thick floating spawn of fish; fabrics lizard green and apple green, jade green and peacock green; fabrics flame red and wine red and the rose red of tropical dawn with a flight of marsh birds silhouetted against the glow; fabrics silver gray like the trickling of tears, dead gold like autumn leaves, sable and gold as a fervid spring night netted with stars, orange gold like the skin of a peach; fabrics with the amber bloom of grapes and the subtle blossoming of poppies; fabrics stiffer than wood, others lighter than the shell of a humming bird's egg and more fragile than the wings of a moth.

Not only fabrics but also women's costumes, from Turkestan and Kurdistan, from Afghanistan and outer Mongolia and high Tartary; and Ellen, remembering her promise to Prince Tcherkessky, chose an Afghan dress.

For O'Malley, who had called for her directly on his return from the Dolma Bagtcheh palace, had not mentioned to her that Abdul Hamid was preparing a firman for the Circassian's arrest, court-martial, and execution. He had simply told her that the political situation had taken a favorable turn and that it seemed as if the Young Turk revolution, though not exactly crushed, had at least been temporarily scotched, deferred to a later date . . . "so," he had added, "I'm looking forward to the ball. Sort of victory celebration, you know."

THE Afghan costume consisted of a loose shirt of creamy white muslin embroidered all over with tiny butterflies in pastel shades that ranged from lilac to eel gray; voluminous trousers of stiff purple velvet, tight about the ankles and girt with a narrow gold embroidered Kashmere shawl; a short hussar jacket of a slightly deeper tint of purple velvet fastened with braided loops and oblong silver and jade buttons, and with long sleeves that reached a yard beyond the finger tips; a pointed cape in stripes of furnace crimson and pansy violet, lined with cloth of gold; slippers of soft dark red leather; a purple silk kerchief to be wound about the hair and descending from it a black horse hair veil so that nothing of the face would be visible except the eyes.

"You won't have to buy a face mask," said O'Malley. "The veil will hide your features completely. Nobody will be able to recognize you."

"What about my eyes, Pat? They are not very Oriental."

"A dash of kohl—antimony, you know—on upper and lower lids will remedy that. It will make your eyes seem as dark as night. You'll be a regular odalisque, a regular harem queen."

"Do you think you'll like me as one?"

"Well—I am a pasha!"

He paid the merchant and ordered the costume to be delivered at the Megatherium-Palace hotel.

"The sooner the better," added Ellen. "I want to try it on, and it may need a little altering here and there."

Babar Latiff promised that the purchases would be in mademoiselle's possession that same evening; and, indeed, twenty minutes after O'Malley and Ellen had driven off Yakoob, the Soudanese porter, walked down the street toward the Sultana Valideh bridge, whistling like the happy, guileless African he was, balancing a great bundle that contained the goods on his kinky poll—and followed at a short distance by Shafizullah.

* * * *

Not far from the Egyptian bazaar, past a mazed network of lanes and alleys, at the end of a narrow cul-de-sac, stood a little house. It looked strangely respectable with its striped awnings of gray and brown, and its neat red brick roof, and seemed to give the lie to the drunken, riotous sounds of revelry that drifted through the shuttered windows. The proprietor of this place was a certain Mario Baccigalupo, a tall, bull necked Sicilian and former sailor who—rumor had it—was wanted for arson in Riga and for murder in San Francisco. But, whatever his antecedents, he served capital food and better liquor, and was one of Shafizullah's oldest and most trusted friends.

Earlier in the day Sicilian and Hindu—for the latter was a farsighted and careful man—had had a whispered exchange of confidences.

"I do not know," Shafizullah had said, "if they will take along what they are going to buy, or if—"

"Va bene! Va bene!" the other had interrupted. "I understand. It is best to be prepared for everything."

Had come the pleasant tinkle of coined gold as palm touched palm, and Baccigalupo's assurance:

"The back room will do."

"Is it safe?" Shafizullah had asked.

"It is directly behind the bar, and beneath the bar are three revolvers and seven stilettos, and between the bar and the back room are myself and my two sons."

"Excellent—by seventeen gods! You will get the bottle ready?"

"That particular bottle is always ready, caro."

"And when he wakes up you will send him home and tell him—"

"I know! I am not a bambino, a small and innocent child!"

They had parted with mutual respect, and now Shafizullah, running after Yakoob, stumbled suddenly, came into violent contact with the negro, and caused him to fall into a squishy, squidgy mud puddle.

The negro rose with a roar of rage: "Wah! Ullah ijjiblah rehba radma—may God send an earthquake to destroy you!"

But, a good natured savage, he changed the roar into high pitched laughter when he saw the miserable little Hindu who had caused the accident, when he heard his frightened, stammered apologies:

"O, forgive me! Forgive me! I—by my beard. I did not mean to."

"No harm done!"

"All right! No harm done, I repeat! Yuhady weyladeyq il' ej-jinna —may your deceased parents reach paradise!"

Yakoob brushed his clothes as well as he could and was for walking on when Shafizullah broke into a fresh stream of apologies, vowing he would do anything to make up for his stupidity, and finally suggesting a glass of brandy just to show that there were no ill feelings.

"I accept," said the negro. "My throat is dry."

Not long afterwards they sat in the back room of Baccigalupo's place where the proprietor himself served the negro with a generous glass of white Armenian brandy. Yakoob drank, smacked his blue lips, laughed.

But, all at once, his jaws sagged. An expression, half dreamy and half astonished, spread over his features. His eyes grew opaque, glassy; and he slumped on the table, his head buried in his hands, and began snoring to awaking the dead.

"These are excellent knockout drops," Baccigalupo commented with proprietary pride. "I get them every month from a friend of mine in San Francisco. It is now half past three. By nine o'clock this fool will regain consciousness."

"By half past eight I shall be back," replied Shafizullah, and he picked up the package that contained Ellen's Afghan costume.

So the negro slept on.

Very faintly—it came through the door and through the bony walls of his drug-dazed brain—he heard a charming little Italian song, warbled in Baccigalupo's most dulcet tenor notes:

"Come si fa la pace,
Schiude Bertin la bocca,
Ei guarda, pensa, tace,
Ed unbel bacio scocca—";

words that had no meaning whatever to the unconscious African.

But they were sweet and soothing, and so he slept on, dreamed on, dreamed on, snored on, while Shafizullah hastened to a bazaar on the Pera side of the Sultana Valideh bridge where he often executed commissions for his wife and was, therefore, well known.

Here he astonished the Levantine merchants by making a number of purchases without bargaining, and without cursing their fathers and mothers, and returned to his home, reaching it almost simultaneously with Zado Kaboolian, who came from the opposite direction.

FORMERLY the Armenian had knocked at the gate in fear and trembling. Not so today. During the last few days he had been a frequent visitor; had been received by the gypsy with ever growing affection and gladness; until now he entered like a lordly conqueror, smiling condescendingly at Shafizullah, whose packages had increased from one to two.

"Heavy, eh?" he asked.

"Not heavy. But cumbersome."

"What's inside?"

"Silks for my wife."

"A most delightful woman. Announce me."

"Yes, my lord!"

A few minutes later Shafizullah took the packages downstairs into a large room next to the kitchen, where half a dozen servant girls, trained wielders of needle and thread and tape and scissors, were waiting impatiently, while upstairs, on the balcony, Zado Kaboolian bowed before the gypsy.

The latter had only just returned from her interview with the sultan. She was tired; pleaded a headache. "Please, my Zado, don't stay. My head is bursting."

"Only a minute, my love?"

"Come back tonight. Come at ten. I shall dance for you—the dance of the bee—the dance of the seven passions—and of the eighth, which is forbidden to djinns and men—I promise, my Zado!"

"You promised me so often," complained the Armenian, "but you never—"

"This time I mean it," she interrupted.

"Do you really?"

"Look into my eyes, my Zado! Can't you read there that I mean it, that I speak the truth?"

"Yes, yes." He was deeply affected. "Will you promise me something else?"

"Is there anything I could refuse you?"

"But you did refuse—only yesterday!"

"What?"

"Your—O—" he stammered; then continued boldly: "your arms, your lips, your scented body, yourself!"

"Ah!" She looked at him with dreamy eyes. "I shall—some day—soon—very soon."

"Tonight!" He knelt before her. His breath came in short, staccato bursts. "I love you so, little Fathma! Desire for you—why—it is killing me! Have pity! Please — please — tonight."

She stroked his hair.

"Tonight!" she echoed softly. "Yes. Tonight. For I too—love you. I long for you. I want you. I need you. I wondered if it was love, real love. I wanted to make sure. Now I know. Go now." She managed to blush—"go"—

He rose. He walked to the door, stepping like a victor. She called him back:

"Zado!"

"Beloved!"

"You offered me presents—often."

"You always refused."

"I still refuse. Because love—real love—it cannot be bought. But—"

"Yes?"

"Two presents I want."

"Whatever I possess is yours, Fathma!"

"Don't I know it, you kindly, noble, generous man? And yet—I do not want much."

"Tell me, O rejoicer!"

"The first thing I want is an emerald." The Armenian's face clouded a little. Emeralds, after all, were expensive. But he smiled when she continued: "A small emerald. I do not care how small."

"But—" he wondered—"you have other emeralds—large and precious stones."

"Yes. Only, this emerald, I want you—you—to give it to me. And—this is the second present which my soul craves—I want you to write me a poem, with your own dear brain, your own dear hands, in which you must tell me why the emerald, the deep, green, glorious jewel, is like my heart, my soul. Will you do it, best beloved? Will you bring the stone—and the poem? Will you read it to me—tonight?"

"Yes." He kissed her. "Tonight—at ten!" he whispered.

"Tonight—at ten!" she echoed; and then, when the Armenian had left, she sent for her husband, who told her in detail everything that had happened in the Egyptian bazaar, in Mario Baccigalupo's place, and in the other bazaar, on the Pera side, where he had made his purchases.

"Your women are busily at work now, O moon of my delight!" he added. "Everything will be ready long before the negro awakens."

"You are an excellent husband!"

"More excellent even than you give me credit for! Look!" And he put his hand in his waistshawl and brought out the bottle of knockout drops which he had filched from his Sicilian friend. "This is a wonderful foreign magic. It will work more quickly and more thoroughly than hashish and poppy juice. You will need this bottle tonight."

She kissed him with real affection.

"Ah!" she said in Hindustani, "kab ki bibi bamhni—you are indeed a sinner turned a saint!"

IN THE essentials of human emotions and that by-product of the emotions called vanity, the east is, after all, much like the west. There are on record many cases of solid, well to do American and English business men, old enough to know better, making fools of themselves over chorus girls or adventuresses, spending on them vast sums of money that should go toward reducing their business overhead, whispering to them sweet nothings that they read in somebody else's book of verse, and, so as to appear young in the women's eyes, bedecking themselves with the sort of clothes which the designers intended for college boys and for motion picture juveniles.

It was so with Zado Kaboolian.

When, a little before ten that night, he left his house, Gulab Gulabian, his private secretary, who was a poet and a lover of no mean achievement, remarked to the Armenian's major domo that indeed their master looked like Solomon, King of the Jews, in all his glory. Usually aping Europe with morning coat, patent leathers, striped trousers and Viennese cravat, with nothing of the orient about his outer man except his red fez, tonight, perhaps as a compliment to the gypsy, he had completely reverted to the orient in style of garb; had adorned himself as became an Asiatic Don Juan.

For two mortal hours he had been in the hands of barber, valet, manicurist and chiropodist. They had carefully shaved and powdered his cheeks and chin, and had trimmed, pointed, waxed, and scented his mustache. They had arched his eyebrows by plucking out the fine hairs around them with tweezers. They had enlarged the pupils of his eyes by using an infusion of bella-donna. They had heightened the color of his lips with the help of betelnut juice, and had reddened the tips of his ears by squeezing them. They had rounded and gilt his fingernails and toenails. They had stained the palms of his hands and the soles of his feet a delightful and delicate rose with Tuinsian henna. They had spent thirty minutes in twisting about his head a silken turban blending peach red and apricot yellow, sky blue and sea green, the whole embroidered with a cunning design of bleeding, interlacing lovers' hearts. They had robed his angular body with simple, almost severe magnificence, in an ample burnoose of black satin lined with cloth of silver.

In his left hand he carried a small but exquisite emerald wrapped in green silk; and in his right, beautifully written out by his private secretary, who had also composed the lines and helped him to memorize them, the poem which Bibi Fathma had demanded as her second present, asking him to tell her why the emerald was like her heart, her soul.

So now the Armenian presented himself before the gypsy, who, true to her promise, was in a dancer's costume; and his eyes glistened and he smiled, with hope and expectation and desire, when in the corner of the room he saw already the musicians, bearded, blind Moroccan Jews, squatting on their haunches and attending to the tuning of their instruments; the scraping of the zaringhee, the thrum-thrum-thrummy-thrum of the zitar, and the dull, firm staccato of the tom-tom.

"You have brought the presents?" asked the gypsy.

He gave her poem and jewel. She wrapped the latter in the former and put the little package in a box on the taboret by the side of her couch.

"O!" she exclaimed. "You are generous!"

"Well—" He was slightly embarrassed since the stone, after all, was small.

"And now," she continued, "tell me with the winged, ecstatic words of your love, why I am like this emerald."

"Because of your eyes," he replied. "Because the eyes are the mirror of the soul! Because your eyes are emerald green!"

And he recited his private secretary's poem, steadily as he went on feeling the pride of authorship, until he almost believed he had written the lines himself:

Since my sight fell on those eyes of thine,
(Green as this emerald which I bring to thee)
Never can I forget those lovely eyes of thine,
(Green as this emerald which I bring to thee),
Of the hawk's, are they? The peacock's or the falcon's?
Or of the soft-eyed antelope's—the glances of thin eyes?
(Hayah! what care I? Since green they are,
Green as this emerald which I bring to thee).
As the lambs crouch hidden in the pasture,
From the shade of your loose tresses look those gentle eyes of thine,
As the armed trooper stands, his lance in hand beside him,
Thus stand the long lashes around those warring eyes of thine.
On each one's heart they feed, those cruel eyes of thine,
(Green as this emerald which I bring to thee).
Ah, Bibi Fathma! Look upon thy Zado with pity,
While there is power of seeing in thine eyes
(Green as this emerald which I bring to thee!)

THE gypsy's "Bravo! Excellent—by the teeth of Allah!" was genuine.

Why, she thought, this swollen Armenian money bag was a poet at heart, and she kissed him, if not exactly with real affection, then with something so closely akin to it that it would have needed a wiser expert in woman's reactions than Zado Kaboolian to tell that it was not pure gold but a clever alloy.

"I love you," she said simply and untruthfully.

He bowed; and it is a debatable point if at this precise moment his passion was deeper than his pride in his rather vicarious authorship or the other way about.

"Rejoicer," he announced, "God meant me to be a poet, not a business man. Do my feeble verses please you? Very well, I shall bring you more—tomorrow!"

This amused Bibi Fathma. She smiled.

For she said to herself that by tomorrow night he would be in his grave, executed as Yar Ali Bey's murderer. Justice was lightning quick and sword sharp in Turkey—at times.

She rose.

It was a large room, and in the center an oval space had been cleared for her to dance in. To one side of it squatted the musicians, while across from them a broad couch was buried under a mass of silken pillows. She pointed at it.

"Be pleased to recline at your leisure, my lord," she invited. "I shall dance for you! Ahee! A love feast! Ahee! Our wedding night, soul of my soul! First the dance—then, belike, a glass of perfumed Persian wine to rouse your passions."

"I need no wine to heat my blood, my desires," he exclaimed, sincerely enough.

"Not even," she smiled, "if my lips should touch your glass first?"

For her methods in the eternal war of the sexes were elemental, primitive, and therefore successful.

"You are adorable!" he murmured, in want of something more striking or original, and he went to the couch, where he reclined while Bibi Fathma exchanged rapid, sibilant words with Shafizullah, who had just returned from his second visit to Mario Baccigalupo's place.

There he had restored the package containing Ellen McIntyre's Afghan costume by the side of the sleeping negro porter, and the guileless African, coming out of his drug trance half an hour later, had rubbed his eyes, had agreed with the Sicilian's laughing remark that it was dangerous to drink strong liquor on an empty

How Eighteen-Year-mer's Daughter, and Found--- Crimi

"Hello, Sheriff," came Rita's firm voice, "is it true that you're offering $1,000 reward for the three men who broke jail yesterday?"

SHERIFF KNIGHT, some young sister wants you on the phone," the night jailer called to his big boss just about midnight on the day following the most daring jail delivery Shelby County, Tennessee, has ever known.

"Take the message, Walker. What the Sam Hill do you want to keep bothering me for? Unless it's something about them escaped convicts, don't call me again. Girl, huh!" snorted the sheriff, returning to his moody meditation of the escape of the three desperate jailbirds, bank robbers that wouldn't stop at murder, and of the valiant but so far futile attempts to capture them.

"Hanged if I know what to do now," he said to a reporter for a Memphis newspaper who was hanging around for late bits of the sensation of the hour. "I've got nigh on to a thousand men, deputies, city policemen and a posse or two of citizens out scouring the woods and dives along the old Miss-sipp. I've radioed and telegraphed descriptions of them and I've plastered every tree and fence in the county with these."

He pointed to a lurid poster advertising $1,000 reward for the capture of the criminals, dead or alive.

"This reward," said the newspaper man with deep sarcasm, "yes, the reward will be nice for the widow and orphans of the ill-fated son-of-a-gun who gets a glimpse of these gunmen. I don't believe I'll have room for a story of the capture of these bandits after I get through printing the casualty list. Bet they shoot up every deputy in the county. They pretty near cleaned you out of shotguns and pistols when—"

He was cut short by Walker calling from the telephone.

"Sheriff, you'll just have to come to this phone. It's little Rita Jarris—you know, one of those Pigeon Roost road Jarrises—and she ain't for no playin'."

The sheriff slouched over to the phone. "Sheriff Knight speaking," he growled into the receiver.

"Sheriff? Well, this is Rita Jarris," came a firm young girl's voice over the wire. "Is it true that you're offering $1,000 reward for the three men who broke jail yesterday?"

"Yes, yes, Miss Rita, what about it?"

"Pay me—I've caught the robbers," came the reply.

In all his life, the sheriff says, he had never been so surprised as he was at those words. But, of course, he kept his wits enough to find out where Rita was and just where and when she had seen the escaped bandits.

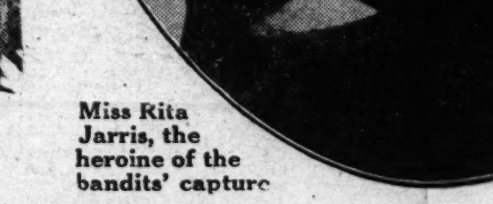

Before ten minutes had elapsed, Sheriff Knight and a hastily gathered troop of thirty men were speeding out to the Petruzzi store, eleven miles east of Memphis, near the intersection of the Winchester pike and the Pigeon Roost road.

They found Rita waiting there in the dark, anxiously whispering to the Petruzzis whom she had aroused from sleep to borrow the use of their phone. Rita was trembling with excitement, but her courage returned when she saw the armed posse, and she pluckily insisted on going right along with them to point out the spot where she had seen the bandits.

RITA climbed into the sheriff's automobile and directed the posse along the Pigeon Roost road for four miles, long dusty miles that she had traveled on foot earlier in the evening, keeping in the shadow of the woodland and wondering if the very thumping of her heart wouldn't warn those men she had glimpsed in the thicket on the outskirts of her father's farm.

When the posse came within a mile of where Rita had spotted the men, a wide cordon was formed. Rita, the sheriff and one or two of his deputies, waited noiselessly on the road until the cordon had time to encircle the thicket where the desperadoes were believed to be in hiding.

Rita demanded a shotgun. The sheriff, who already knew she was a better shot than most of the boys at the high school she attended, gave her one. He thought the small pistol she carried not enough of a weapon for such a dangerous situation.

When the cordon had had plenty of time to form, Rita, with a personal escort of three cool-headed deputy sheriffs, crawled over a field on hands and knees for a distance of at least half a mile. Rita had crawled over the same field once before, all by herself, after she had suddenly realized the identity of the men she had heard talking in the thicket. It was reassuring to have armed men along with her now.

They left her behind a log, lying flat on the ground, when at last they were within a short distance of their objective. The plucky girl would have gone right into the thicket if the men would have let her. Since she couldn't, she lay quite still, stopping up her ears to deaden the fusillade of shots she was certain was imminent.

The three men slipped noiselessly right up to the thicket, expecting any moment to be fired upon. Instead of the deafening roar of a shotgun, however, it was a much more reassuring noise that came to their ears as they neared the thicket. The dreaded bank bandits were snoring!

There in the moonlight the three of them lay sound asleep—John Jordan, Donald White and Thomas Garrity, mere youths in age but as resourceful and desperate criminals as Tennessee has known in a long time.

The desperadoes Rita caught. (1) John Jordan, (2) Thomas Garrity and (3) Donald White; and (4) Robert Chestnut, the one of the band who remained safely in jail

Their pistols and other belongings were on the ground beside the fugitives and they were slumbering as peacefully as you please, apparently unmindful of the price on their heads and the thousand armed men scouring the country for them.

So little Rita, lying behind her log, didn't hear a single shot. Guns weren't necessary. The deputies simply gathered up the bandits' weapons, awoke them with a yell and snapped handcuffs on them.

Rita came up then in time to point out where she had seen the men hide the shotguns, stolen from the jail.

"Way up in the bushes where the dew won't hit them," she remembered hearing one of them mutter in that exciting moment when she realized that she was within a few feet of three desperate men who would kill her in an instant if they thought she stood in the way of their liberty.

Last January the Cooper Street bank in Memphis was entered by five robbers. They forced the cashier, three accountants and a porter into the vault and escaped with over $3,000.

Nine weeks later a lone bandit, described as red-headed and freckled, walked into the same bank, poked his gun into the cashier's cage and daringly repeated the robbery.

THE same men proved to be back of both these robberies. Through the clue supplied by an automobile's peculiar bumpers, the red-headed bandit was arrested and a few days later three of his accomplices were caught.

Just before the successful attempt to break jail, a "stool pigeon" had reported a conspiracy to murder the night jailer and get away, being planned by the robbers. Extra precautions were taken, but in spite of these the plot was put into execution and three of the bank robbers got free—John Jordan, Thomas Garrity and Donald White. The jailer wasn't killed, but that wasn't the fault of his assailants. They hit him hard enough.

Rita in her robber-catching clothes

Raiding the sheriff's own office for sawed-off shotguns and pistols, the escaped criminals hit for the tall timber.

That was how they came to be in the thicket that evening when little Rita Jarris went out to gather wild flowers.

"I had picked my basket full and sat down under a tree to rest a bit," she told the sheriff after the men had been carried off to jail again. "I must have dozed off. I did not even hear the men

"Yes, yes," growled Sheriff Knight, "what about it?"

as they came through the underbrush. They're keen woodsmen. First thing I heard them talking.

"I did not realize for a moment who the men were," she continued. "Thought they were just campers. Then I heard something that gave me a thrill.

" 'Keep your pistols in your pockets,' one man said. Then I peeked through the foliage and saw them hiding the shotguns. Then I heard another one say, 'You certainly did hit that jailer an awful blow. He keeled over without a murmur!'

"Well, by that time I realized who these men were. I had seen some of the posters that afternoon on my way home and we had no telephone, anyway, so I knew I'd have to get to the store. It was five miles away. There was no moon, lucky for me, and I crawled across the field on my stomach, for fear they'd see me.

"Even when I got to the big road, I was afraid to straighten up and ran stooped over for a mile. I kept in the shadows until I got clear to the store. It must have been eleven o'clock by the time I called you, sheriff, but it had taken that long to get there."

"You're a mighty brave little girl, Rita," the sheriff told her. "I'd like to have you for a deputy. But come on. Your ma will be frantic having you out this late at night."

"Yes, sir, but—er, aren't you forgetting something? Where is the reward?"

"My gracious, I had forgotten that. But you get it early in the morning."

And Rita got the money. It is in a Memphis bank now, safely tucked away for college or a trousseau or anything she wants to use it for.

know what he had to go through, I wouldn't marry you."

"You wait," threatened Sidney, "and, of course, you're joking about this Badger. You don't know what that fellow is, my dear."

"Yes I do, and if he marries me he'll find out that I know."

"You're not engaged to that penny pincher!"

"No."

And then, suddenly, quite soon after that, they were engaged. It happened one night when Ellen was tired, and pursued by bills and in need of new clothes and in need of money, when she felt more alone in the world than her stark little statue did in the middle of the table. On that same night Kenneth, bitten by the only real passion of his life, had for an hour forgotten the adjustment of his life to his bank book, and wanted only to adjust it to the soft sweetness of possessing Ellen Dale.

To do him justice, after he had left her on the stairs, he took her half reluctant promise to marry him and the amazing memory of his first inspired embrace into his own rooms, and forgot figures and banks and everything in the world. It was Ellen who sat on the edge of her bed, with her hat still a little awry, and gazed at her statue and took desperate comfort in the trite reflection that a man was what a woman made him and that Kenneth really did care for her. She closed her eyes, and thought of the newspaper where one worked and worked and got no return except a salary which couldn't quite pay for her lodgings and her meals and her mother's board in the sanitarium where she lived, a salary which gave her no chance to buy anything to adorn her lovely body. There weren't so many rich men waiting to marry a girl like her, and as for men like Sidney she didn't want to embark on marriage which would be a struggle with only liking to help her along. If Sidney hadn't been so much a plunger, so much a bluffer like her father, she might have cared more for him, she thought. Or perhaps she might have cared less. In any case he wasn't a way out.

SHE was tired of bluffing about money and hoping for money. And a girl had to do something. She spent the first night of her engagement staring at the ceiling, with the wasteful light full on, hoping its glare might drive away some of the pictures of her father that haunted her, or the worry about her mother, or the pricking feeling that girls on their betrothal nights shouldn't feel like this.

Rapture remained with Kenneth, but not to the destruction of his temperament. He knew Ellen's background, and to that background it did not occur to him to make concessions. He did not translate his feeling into quick terms of what he could do for his fiancee.

That showed in his purchase of a ring. He was ignorant of the obliging custom which has made it conventional for a young woman to pick out her own ring accompanied by the man she is going to marry. Kenneth went to a jeweler whom he knew and bought what he thought was a correct thing, a solitaire diamond, a flawless and small diamond, set high in claws of gold.

Ellen looked at it somewhat desperately. She knew she wouldn't wear that ring.

"Is it all right?" asked Kenneth. Ellen heard the eagerness in his voice, and found it hard to speak. Finally she told him it was beautiful, but that she'd like to look rings over with him and see.

"Fine," said Kenneth, generously.

They went together to the jeweler's, and, having laid the gold and diamond ring on the counter with the definite intention of never picking it up again, Ellen led her fiance skilfully from the trays of modest solitaires to other trays where, in intricate platinum settings, expensive and luring diamonds lay.

"This is a beauty," said Ellen unerringly, after a close inspection, picking up the ring she meant to have. It was not, she thought, so much for the sake of diamond. Rings had never interested her greatly. But she couldn't have her friends make fun of Kenneth, as they would if she wore the one of his choice.

"Is that an engagement ring?" asked Kenneth doubtfully.

"The latest," offered the clerk.

"And you like it, Ellen?"

Ellen moved her hand along toward his. "Don't you?" she asked, smiling.

She left him with the clerk while she went to look at a case full of gold mesh bags. When she came back, Kenneth was a little grim and slightly pale, so she knew the price must have been mentioned. It took the fun out of it, thought Ellen, to have to maneuver with a rich man like Kenneth.

That was the first heat. There were other incidents like it. Ellen knew they were watched and gossiped about. She became self-conscious and even more deliberate as she put Kenneth through his paces. Little things began to assume great proportions. Kenneth's eye on the price list as they ordered a dinner could madden her after a week or two. Once they dined in a restaurant which was frequented by all of Ellen's old friends, and she felt that every one could see that measuring eye of Kenneth's comparing prices with pleasures, figuring whether the particular gastronomic joy was worth the expense. She knew that before they were through dinner he would look around and wonder what the overhead of a place like this was. Sure enough, it came.

"It's the overhead of a place like this that makes it so expensive," said Kenneth, eating his oysters.

"Is it expensive?" asked Ellen lightly.

Kenneth reached for the menu.

"Is it?" he asked, "look here—ninety cents for ice cream. Now at Mrs. Davis' we have ice cream in a ninety cent dinner—the best ice cream."

"But consider the place in which you eat it," suggested Ellen.

Kenneth looked at her queerly. She did seem intelligent, and yet she could make absurd remarks like that. He was continually torn by his desire to inform her, to educate her, and his humility and gratitude because he had won her. She was going to be the richest, the best cared for woman in the city, he told himself, secretly in delight.

"You see," Kenneth went on, educationally, "where these places make their mistake is in putting so much money into the overhead. They have to write it off as loss in the end. Never get it paid for. Now the university club here has the same problem. There's a bunch of fellows up there who want a new club. Want to put up a building that would cost a hundred thousand dollars. A lot of fellows who don't figure out—"

"Don't figure out the exact cost of their enjoyment?" asked Ellen icily.

Her eyes had just fallen on Sidney Blair across the room with a girl who used to be an intimate of hers. She knew they were talking about the Badger-Dale engagement. Sidney had made quite a dreadful row, and now he made as dreadful fun of the affair.

"What do you mean?" asked Kenneth.

Ellen let her eyes rest critically on her fiance.

"Don't you ever get tired of figuring exactly how much it costs you to breathe? Don't you think it would be better just to enjoy breathing, as other people do?"

Kenneth was grave.

"A lot more people could breathe comfortably," he said, "if they would live wisely."

"How can you be sure you're living so wisely? Don't you think there are plenty of people who are proud of possessions even if it is hard to take care of them? Who want things even if they have to stretch a point to get them?"

"I've seen people crushed by wanting to keep possessions," he said.

HE WAS thinking of his own father with his passion for his lands, but Ellen thought he was referring to her people and her head went up. If that was what he meant to preach at her—

"I'm like that," she warned him, "I want everything I see."

All he did was to laugh. It did not seem to occur to him that such flimsy philosophy could upset his own.

"What do you want this minute?" he asked. "You deserve anything for looking so lovely."

But it was not easy for Ellen to ask for things. In the matter of the ring she had acted to save Kenneth from being mocked. She made him take her to expensive restaurants lest he be accused of not wanting to do so. But it told on her temper. Until recently she had been accustomed to have a good many things laid at her feet, and going after them was a new and unpleasant experience. She soon found it was easy to get particular things from Kenneth, but there was no joy in such acquisitions or in looking forward to a married life of subtle extractions. He didn't seem to see the obvious things, like the reasons why they should take the big fast sailing steamers on their wedding trip to Europe or the necessity for a house that would have a proper relation to his income.

Two or three times she was on the point of breaking off their engagement, and each time something prevented her. It was so comforting to know, as she went about her work in the city where she had been brought up in luxury and where she had known so much trouble, that she had an anchor, that there was some one to whom she mattered tremendously. The proportions of his devotion as compared with the argumentative affection Sidney Blair had shown her and the in-again-out-again flirtations she had had with all kinds of men, loomed large. Kenneth made no bones about it. She was the center of his world. If it had only been a more generous world, Ellen felt it would have been perfect.

She saw soon enough that Kenneth was not popular with the other men, and Sidney Blair had made the reasons clear enough before her engagement. If he was not to earn popularity in some way, she thought it would mean a married life of quasi-ostracism. She could see them being asked to big dull affairs and being left out of small gay ones. The only thing to do was to change Kenneth, and as the weeks went by Ellen began to be less sure of her power to do it. She wore extravagant clothes out of her old wardrobe, and told him how much they had cost; she admired all kinds of luxuries in shop windows in the city. Kenneth didn't seem to pay much attention. He was unswervingly decent, unswervingly kind, and always looked at the cost of his food before he ordered it, and kept down his overhead expenses. He and Sidney Blair had offices in the same building, but Blair's was a front

POEMS OF THE CONFEDERACY

MARIE LACOSTE.

Marie Lacoste, whose father and mother were natives of France, was engaged in teaching in Savannah, Ga., at the outbreak of the civil war. Her early years were spent in that city. The greater part of her life was passed as a teacher of French. She wrote but few poems, and, it seems, was very much averse to any publicity in regard to her literary work. Her poems have never been published in book form.

SOMEBODY'S DARLING.

Into a ward of the whitewashed walls
Where the dead and the dying lay,
Wounded by bayonets, shells and balls,
Somebody's darling was borne one day.
Somebody's darling! so young and so brave,
Wearing still on his pale sweet face,
Soon to be hid by the dust of the grave,
The lingering light of his boyhood's grace

Matted and damp are the curls of gold,
Kissing the snow of that fair young brow;
Pale are the lips of delicate mold—
Somebody's darling is dying now.
Back from the beautiful, blue-veined face
Brush every wandering, silken thread,
Cross his hands as a sign of grace—
Somebody's darling is still and dead!

Kiss him once for somebody's sake;
Murmur a prayer, soft and low;
One bright curl from the cluster take—
They were somebody's pride, you know.
Somebody's hand has rested there;
Was it a mother's, soft and white?
And have the lips of a sister fair
Been baptized in those waves of light?

God knows best. He was somebody's love
Somebody's heart enshrined him there;
Somebody wafted his name above,
Night and morn on the wings of prayer;
Somebody wept when he marched away,
Looking so handsome, brave and grand;
Somebody's kiss on his forehead lay,
Somebody clung to his parting hand.

Somebody's watching and waiting for him,
Yearning to hold him again to her heart;
There he lies—with the blue eyes dim,
And smiling, child-like lips apart.
Tenderly bury the fair young dead,
Pausing to drop on his grave a tear;
Carve on the wooden slab at his head,
"Somebody's darling lies buried here."

Short Story

suite and Kenneth's a modest one windowed back room with a little outer cubicle for a stenographer. When Ellen met him one day by appointment in his office, she looked around her in frank disdain.

"This is a terrible looking place," she said. "Why don't you get a better office?"

He grinned cheerfully.

"There's a good deal of business done here and——"

"It keeps down the overhead," she finished.

"Exactly."

They met Blair in the elevator.

"You haven't changed your mind on the new club, Kenneth? The boys are all waiting for you to help them out," said Blair.

"No, I haven't."

Blair looked cynically at Ellen.

"You two off for a little stroll? By the way, where are you going to live after you are married? Mrs. Davis' select establishment?"

Kenneth was bland. "Couldn't find anything much better."

But Ellen's face had gone scarlet. When Kenneth had tucked her in the automobile of which he was still so proud, she did not speak. After a little he became conscious of her silence.

"What's the trouble, Ellen?"

"O, why do you let those people make fun of you?" she burst out. "Why don't you help them with their university club and make some friends."

"But I don't think," he began.

"Don't think. Do it because I want you to——" she laid her hand on his arm. "They'd all be cheering for you. You'd be the most popular young man in town and you can afford it—it's for your own sake."

"You don't see that the principle is all wrong. Those young fellows ought to have a place they can pay for themselves. I'd help to set the old place on its feet. . . . But they're led by a bunch of spenders. It's the principle of the thing, Ellen. I don't want to go against my judgment just to get a hand!"

"It's not principle," she said stonily, "it's something different. Kenneth, we may as well give up. Our minds don't track. We'll just never hit it off. You just want to hoard and I believe in spending."

"Don't let that worry you. We'll fix that all right," he answered cheerfully. "I know we're different. But——"

"But you're so sure you're right and also so sure you have the money and I haven't that you don't worry," she told him. "No, I'm done, Kenneth. I can't stand this any longer. Here's your ring. Take it back and get your money back. I had to beg that out of you or I'd have been ashamed of you. I couldn't marry you. I've been trying to face it, but I can't. I don't even like you. I can't stand stinginess."

She held out the ring, and as he did not take it she dropped it in his loose coat pocket.

"There it is."

"And you're not going to marry me? You really don't like me?"

"I'm a living refutation of all your principles. I'm a bankrupt's daughter and I have several hundred dollars' worth of bills that I can't meet. Take me back to that haven of sober living, Mrs. Davis', for my last night. Tomorrow I've got to find something cheaper—and I hope less virtuous."

He did exactly what she bade. He took her back to Mrs. Davis'. For a moment they confronted each other as she stepped out of the car.

"You mean it? You don't like me?"

He looked so pathetic, so lost, that it was hard to think of him as the possessor of a great deal of anything, even money. Ellen had an absurd rush of feeling and memories of all the times he had been kind to her. Then she looked away.

"I'm sorry," she said. "I suppose I am no good. But I'd sooner be no good than ungenerous. I can't struggle with you for every expenditure. I haven't anything of my own. I like useless, bright, surroundings. I don't care what they cost. I like atmosphere that means money. We'd be fighting in a month. I like—overhead."

She laughed so she wouldn't cry, and went in the house, and Kenneth got in his car and drove away, a pale, spectacled young man driving through the autumn mist as if he saw nothing. Once before he had had this horrible pain of loss—the day when he was a boy and they had known the farm was lost, seen the broad, beautiful acres with their familiar, loved places passing into the hands of creditors. The sick, empty shock brought it all back again—how he had suffered at losing the place, how his father had suffered, how they had come to hate to speak of it. He hadn't owned anything since then that any one could take away—hadn't wanted to own anything. This car—then Ellen. She wasn't going to marry him. She couldn't stand him. She hadn't even wanted to hear his explanation—his safeguards for her——

He was out late that night, but, unlike most miserable young men, he had no place of resort. And finally he turned the key in his rooms at Mrs. Davis' with his eye on the stairs. Ellen might be coming up. But she was not.

It was four o'clock when Kenneth decided that just one thing in the world mattered. He had to see Ellen, see her once more to seal his vision of her. If he could keep the vision and pretend it hadn't happened. He had a maddening knowledge of her upstairs above him, sleeping desolately with that light on. He thought of the room he had planned for her, and had not had the courage to tell her about. There wouldn't be any room now.

He went quietly up the stairs, but without nervousness. Mrs. Davis' boarders might have had no ears or eyes behind their closed doors for all he cared. But as he turned the little bend in the landing, he stopped. Looking like a mauve satin angel, Ellen was coming down. At sight of each other they stopped, but both of them were too much in earnest to see anything amusing in the meeting.

"You see," Ellen began, "you mustn't think I don't admire you—and respect you."

"Well—I couldn't sleep," she admitted, "I couldn't sleep."

Kenneth stopped being a shy young man. All the world went spinning as romance and pain and sweetness merged in that staircase encounter.

"Why, you must care," he said huskily. "You've got to care because I do so desperately. As for principle, Ellen, you're the only one I've got left."

"Poor Kenneth!"

After a long pause he stroked the mauve satin dressing gown that he held in his arms very gently.

"I love your beauties, your extravagances," he told her softly. "I can't be like that. It's been pounded out of me. But I was going to tell you, darling, later—I'd decided long ago to give you half of everything I've got on our wedding day—so you wouldn't have to bother with my penny pinching. And you can take care of that side of our life, the entertaining, the making friends, the home making. As for that club thing—if you like——"

"I don't like," she interrupted, "I don't want you to buy your popularity with a cheap gesture! That was what I came down to tell you about."

"Exactly," agreed Kenneth, and went on absently. "You see the overhead——"

But Ellen tossed him a kiss, and fled.

Believers in Marriage

seemed that, struggle as we would, we could not get ahead. Always when we would get a thousand or so ahead something would come along which wiped it out. With practically steady employment for both of us for the last three years, we have been able to save at the rate of about $100 a month, and hope to increase this amount with any salary increases in the near future. Because of a physical disability, we have never had children, and the nature of our lives and finances have prevented us from adopting little ones, although we hope soon to do that now. We both love children and do what we can for those about us.

"How do we get along? Splendidly! Young people come to us, asking for our secret, and complimenting us on our happiness and loyalty. We have had our misunderstandings, but we try to reason them out fairly and lovingly, without the assistance of outsiders.

"You urge the regulation typical marriage—a settled home, owned if possible, babies, and lots of hard work, as the recipe for marital happiness. I believe it lies deeper than that. It is mutual love, confidence, unswerving loyalty, and a determination to play the game of life fairly together."

Middle aged matrimony to the excitement-chasers may seem monotonous, but to those tunefully wedded 'tis a season of deep content. This is Mrs. B.'s theory.

"I have to laugh when I look around at some of my acquaintances," she writes, "and see their struggle to ape the ways of youthful couples. It seems to me herein lies so much of married discord. Married at 20 and 22, we had our struggles, for we married on practically nothing a year and we had babies, four of them, in rapid succession. Now, at 43, if I cannot take life comfortably, and if my darling wouldn't be permitted to take it the same way, I'd say we had made a failure of our marriage. This we have not.

"In the last ten years I can truthfully say we have never had a quarrel. If anything, I have a more devoted suitor than the impetuous young man who came ardently wooing some twenty-three years ago. I don't expect him to act the way he did then, and, apparently he doesn't expect me to be as fresh looking as I was then, or he'd probably have commented on my graying locks and faded color. Instead, he tells me I'm better looking than my 18-year-old girl, who, if you will excuse a mother's ravings, is a beauty.

"When people ask us how we get along so well my husband jokingly confides he lets me have my own way, but never fails to add: 'And she lets me have mine.' The truth is that we long since thrashed that out, not without tears on my part, I'll admit, and decided there wasn't anything either of us wanted more than that there be harmony in our household.

"So, I say, if we seem to some folk like a terribly settled down old pair, it is because there is little unrest in our hearts. There is none in mine, I know, and if there were in my sweetheart's I don't suppose he would want to spend all his evenings with me, or insist upon me taking trips with him a couple of times a year.

"Do I believe in marriage? Well, my daughter told me last night she and the young Dartmouth boy she has known all her life will marry immediately he is through school. I told her if the boy was only half as good as her father she'd get more happiness out of life than ever I, her mother, could rightfully ask for her."

The Abingdon Press announce a volume, "Advertising the Church."

One of the most recent adaptations of the church to the currents and methods of the day is its employment of the devices of the advertiser. Publicity has become a widely used and important word in the activities of the church. The claim is even made that "the Christian church of today is the result of the publicity which the 'good news' has received in the past." The rich and abundant materials assembled in this volume are an indication of the constantly extending interest on the part of the clergy and the laity in the project of bringing the church to the direct attention of the people through the medium of advertising. The author reminds us that the church faces a mammoth task today, and declares that "with the myriad interests at home to distract attention of those already in the church or in its 'fringe,' with pagan religions competing openly and effectively for supremacy in all quarters of the globe, it behooves the church to cast about for a more effective means of spreading the gospel."

SWORDS EAST

Shafizullah closed one eye, winking broadly at his wife.

Then he walked over to the taboret where stood the box in which she had dropped poem and jewel. He opened the box, shielding it with his back, and dipped agile brown fingers inside. And Zado Kaboolian would have been surprised, perhaps a little worried, could he have known that the small emerald which he had given to Bibi Fathma—Shafizullah had slipped it into his waist shawl, meant to present it to the little negro servant girl whom he honored with his devotion—had changed into a large, flawless, exquisite stone, clear green, translucent, carved in the shape of a parrot; the same jewel which years ago, thereby causing a palace scandal that had never reached the outside world, Abdul Hamid had given to Yar Ali Bey, his chief eunuch, the same jewel which the latter's assassin had stolen with the rest of Yar Ali Bey's treasure; the same jewel, finally, which Prince Tcherkessky had brought to Bibi Fathma a day or two earlier when she had said to him:

"This emerald, too, I need to save your life. The emerald—and the Armenian pig's unclean passion—and my own cleverness."

By this time the musicians had commenced playing, with a flood of strange, haunting minor harmonies, accompanied by baroque grace notes and occasional high, throaty yells and gliding appoggiaturas pitched an infinitesimal sixteenth note below the main harmonic tones to which the European ear is attuned.

Bibi Fathma was dressed like an Indian nautch girl. She wore a sari—the shawl which a Hindu woman drapes with a deft art undreamed of by Fifth avenue and the Rue Royale—of pale rose, gold embroidered silk shot with orange and purple and peacock green and bordered with seed pearls and tiny, uncut diamonds. The delicately formed feet and ankles and calves were perfect; they did not have the bunched, muscular coarseness of European dancers. Gold anklets and armlets jingled with every movement of her lithe body. Flowers and jewels mingled in her hair.

"Ho!" she cried.

The music swelled desperately, and she began her dance with a gliding movement, so slow as to be almost imperceptible. The hands kept time with her feet. It was a dance of allurement, of temptation, perfectly carried out in every gesture. One saw nothing but the swaying body, the waving, beckoning hands sometimes bent back until they almost touched the curved arms—and Zado Kaboolian leaned forward, sucking in his breath sharply, lost to the world of gold, the world of facts.

As the music wailed more wildly she jerked into a whirl, arms straight out, the palm of her left hand turned up, that of her right hand turned down, with half closed eyes, a dreamy smile on her lips. Then, as the music became yet more ecstatic, her whirling increased in speed; her short, wide, circular skirt swept around and around like a great wheel; her little bare, sweat-drenched heels made a hissing sound as they tapped the floor; her scarf, skillfully tossed from left to right, up and down, then forward with a sweeping motion of the whole body, assumed fantastic, ever changing forms, soaring up in a foamy cloud of purple shaded rose, again standing straight out like a flame in the meeting of winds; the jewels and the gold embroidery glittered; the bangles tinkled; all was barbaric, seductive.

SHE came closer to Kaboolian—a perfume, sweet, mysterious, so faint as to be little more than a suggestion, hovered about her like a butterfly. Again she receded. It was the dance of all the east, with its cruelty and its grace, with its strength and its sudden, cloying sweetness and, straight through, its fixed, stony, eternal purpose. Faster and faster she whirled—and Kaboolian's imagination was inflamed. He was completely carried away.

Dance? This was not a dance! This was life itself, passion, nature, an immense, cosmic pulsing and vibrating. Her body, as she moved past him in a great wind, jerked spasmodically, her green eyes flashing momentarily through the folds of her scarf and piercing into Kaboolian's brain with a strange, rather mocking meaning. And it was to him as if all India were gyrating before him in mad circles.

Monkey gods, red and shameless and greedy, seemed to leap and leer above stolid, black stone bulls, knee deep in sharply scented marigold. Age green bronze bells seemed to clamor from unseen temples, calling the worshippers to prostrate themselves before Durga, the Goddess of the Thousand Names, the Goddess of the Thousand Lusts, the Goddess of the Thousand Cruelties.

"Ho!" she cried again; and the music became louder and louder, the drummer beating his tom-tom with elbow and fist in a very thunder of hollow sound.

She moved backward quickly, step by step, with savage, stamping feet, hands outstretched and pointing, then suddenly gliding down the curve of hips and breasts, until she reached the farther side of the cleared space where Shafizullah was watching her, evidently as entranced as the Armenian.

As she passed him he whispered rapidly: "The sultan has arrived. He is in the small room."

"Keep him there," she whispered back, "until——"

"I know! The drink is prepared."

She moved forward again, slowly now. The music thinned to a wail; only a shadow, wiped over the thrum-thrum, thrummy-thrum of the zitar, a faint memory of far thunder as the drummer's knuckles rubbed across the tom-tom. She advanced with a rhythmical, swaying motion, her scarf hanging in limp folds like a wilted, useless thing, supreme abandon in the curve of her body.

Her eyes were completely closed.

"Hi-i-ik!" the piercing cries of the blind musicians stabbed in wild harmony, and she stood still, only her breasts fighting for breath. She opened her eyes, looked up and down as if seeking for somebody.

She seemed to find him.

"O, eyes of my soul! O, my master!" she said with a low voice and walked up to Kaboolian, the fringe of her shawl jerking sideways to the swing of her supple hips, her feet slurring over the ground with a slight jingling of anklets.

Again she stood still, death still as the desert at noon. Then she sank on the ground in front of Kaboolian.

"O, my master!" she repeated.

"Best beloved!" he murmured.

He leaned down. He drew her up to the couch by his side, his arm encircling her waist.

"Your lips!" he said hoarsely. "Give me your lips, rejoicer of souls;"

"Thirsty for my kisses, are you?" she smiled. "I am thirsty for wine. I am so warm." She clapped her hands; called: "Shafizullah!"

"Yes?"

"Bring wine!"

He disappeared in a little alcove and returned carrying a tray with a slim Persian bottle and two glasses. He poured the wine, gave one glass to the Armenian and the other to his wife.

She lifted hers to her lips, barely touching it.

"To our love, my Zado!" she said.

"To our love, my Fathma!" he echoed, and he emptied his glass.

The effect was instantaneous. He toppled over on the couch as though struck by lightning—for Shafizullah, careful man, had trebled the dose of knockout drops—and lay there, breathing stertorously, dead to the world, alone with whatever dreams of passion and desire were coiling in his brain.

The gypsy laughed.

"Hayah!" she exclaimed. "My debt to you is almost paid." And she added in Hindustani: "Maral jain ras gain—can a dying man sing love songs?"

She turned to the servants with a few quick words. They as well as the musicians left. So did Shafizullah, to return a minute or two later, ushering in the sultan, who was accompanied by half a dozen stalwart eunuchs.

She salaamed.

"The proof which you promised—" he asked—"you have it, lotus petal?"

"The proof, Heaven Born," she replied, "is in that box over there!"

SHE motioned to Shafizullah, who walked over to the taboret, picked up the box and brought it to the sultan. The latter opened it. He looked at the huge, exotic emerald carved in the shape of a parrot.

"Ah!" he said. "I remember! The emerald which I gave to Yar Ali Bey when he protected me against my own brother's murderous dagger! The ancient crown jewel of the house of Othman which I gave to the brave, loyal negro, out of gratitude, because it was the most precious thing I possessed! And now"—he turned white with rage—"he—this Armenian assassin—he——"

"He killed, for the sake of greed!" interrupted the gypsy. "And he gave himself away—and, by the same token, will pay for it with his head—who chews things; consider the dog, a carnivora that gnaws bones; encourage the child to do likewise.

The milk furnishes calcium (lime), and if fresh and unheated, vitamins which are essential for the development of sound teeth. The leafy vegetables furnish vitamins and are a natural cleanser for the teeth. The raw vegetables furnish calcium and vitamins and aid in natural cleansing. Toothbrush and dentifrice, except when prescribed for pathological or abnormal conditions, are just superfluous merchandise. The regular dental examination is THE way to conserve the teeth. The cow and the dog both preserve their teeth very well without using the superfluous merchandise. The child should be encouraged to gnaw at bones as a baby (as soon as he has any teeth to gnaw with) and to crack nuts and do other odd jobs with 'em as a healthy child, for this sort of exercise of the jaws, gums and teeth is, scientifically, about as important as the diet.

Craving for Soil.

I have a constant craving for black earth, and the only relief I can get is by eating some precipitated chalk, but in half an hour I begin to feel the craving again. This has bothered me for years. Please answer. (K. R. S.)

Answer—This craving for dirt or soil is called pica and is not a serious thing in itself. The chief danger is infection by germs present in the earth or soil or infestation with parasites, the microscope eggs of which are ingested in the soil (such as hookworm, and common roundworm, otherwise known as lumbricoid and "stomach" worm). Bake the sand or earth you use and no great harm will come from eating it. Why not eat some eggshell (which is almost pure calcium carbonate) by way of occasional change from the chalk (which is practically the same thing). Maybe the chewing of some unmilled raw wheat or other natural grain would satisfy the craving. Wild rice is pretty good to chew—for anybody. These suggestions are merely harmless. I do not know that the craving (often noticed in young children, indicates a lack of or a need of mineral elements in the diet.

Ambitious to Attain 100 Per Cent.

I am a young woman expecting my first baby, and realize my ignorance on all the little details which I dislike bothering my physician about. Can you recommend some book as a sound guide for me?" (O. T.)

Answer—"The Prospective Mother," by Dr. J. M. Slemons, (Appletons); "Approaching Motherhood," by Dr. G. L. Brodhead, (Hoeber); "Simplifying Motherhood," by Dr. F. H. Richardson, (Putnam), are excellent. Dr. Slemons' book is now a bit old (1915), Dr. Brodhead's book is written in the attractive question and answer form, and Dr. Richardson's book (1925) is illustrated in a helpful way.

Radio and the Baby.

Your opinion on the subject of whether radio programs received on the loud speaker are harmful for a nine-months-old baby—he sleeps in a bedroom next to the room where the radio is, with the door closed. (S. E. G.)

Answer—No. Real music is rather good for the baby to listen to. The disagreeable noises which are sometimes perpetrated in the guise of jazz probably injure the baby as any other frightful or unpleasant sounds do. Radio or no radio, the baby should be undressed, perhaps bathed, and tucked away in bed by 5 o'clock in the afternoon, and after he has gone to bed for the night no sound or noise should be permitted to wake him. Of course, if he sleeps, the radio program is the least of his concerns. His only anxieties are good eats and dry didies.

The Art of Making Fire

BY RAMON COFFMAN.

After Stone Age men discovered fire in a burning forest or elsewhere, they are believed to have carried away embers and to have made bonfires near their caves. If the bonfire near a cave went out, there were no matches with which to light a new one. It was necessary to visit another cave and obtain a burning stick. For that reason, tribes must have taken great pains to keep at least one fire going at all times.

If a tribe lost its fire, a serious problem arose. Forests are not set afire by lightning every week or month in a given region. Even years might pass before a Stone Age tribe could obtain embers from a burning forest. The only thing then left to do was to borrow a light from some other tribe.

At some time in their history Stone Age men decided to find a way of making fire for themselves, or the knowledge may have come by accident. If you rub your hands together they become warm. Some Stone Age man learned to rub wood against wood, and by that means fire was produced.

Close to the surface in some parts of the earth is a metal known as "pyrite." It is of a yellow color and is sometimes called "fool's gold," because it may fool a person into thinking he has found gold. In several places where Stone Age men lived in Europe, pieces of pyrite have been found close to pieces of flint and the remains of fires. This leads us to believe that Stone Age men had a means of making fire besides rubbing wood against wood, and by that means and pyrite together, sparks could be made and a fire could be lighted.

The torch must have been used during the Stone Age, to light up parts of the dark caves. The earliest torches were probably nothing but burning sticks. Later it is believed that pieces of fat were placed at the ends of sticks, and used to improve the light.

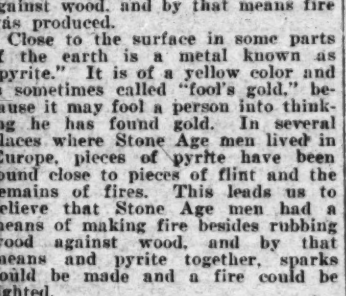

Besides the torch we have reason to believe that a rude kind of lamp was used in some caves. Flat stones, hollowed out to make a shallow basin, have been found in several French caverns. In the bottoms the remains of burned out fat has been found. This appears to prove that the stones were used as lamps. It is not known whether any kind of wick was used.

By learning to make fires for themselves, Stone Age men greatly improved their light. They no longer needed to worry lest the tribe's last fire should go out. Hunters out on trips could make fires where they wished, and could cook their game.

Torches and stone lamps helped artists make pictures in the dark parts of caves in many places in France and Spain. Next week, I shall describe those pictures.

How It Works.

("If a child is impudent, try the old-fashioned punishment of making him stand in a corner with his face to the wall until he is ready to apologize."—Jane Hibben Sharpe, to Parent-Teachers' association.)

We read this advice from a qualified parent,
And thought she was probably right;
We decided, moreover, that ev'n if she weren't
We'd settle the question tonight.
Possessing a child who is modernly snappy
Or anciently snippy at best,
We said to ourselves we'd be perfectly happy
To give it a clinical test.

We said, here's a lad who believes he is slicker
Than those who are paunchy and gray,
Because he is rather remarkably quicker
In vulgar and vain repartee;
We said, we've been foolishly careless and easy,
We've spoiled this obstreperous
kid;
He's headed for pavements surprisingly greasy—
He's due for one whale of a skid.

That evening it happened. In passing his cup, he Splashed tea in his grandmother's eye;
When we ventured reproof, the impertinent puppy
Came back with a flippant reply.
We rose up, resolved that this courtesy-scorner
Should weep for his impudent crack;
"Go stand," we commandingly roared.
"in a corner!"
"Go sit," he replied, "on a tack!"

HELP!

She: "Do you use tooth paste?"

He: "Gracious, no! None of my teeth are loose."

My Dog Does—

This dog is Jack Huxley of Indianapolis, playing the piano. He looks very intelligent up there on the bench, with his hands on the keys, but maybe he is just playing chop sticks. You can't tell.

Before Jack died at the age of seventeen, he belonged to Charles William Rippel. Charles says he really played a tune on the piano and did lots of other tricks.

ANSWER TO WHAT'S THE MATTER

Lots of children have had arms broken or been badly hurt as a result of tripping. Knowing that, you wouldn't want to go around tripping your friends, would you?

TRUE SCIENCE

She: "I've read that men grow bald because of the intense activity of their brains."

He: "Exactly, and women have no whiskers because of the intense activity of their chins."

INGRATITUDE

He: "Each hour I spend with you is like a pearl to me."

She: "Aw—quit stringing me."

THAT IS GOOD

Bob: "Is he a good artist?"

Betty: "I should say he is. Why, the other day he drew a hen so natural that when he threw it in the wastebasket, it laid there."

A BUSINESS HEAD

Teacher: "James, I thought I told you to take that seat next to Pearl."

James: "You did, but I sold it to Jack for a nickel."

WHICH MORE IMPORTANT?

"Our romance consisted of two scenes."

"Yes?"

"Yes, I seen her and she seen me."

Dentist: "Pardon me a moment, I must have a drill."

Patient: "Heavens! Can't I ever have my tooth filled without a rehearsal?"

What's the Matter?

Answer will be found elsewhere on this page.

DREADFUL BOY!

Impudent boy: "What did you say your age is?"

Old maid: "I've just reached twenty-one."

Boy: "Is that so! What detained you?"

PROBABLY NOT

Dad: "Take things slower, my boy. Patience never cost anything."

Dutiful son: "Did you ever ride behind a slow taxi-driver?"

HANDSOME, IN FACT

He: "Who is that fat tub over there?"

She: "That's my brother."

He: "He sure is good looking."

"Has your brother come home college yet?"

"I guess so, or else the car's been stolen."

THINGS TO MAKE

THE SACRED RUBY OF THE IKKANS

By JACK GIHON

Author of "The Head Hunters of San Blas," Etc.

Bob Ransom and Jimmie Bryson, boys of fourteen, with the latter's father, James Bryson, a mining civil engineer, are on board the schooner-yacht Nancy, sailing for Colon, when they run into a hurricane which blows them off their course. The captain of the vessel decides to put in for repairs at Kirkbride's Island, once the stronghold of a pirate and now inhabited only by Indians. The boys decide to hunt for pirate gold, and going ashore, meet a native who gives them directions for reaching Kirkbride's old home, high on a cliff. They go to it, and behind a loose stone in the fireplace, discover a paper telling where Kirkbride's chest is buried. As they prepare to dig for it, they see the Indian who had given them the directions, watching them.

INSTALLMENT III.

Kirkbride's Chest

Had the Indian been watching them when they discovered the scrap of paper in the fireplace? The thought struck Jimmie and Bob simultaneously. Instinctively Jimmie shoved the piece of paper in his pocket as the native, now smiling, advanced through the doorway. There was a moment of dread for both of them. Had the Indian, believing that they held the secret of Kirkbride's buried treasure, lured them to this secluded spot where he might wrest their secret from them?

Still smiling, the native walked across the room until he confronted them. "You find him paper?" he queried in his difficult broken English.

It was on the tip of Jimmie's tongue to deny it. But something, the Indian's wily ways, perhaps, told him that the man had been watching them when they made their discovery. He decided to act boldly.

"Yes," he said, "I found the paper. But it belongs to us."

"All 'ight, all 'ight," the Indian answered. "You find paper, you keep him. Maybe you find Senor Kirkbride's treasure—eh? All 'ight, all 'ight, you find him, you keep him. I help you dig—eh?"

The Indian's alacrity to agree with them surprised Jimmie and Bob. If he had been interested enough to climb the cliff and follow them at this early hour, why should he be so willing to allow them to have the treasure, if they found it?

Jimmie thought of attempting to escape. That, though, would be an impossibility, he felt. Apparently the native had some vital interest in that scrap of paper which now rested in his pocket. Unquestionably, he would not permit the boys to leave and carry it to the safety of their ship.

The Indian was smiling enough, and on the surface, very pleasant, but his eyes gleamed in a manner that made both boys feel that he would stop at no ends to gain that which he desired.

"All right," said Jimmie after a slight hesitation. "We'll go out and start digging now. You can help us if you want to."

The paper which Kirkbride had left in the little tin box told them that the pirate's chest was buried twenty paces in front of the doorway to his house. "He is a big man," said Bob. "So one of his paces would almost equal two of ours. Suppose we try a spot thirty of our paces from the door and see what we can find."

Jimmie agreed, and the two of them, carefully measuring their steps, counted off thirty paces. They examined the ground beneath them.

They were disappointed, however, to learn that a big slab of rock was embedded in the ground at that point.

"He couldn't have dug through the rocks," said Bob, "so we must have figured wrong. The question is, did his twenty paces end on this side or on the other side of the boulder?" "that we are going to have to dig a whole bunch of holes before we come to the right spot."

Just then his keen eyes sighted a slight mound on the far side of the boulder. Unless one were looking for such a spot it would appear no different from the rest of the ground, for grass and shrubbery had grown over it and the passing of time had hardened the surface.

"I'll bet that's where he left his chest," Jimmie said, pointing out the spot to his pal. "But I've an idea—the Indian has pretty long legs. Let's get him to take twenty steps from the doorway and see where he lands."

The Indian was sitting down in front of the house, as though little interested in their activities. Jimmie explained to him what they wanted him to do and he agreed at once. They were surprised, however, to learn that his march took him to the near side of the boulder, instead of to the far side, where they had noticed the mound.

"I'll be switched if I know what to do," said Jimmie. "I don't want to be digging the whole cliff away."

"I'll tell you what," said Bob. "Let's trust to luck. Throw up a coin—if it's heads, we'll dig where that mound is; if it's tails, we'll start where the Indian marched."

Jimmie fished in his pocket and spun a coin into the air. It fell to the ground and both boys leaned over eagerly to read what luck had decided for them.

"Heads—that means we dig through the mound," cried Bob. "Let's get to work!"

Both boys seized their picks and shovels and in a jiffy they had turned up the sod and commenced digging on a hole about six feet square. After they had broken the surface crust they came to a soft, sandy soil that proved easy work for them.

They had hardly gotten two feet down when Bob's pick struck something hard. "I've got it," he cried. "I've got it—at least I've struck something."

The boys centered their activities on the spot, and in a few seconds had cleared away a quantity of soil. Instead of the treasure chest they expected to find, they came upon a solid strata of rock.

Bob threw his pick down disgustedly. "Now isn't that the cat's meow!" he muttered. "Just when we were going good and thought we had come across a big discovery we find this."

"It's tough luck, all right," Jimmie answered, "but we've got to expect it. The only thing left to do is to dig in the spot that the Indian marked off."

They were just about to go to it when they observed strange signs on the part of the native. He was motioning them and seemed to be making signs for them to be still, advancing toward them. The boys looked at him wonderingly—what could he mean?

"Come," he whispered, "don't make a sound. Quick, quick."

Still wondering, they followed him across the clearing, crouching by force of suggestion as he did, until they reached the edge of the woodland. He dodged behind some thick underbrush and squatted there, motioning for them to crouch also. The boys followed his gaze. In a moment they learned the reason for their retreat. Two swarthy Indians had advanced from the woods and stood in the center of the clearing, talking between themselves. One of them went to the door of the hut and looked in; then, shaking his head, returned to his companion. The two of them looked around but did not seem to notice the pile of fresh turned earth where the boys had been digging. Then, shaking their heads, they made off along the path that led down the face of the cliff.

"I don't know what they wanted," said Bob, "but we sure did escape 'em."

"You know what it is they seek?" asked the Indian, leaning closer to them, and speaking in a low, intense voice. "What they seek is the same what I seek. It is . . ."

And here the Indian, feeling for his words with difficulty, speaking intensely, unfolded to them a story of the pirate Kirkbride. Time had been when these natives had been around of their tribe. There had been an insigna of that tribe—a rich ruby, carved on its face with mystical figures, the sacred charm of a fast dwindling race. The ruby, clasped in a band of gold, was worn by the rulers of the tribe; it had come down from generation to generation as the highest emblem of the race.

Then came Kirkbride. He had seen the ruby and he had coveted it. One night it disappeared from the hut of the ruler.

Kirkbride had died, but the gem was never found. Every Indian in the tribe had sought it, for the man who found it would become the ruler of his people. These boys had come, and they were welcomed, for it was thought that they perhaps had information as to the hiding place of the ruby.

"You find him, you give him to me," the Indian demanded.

"We promise that," said Jimmie and Bob in unison, then Bob added, "but we get the pirate gold, if we find that."

The Indian nodded, and the three of them returned to the clearing to recommence their digging. Now that the native had confided in them, they felt that they had a strong friend and ally, and it was with a lighter heart that they went back to their task.

They dug in the spot the Indian had marked off, he taking hand and working with them side by side. Steadily the pit went down until now they were four feet below the surface.

Bob stopped to wipe his brow. "It's a hard job," he muttered.

"Yes, it's a hard job, but think of the reward." Thereupon they worked with renewed vigor.

The pit had been sunk five feet in depth when this time Jimmie's spade struck against a hard object. Feverishly they cleared away the soil until they were able to distinguish what this hard object was.

Bob peered closely at it. "The chest," he cried. "Kirkbride's treasure chest!"

(To Be Concluded Next Week.)

"Such manners!" exploded Mr. Nickeldick, as he stamped off through the snow. "I never saw such rudeness and impoliteness in all my born days—right while I was telling them about Aunt Windpenny, too."

Mr. Nickeldick had gone to spend the evening with the Sligs. Mr. Slig had gone to sleep and snored, right while Mr. Nickeldick was telling him about the time Aunt Windpenny almost choked on a peach seed. Mrs. Slig had yawned a couple of times, too.

It was most insulting, and Mr. Nickeldick had stamped off in a huff, not even stopping to awaken Mr. Slig to say good-night.

He was so angry he gave little attention to the direction he took, and soon he noticed he had strayed off the road. He stopped and looked around, but it was snowing so hard he could not see far.

"The road must be over there by that big cottonwood tree," he said to himself, so he set off towards the tree. Presently he noticed footprints in the snow. They smelled slightly foxy. Mr. Nickeldick stopped in his tracks, and squinted ahead through the falling snow. He could see something a little way off. He never did know just what it was. It might have been a fox, or it might have been the stump of a tree. He had no desire to investigate—he bolted. Above all things, Mr. Nickeldick hated foxes, especially on lonely nights.

He hadn't the slightest idea where he was going. He was too scared to think about that. He ran until his side ached, and then he began to look for some place to hide and rest. In a moment he saw a hole in the snow, and without giving a thought as to where it might lead, he dashed head first into it. He ran only a few jumps when he stubbed his toe and fell to the ground. He rolled over and over, and suddenly burst through something into a lighted room.

Mr. Nickeldick blinked and looked around. He was sitting on the floor in the front of an open fireplace. There was a great hole in the ceiling through which he had fallen. An old lady ground squirrel was sitting in a comfortable rocking chair. She was crocheting violently and she never even looked up when Mr. Nickeldick entered. He was so astonished at the strange behavior he couldn't speak, so he sat staring at the old lady.

"Leave your overshoes in the kitchen," said the squirrel, never raising her eyes from the crocheting. "Hang your overcoat on the foot of the bed, and I'll put the tea kettle on in a few minutes."

"Leave your overshoes in the kitchen."

"I—I—I beg your pardon," said Mr. Nickeldick as he got up from the floor. "I lost my way and——"

"How?" asked the old squirrel, looking at Mr. Nickeldick for the first time. "I'm a little hard of hearin'."

"I BEG your pardon," answered Mr. Nickeldick, making a bow.

"Won't do you any good to be here," snapped the old lady, resuming her crocheting. "We never feed tramps."

"I'm not a tramp," bellowed Mr. Nickeldick at the top of his rabbit lungs. "I lost my way and fell into your house quite by accident. Nickeldick is my name. Alexander Nickeldick."

"Glad to meet you, Mr. Whittlestick," smiled the old lady, motioning towards a chair. "Won't you sit yourself down?"

Mr. Nickeldick thanked the squirrel and sat down in the chair, which had a neat cover crocheted all over it. He looked around and discovered almost everything in the room was covered with crocheting. The poker and shovel had their handles crocheted. A table was entirely hidden by a crocheted cover. There was a crocheted jacket on the clock; in fact, all the bric-a-brac was thoroughly crocheted in for the winter. Candlesticks, picture frames, doorknobs, and a globe of goldfish all had crocheted covers on them.

"Do you crochet everything?" shouted Mr. Nickeldick.

"Everything I can lay my hands on," answered the old lady, measuring Mr. Nickeldick up and down with her eye.

Mr. Nickeldick looked uneasy, and moved his chair near the doorway.

"I believe she'd crochet a cover over me, if she had half a chance," he said to himself.

"Well, I reckon we ought to have a cup of tea," said the old squirrel, putting down her crocheting. "I'll put on the kettle and fetch out a few cookies."

"That would be nice," said Mr. Nickeldick.

"What? What did you say about ice?" asked the squirrel.

"I said that would be nice," screamed Mr. Nickeldick at the top of his voice. He had forgotten the old lady was hard of hearing.

"Yes, if this weather keeps up we ought to have nice ice by morning," answered the squirrel as she took two cups out of a tiny corner cupboard.

She filled a small copper kettle with water, and hung it over the fire. Then she pulled up a little table that was covered with a tight-fitting crocheting, even the legs were covered by a sort of crocheted pants, and Mr. Nickeldick smiled to himself, for the table looked as though it was wearing a suit of knit underwear.

Next the squirrel set the two cups and saucers on the table and all of them were covered with neat crocheted jackets. She put some spoons on the table and they were covered with crocheting down to the bowl.

"I wonder if the cookies will be crocheted," thought Mr. Nickeldick, but he drew a sigh of relief when the old lady set a dish of cakes on the table—only the dish was crocheted.

"I like my tea strong," said the squirrel, as she took some tea out of a crochet covered tea can, and put it into a crocheted tea sop.

"Now, if you'll take your chair and draw nigh, we'll have a sup and a bite."

The old lady took the kettle off the fire and poured out two cups of tea. Mr. Nickeldick unfolded a crocheted napkin, and helped himself to the cookies.

"These are delightful cookies," said Mr. Nickeldick, biting into one.

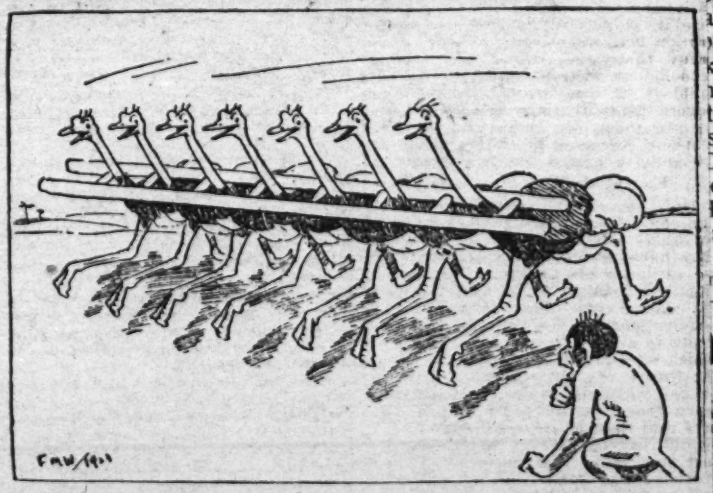

"Frightful!" exclaimed the old squirrel in astonishment. "Why, I thought they were pretty good."

"I said they were delightful!"

MR. MONK'S NEW ADVENTURES IN JUNGLEPOOL

Mr. Monk had a fearful time when a gang of out-of-work ostriches invaded his Labor Exchange. They demanded work at once—if not sooner—and their leader said they could do less work in more time than any other ostriches living. In view of this, Mr. Monk thought they ought to work for the Corporation. So he gave them a recommendation to the Clerk of Works.

Two days afterward, Mr. Monk saw the whole seven ostriches bringing a single ladder for a Corporation foreman. "My word!" exclaimed Mr. Monk, "they look as if they had worked for Corporations all their lives!"

:-: MR. NICKELDICK :-:

hastily bellowed Mr. Nickeldick into the old woman's ear.

"O! that's different," she giggled.

While they drank their tea, Mr. Nickeldick explained at the top of his voice how he had lost his way and how he had come to tumble in on the old lady.

"I'll send a man over to mend the ceiling."

"I LIVE OVER IN PUCKERBUSH," he screamed. "TWENTY-THREE SNUFFERS LANE, PUCKERBUSH."

"That's not far off," said the squirrel. "You just cut across the field and over the hill and in a few minutes you'll be home."

"I'll send a man over in the morning to mend the ceiling where I fell in," said Mr. Nickeldick.

"Never mind that," smiled the squirrel. "I was thinkin' I would crochet over the place—it needed fixin', anyhow."

When Mr. Nickeldick was about to leave, the old squirrel handed him a ball of crocheting cotton.

"Here," she said, "take this and unroll it as you walk along. By the time you have come to the end of the ball you'll be pretty nigh home. If you should get lost, all you'll have to do is to follow the string right back here."

"But I don't want to use your good crocheting cotton," yelled Mr. Nickeldick.

"Never mind that," answered the old lady, "it will take you about fifteen minutes to come to the end of the string. I'll wait about ten minutes more, and then I'll begin to crochet and in a short time I'll have it all crocheted back."

"That's a pretty good idea," yelled Mr. Nickeldick, putting the ball into his pocket. "You have been mighty nice to me."

"O, that's all right," cried the old squirrel as Mr. Nickeldick stepped out into the night. "Drop in again some time."

Mr. Nickeldick walked along until he came to the end of the string, then he dropped it on the ground, and by the time he had reached his home the old squirrel had crocheted it back into a jacket for the teakettle.

BY WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN

ss than one in ten of the children ho enter our graded school ever enter igh school, and not quite one in fifty nter college or university. As many ho enter college do not complete the ourse, I am not far from the truth hen I say that only about one young an in one hundred continues his edu-ation until he reaches the age—enty-one—when the law assumes hat his reason is mature. I am em-hasizing these statistics in order to how that we are indebted to others ore than to ourselves for our educa-ion. That which we do would not be one but for what others have already one. Even those who secure an edu-ation in spite of difficulties have re-eived from some one the idea that akes them appreciate the value of an ducation.

When we are born we find an edu-ational system here; we do not de-ise it, it was established by a gen-ration long since dead. When we are eady to attend school we find a choolhouse already built; we do not uild it, it was erected by the tax-ayers, many of whom are dead. When e are ready for instruction we find eachers prepared by others, many of hom have passed to their reward.

Educated Often Ungrateful.

How do we feel when we complete ur education? Do we count the cost o others and think of the sacrifices hey have made for our benefit? Do e estimate the strength that educa-ion has brought to us and feel that e should put that strength under eavier loads? We are raised by our tudy to an intellectual eminence from hich we can secure a clearer view of he future; do we feel that we should e like watchmen upon the tower and arn those less fortunate of the dan-ers that they do not yet discern? We hould, but do we? I venture to as-ert that more than nine out of ten f those who receive into their lives, nd profits by, the gift of education re as ungrateful as the nine lepers f whom the Bible tell us—they re-eive, they enjoy, but they give no hanks.

But it is even worse than this; the Bible does not say that any one of the nine lepers used for the injury of his fellows the strength that Christ gave back to him. All that is said is that they were ungrateful; but how about those who go out from our colleges and universities? Are not many of these worse than ungrateful? I would not venture to use my own language here; I will quote what others have said.

Wendell Phillips was one of the learned men of Massachusetts and a great orator. In his address on the "Scholar in a Republic," he said that "The people make history while the scholars only write it." And then he added, "part truly and part as colored by their prejudices."

Woodrow Wilson, while president of Princeton university, said:

"The great voice of America does not come from seats of learning. It comes in a murmur from the hills and woods, and the farms and factories and the mills, rolling on and gaining volume until it comes to us from the homes of common men. Do these murmurs echo in the corridors of our universities? I have not heard them."

President Roosevelt, while in the white house, presented an even stronger indictment against some of the scholars. In a speech delivered to law students at Harvard he declared that there was scarcely a great conspiracy against the public welfare that did not have Harvard brains behind it. He need not have gone to Harvard to utter this terrific indictment against college graduates; he might have gone to Yale, or Columbia, or Princeton, or to any other great university, or even to smaller colleges. It would not take long to correct the abuses of which the people complain but for the fact that back of every abuse are the hired brains of scholars who turn against society and use for society's harm the very strength that society has bestowed upon them.

Let me give you an important illustration that deals with the heart. I am interested in education; if I had my way every child in all the world would be educated. God forbid that I should draw a line through society and say that the children on one side shall be educated and the children on the other side condemned to the night of ignorance. I shall assume no such responsibility. I am anxious that my children and grandchildren shall be educated, and I do not desire for a child or grandchild of mine anything that I would not like to see every other child enjoy. Children come into the world without their own volition—they are here as a part of the Almighty's plan—and there is not a child born on God's footstool that has not as much right to all that life can give as your child or my child. Education increases one's capacity for service and thus enlarges the reward that one can rightfully draw from society; therefore, every one is entitled to the advantages of education.

There is no reason why every human being should not have both a good heart and a trained mind; but, if I were compelled to choose between the two, I would rather that one should have a good heart than a trained mind. A good heart can make a dull brain useful to society, but a bad heart cannot make a good use of any brain, however trained or brilliant.

Must Deal With Religion.

When we deal with the heart we must deal with religion, for religion controls the heart; and, when we consider religion we find that the religious environment that surrounds our young people is as favorable as their intellectual environment. As in the case of education, lack of appreciation may be due in part to lack of opportunity to make comparison. If we visit Asia, where the philosophy of Confucius controls, or where they worship Buddha, or follow Mahomet, or observe the forms of the Hindu religion, we find that except where they have borrowed from Christian nations, they have made no progress in fifteen hundred years.

Here, all have the advantage of Christian ideals, and yet, according to statistics, something more than half the adult males of the United States are not connected with any religious organization. Some scoff at religion, and a few are outspoken enemies of the church. Can they be blind to the benefits conferred by our churches? Security of life and property is not entirely due to criminal laws, to a sheriff in each county, and to an occasional policeman. The conscience comes first; the law comes afterward.

Law is but the crystallization of conscience; moral sentiment must be created before it can express itself in the form of a statue. Every preacher and priest, therefore, whether his congregation be large or small, who quickens the conscience of those who hear him helps the community. Every church of every denomination, whether important or unimportant, that helps to raise the moral standards of the land benefits all who live under the flag, whether they acknowledge their obligations or not.

But lack of appreciation on the part of those outside the church would not disturb us so much if all the church members lived up to their obligations. How much is it worth to one to be born again? Of what value is it to have had the heart touched by the Savior and so changed that it loves the things it used to hate and hates the things it formerly loved? Of what value is it to have one's life so transformed that, instead of resembling a stagnant pool, it becomes like a living spring, giving forth constantly that which refreshes and invigorates? What is it worth to the Christian, and what is it worth to those about him, to have his life brought by Christ into such vital living contact with the Heavenly Father, that that life becomes the means through which the goodness of God pours out to the world?

Church Should Solve Problems.

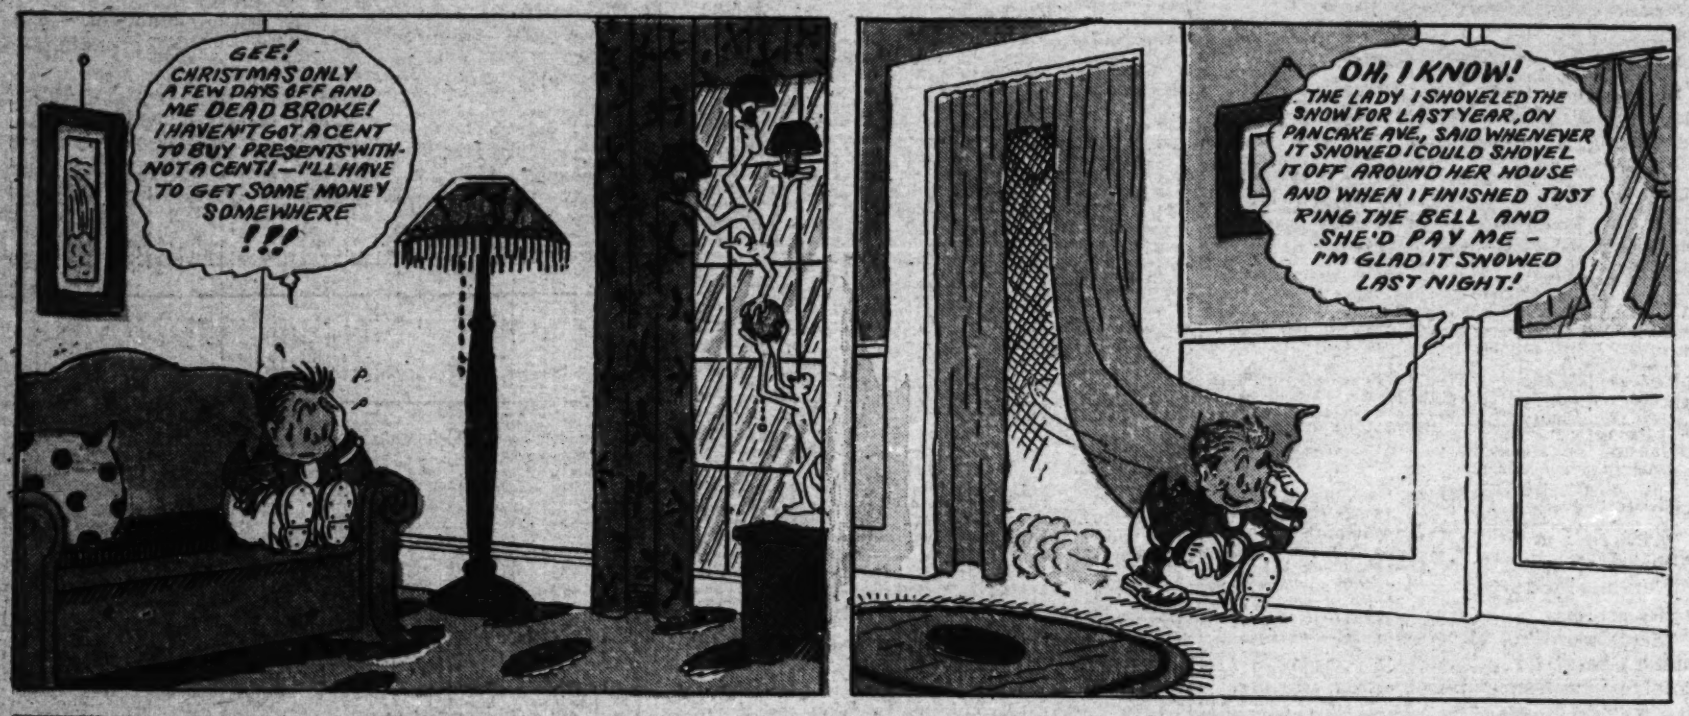

But, I go a step farther and ask whether the church as an organization—not any one denomination, but the church universal—appreciates its great opportunities, its tremendous responsibility, and the infinite power behind it. If the church is what we believe it to be it must be prepared to grapple with every problem, individual and social, whether it affects only a community or involves a state, a nation, or a world. There must be some intelligence large enough to direct the world or the world will run amuck. We believe that God is the only intelligence capable of governing the world, and God must act through the church or outside of it. If the church is not big enough to act as the mouthpiece of the Almighty—not in the sense that the church ought to exercise governmental authority, but its members, seeking light from the Heavenly Father through prayer, should be able to act wisely as citizens—if, I repeat, the church is not big enough to deal with the problems that confront the world, then the church must give way to some more competent organization.

Christians have no other alternative; they must believe that the teachings of Christ can be successfully applied to every problem that the individual has to meet and to every problem with which governments have to deal. I have in another lecture in this series called attention to Christ's all-inclusive claim set forth in the closing verses of the last chapter of Matthew, but I must repeat it here because it is the basis of what I desire to say on this branch of the subject. Christ declared that all power had been given into His hands; He sent his followers out to make disciples of all nations; and He promised to be with them always, even unto the end of the world. If the church takes Christ at His word and claims to be His representative on earth it can not shirk its duty.

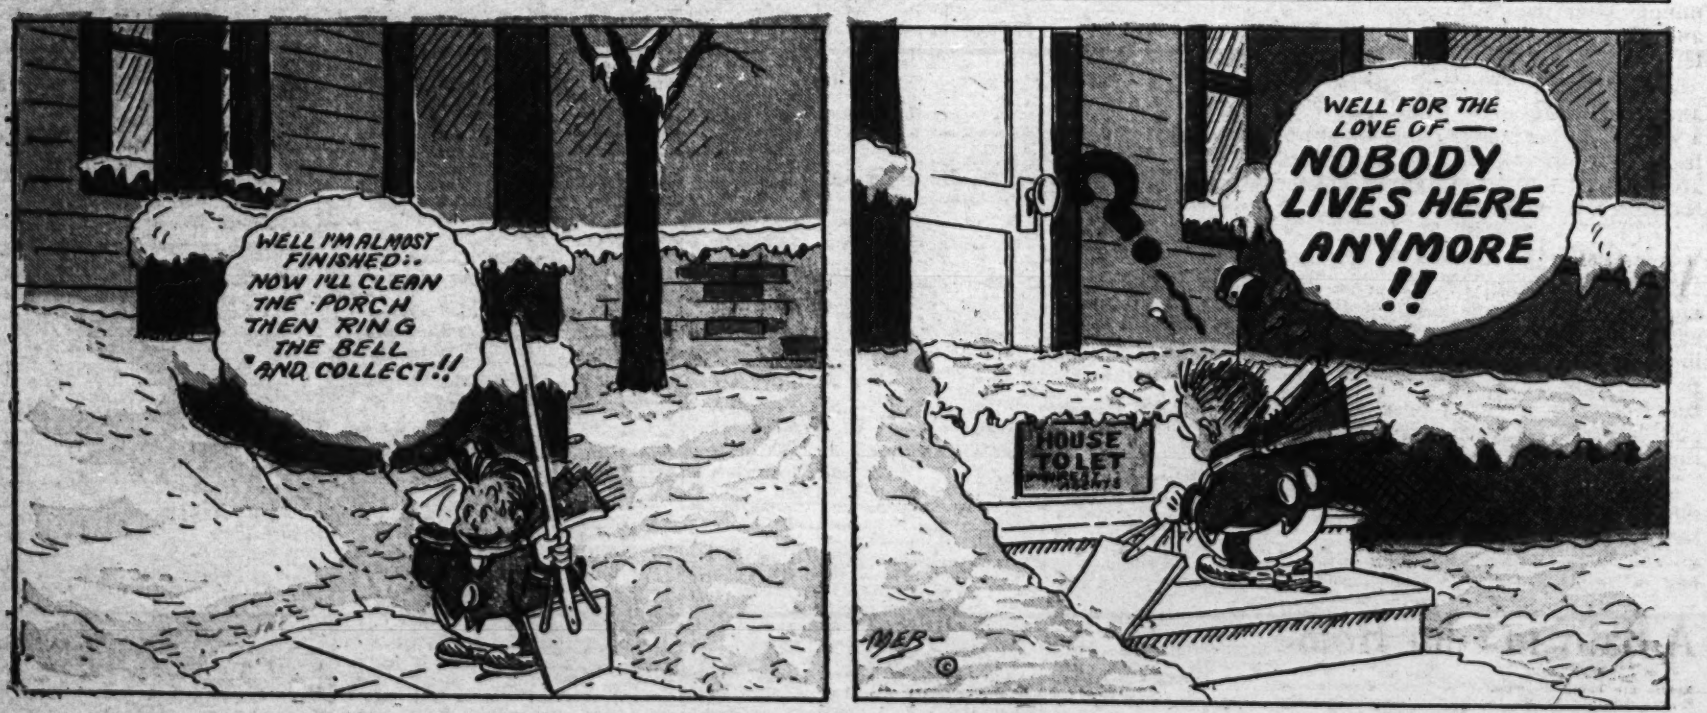

If Christians are as grateful to God, to Christ, and to the Bible as they should be, they will give attention to every problem that affects the individual, the community, and the larger units of society and government. They will consider it their duty to carry their religion into business and politics and to apply the teachings of Christ to every subject that affects human welfare. In another lecture I call attention to the church's duty to reconcile capital and labor, and to teach God's law of rewards.

for the sake of his unclean lust and passion.

The sultan hesitated a little.

"There is no doubt of it?" he demanded. "If he should be innocent—in spite of appearances——"

"Read the poem, Heaven Born! The poem in which the jewel was wrapped!"

He read a few lines:

Since my sight fell on those eyes of thine,
(Green as this emerald which I bring to thee)
Never can I forget those lovely eyes of thine.

"You are convinced, Heaven Born?"

"Yes. The proof is conclusive."

She laughed. She leaned over the unconscious Kaboolian. She spat into the snoring, upturned face.

"Dog!" she cried. "Filth spawned dog!"

"A dog," rejoined Abdul Hamid, "that shall be dead and buried inside of twelve hours!"

At a word from him, two of the eunuchs picked up the unconscious man.

"Take him to the palace," he directed, "into the old dungeon. Have him well chained, well guarded. See to it that he communicates with nobody."

"Listen is obey, Padishah!"

They carried him out, while the sultan addressed another servant:

"Ibrahim Nedjiff!"

"Padishah?"

"Send word to the commander in chief to be at the palace at 6 o'clock tomorrow morning, and to bring the officers who compose the secret court-martial. Tell him to have a firing squad ready."

He turned to Bibi Fathma, explaining that he had taken time by the forelock and that a few hours earlier he had given an order declaring martial law.

"It is the only way," he added. "If this case should come before the civil courts the news will become public property at once. Kaboolian is pro-British. The British ambassador will protest and threaten, and—yes, yes! this is the best way! Let the British find out—after Kaboolian is dead."

He kissed the gypsy's hand. 'Good-night, lotus petal!"

"O, will you not stay with me, Heaven Born?"

"No. I have work to do. Several firmans to sign."

"And—" her heart beat a little faster—"O'Malley Pasha?"

"Do you worry, child. I shall grant him his life, because of his name and his ancestors' loyalty."

. . . . . .

The next morning, when the Irishman called at the Dolma Bagtcheh palace expecting to be given the firman authorizing him to arrest Prince Tcherkessky and Kibrizli Pasha, he found there instead a firman dismissing him from the service, in disgrace, forever.

It came as a thunderbolt. It could not be true. He must have been mistaken. Again he read through the order. There was no doubt of it:

"Dismissed . . . cashiered . . . forever in disgrace . . . disloyal . . ."; and the sultan's seal and signature.

"Disloyal!"—the word burned itself into his brain.

"Disloyal!"—and he was a Wild Goose of Limerick; and his motto was: "Semper et ubique fidelis—always and everywhere faithful!"

He stood quite still. He stared into the distance out of his brown, gold flecked eyes. Something naked reached out and touched his soul, leaving the chill of an indescribable uneasiness. The house of his life was tumbling about his ears.

Why? Why? What was the reason?

His throat felt dry. His hands trembled a little. A great rage rose like a mighty wind in his brain, suddenly, dramatically, scorching, all sobering impulses. He took a step forward.

He was going to force his way into the presence of the sultan, to face him with the one question: "Why?"

THEN he remembered. He shrugged his shoulders. There would be no arguing, no pleading, no demanding justice. He knew that. He would not even be able to obtain an audience with Abdul Hamid, so as to ask for an explanation. Nor would the commander in chief or any of the other high officials be able or willing to tell him. Their mouths would be sealed. Before this he had seen loyal men disgraced in court. There were always the coiling palace intrigues—the gliding, monstrous lies—the curse of the house of Othman.

His career was ended. He was dismissed in disgrace.

This, then, was a fact, grim, hard, incontrovertible.

And still he wondered: Why? Why? Why? What had happened?

The eunuch who had given him the order was an acquaintance of long standing. He seemed to read what was going on in the other's mind.

"Pasha!" he said softly.

"I am a Pasha no longer," came the dry, bitter rejoinder.

"I know. And I also know the reason."

"Tell me!"

"The Padishah has discovered that Tcherkessky is innocent."

"What?" exclaimed O'Malley, utterly amazed. "Say that again."

"Innocent!" the negro repeated. "The gossip is all over the palace—they say you accused the Circassian falsely because of your jealousy—over a woman, an American."

"It is a lie!"

"Perhaps. Perhaps not. Who am I to decide? But the Padishah has decided. And his word is law."

"But who is responsible for this lie? Who told it to the sultan? Who was clever and important enough to make him believe it?"

"I have no idea," replied the negro. "Some of the people know. But the sultan has forbidden them to speak. He wants no more scandal. You see—he thinks there will be trouble enough when the other news comes out."

"What other news?"

"That Yar Ali Bey's real murderer has been found. They tried him early this morning by court-martial. He has already been executed and buried."

The Irishman's brain was in a whirl.

"The real murderer?" he stammered. "Already court-martialed—executed? And who—who——?"

"Zado Kaboolian, the Armenian banker, effendi."

"Dear Saint Patrick!" O'Malley crossed himself. "What a frightful blunder! Kaboolian had nothing to do with it. He is—was—innocent. And he was an important figure in the native Christian community, even more important in international finance. The British will be furious. The foreign newspaper correspondents will spread and embroider the tale as propaganda against Turkey—and inside of forty-eight hours Zado Kaboolian's execution will have grown into a massacre of thousands of innocent Armenians, with all the details—elaborate and lying. It will be oil on the Young Turk fire. They will use it as an example. They will say that an autocratic government which executes an innocent man——"

"He was not innocent," interrupted the other. "The proof against him was conclusive."

Indeed, Zado Kaboolian had been unable to prove his innocence.

Turn where he might, plead as he might, say what he might, there had been all about him choking him, killing him, this bitter, stark, relentless wall composed of emerald and poem. There had always been the question of the cross-examiners, challenging, sardonic:

"If you or somebody in your employ were not the assassin, where did you get this emerald carved in the shape of a parrot, this ancient crown jewel of the house of Othman? Did you buy it? No! Did you find it? No! Did somebody put it in pawn with you? No! Therefore—guilty!"

And when he had replied that—yes, yes,—he had written the poem to Bibi Fathma and—yes, yes, yes!—had given her an emerald, but a different stone, a much smaller and less precious stone, they had laughed at him, had confronted him with Bibi Fathma's testimony and that of her husband and her servants. They had given oath by Allah and the Prophet that Kaboolian had brought the emerald.

"May my right hand wither, may I eat dirt if I lie!" the gypsy had exclaimed.

How else, she had demanded, would the jewel be in her possession? Was she herself, belike, the assassin? Why would she accuse an innocent man—"a generous, kindly friend who loaned me thousands of piasters?"

ing, but we are now offered $60,000 for the Main street lot we just bought for you for $40,000. Shall we take it?"

"Yes!" exclaimed the doctor, a bit shortly, and resumed the joke. A minute later the climax was reached and there was an explosion of laughter.

"The doctor said just two words and made $20,000—that's $10,000 a word!" exclaimed someone who had listened to the two rather impatient affirmatives the real estate man had succeeded in wresting from him.

WHEN the waters in various Georgia streams reached almost unprecedented heights in the early part of the year—bear distinctly in mind that this was in the EARLY part of the year—they lapped the bases of certain Indian burial mounds and brought to light for the first time interesting objects and treasures.

A good portion of an Indian mound on the Flint river near Reynolds is said to have been washed away by the encroaching waters, and quite a number of relics were exposed. Among the objects found after the waters had subsided was a water jar of ingenious design in the shape of a dog. Primitive people, believing in a future life, in obedience to that deep instinct implanted by nature itself, had placed with their dead in that mound bows and arrows and food and water, for use when the departed reached the happy hunting grounds.

It is said that this water jar, in exact and very skillful imitation of a canine—literally, a clay dog—is one of only two jars of this type found in Indian mounds in the United States.

W. R. C. ("DICK") SMITH, head of the largest trade paper publishing organization in the south, president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, past district governor of Rotary, and one or two other things, has been plugging away in the newspaper and publishing business for 35 years. He confesses he made an early start.

His first work, as a boy, was selling subscriptions. He worked his way up, step by step, job by job, and in time became a boss himself. He has been a citizen of Atlanta nearly a quarter of a century and is a dyed-in-the-wool enthusiast on Atlanta, Georgia and the southeast. His publishing interests have steadily expanded, and now the organization which he heads issues five important trade magazines.

THURSDAY night at the Writers' club was the night of the dinner given by Warner Brothers to show Hollywood's elite the completed "Lady Windermere's Fan." Following an elaborate turkey dinner served to 200 of Hollywood's notables the picture was shown and several members of the cast rose to receive the applause of the audience. Roland Colman was there handsome in dinner clothes; May McAvoy made her bows and Claire Windsor appeared in lieu of Bert Lytell, her husband, who was detained in studio work and was unable to receive his share of praise in person. Claire was gorgeously gowned in a black silk velvet creation with a low vest shaped decollete filled in with rose georgette and lace while the skirt was hemmed with rose georgette which extended up into the skirt in points. A small velvet hat accompanied the dress and a velvet coat trimmed in ermine made a pleasing effect.

Carmel Myers appeared in one of the new enormous hats, green velvet in a deep olive shade. A seal wrap was worn over flesh chiffon.

Kathleen Key, one of the few girls who retains her long hair, had it dressed in a coronet braid with the ears well covered and short curls clustering about her face. A gray silk covered with black silk net and ruffles of black chantilly was very flattering and was covered with a seal wrap with chinchilla bandings at the collar, cuffs and hem. A scarlet lining helped make her a vivid picture.

TUESDAY evening at the Ambassador's Cocoanut Grove showed a good turnout of picture folk. Syd Chaplin was doing the busy bee act circulating from table to table wherever there were particularly delightful feminine morsels. Lucille Le Seuer, now Joan Crawford, was gowned in an exquisite black velvet with a deep V decollete in the back and front outlined in white satin binding. A cluster of silver grapes, white roses and leaves depended from the left side of the waist and as her dancing partner became playful he took the garland and tucked it around his neck in Lucullan manner. Sally Rand, in flesh georgette, danced by laughing at Joan's astonishment. Mr. and Mrs. Reid Howes were there, Mrs. Howes wearing one of the smart new evening hats to match her gown which was of pink chiffon with sleeves tight to the elbow and then hanging loose.

Man" still delighting large audiences at the Forty-ninth Street theater, they're now putting on at the Klaw a double bill of "Androcles and the Lion" and "The Man of Destiny." No matter how much you might dislike this playwright's work, you must at least remember his name is not spelled "Pshaw."

I very much enjoyed the combination of these two plays in one evening. The situation persisted in reminding of the "Cavaleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci," one I've been trained for in your auditorium. Only in the guild days, the same people appear in each and you see your favorites in different roles just as you did when you had your stock company to weep and be coy over.

You are, of course, familiar with "Androcles and the Lion" and "The Man of Destiny." Of course you are, the very idea! And to tell you they're both done extremely well is perfectly obvious, since you've already been told they're Theater Guild productions. Clare Eames, so lately in "Lucky Sam McCarver," continues to make you realize what a marvelous actress she is with the very different performance she gives in each play.

Tom Powers, who hails from Kentucky, is also excellent in both productions, particularly as Napoleon in "The Man of Destiny." Young Mr. Powers is one of those southerners who has made for himself quite an enviable record on Broadway in an amazingly short time. His last year's performance in "The Wild Duck" will not soon be forgotten.

At the invitation dress-rehearsal on the Sunday night before the Monday night premiere, I saw many notables at "Androcles" and "The Man of Destiny." In the smoking room during intermission, I collided with Flora Finch. This favorite oldtimer of the movies gave me one of those idiotic smiles which has amassed her a small fortune, in response to one of mine which has brought me nothing.

The Alfred Lunts (Lynn Fontanne) stars of "Arms and the Man" were no doubt seeing what Shaw was like from this side of the footlights. Peggy Wood, who has been enjoying a few weeks' return engagement in "Candida," was doing likewise. Glenn Anders, who just closed in "They Knew What They Wanted" at this theater, was spending his evening in familiar surroundings, while Mr. Arlen's representative for the night was Margalo Gillmore, the divinely pretty Venice of "The Green Hat." Mary Ellis and Basil Sydney, the modern clothes "Hamlet," were together.

Laurette Taylor is now to be seen in a new comedy labeled quite simply, "In the Garden." It is a rare, quaint and wistful comedy, one that only a man here and a woman there are going to like, but they, tremendously. When I tell you the whole play is based on somebody's assumption that "every wife is at heart another man's mistress" you'll say, "Oh, another one of those—" and throw down the paper in disgust (if you've gotten this far). Then, after you've thought things over and decided there might—er—be something—er—in it you shouldn't read about, I must blast your hopes with the statement that Miss Taylor's new play is emphatically a clean one and totally lacking in green hatish situations. Were I inclined to lean toward the poetic, I might suggest this play coming from such a source is like the rose springing from the dirt. On second thought, I'd best refrain from the poetry.

This refreshing bit of playwriting is so unlike the ordinary play of today that I could only make things worse by outlining its plot to you. Certainly the well-nigh perfect cast which interprets it wrings out of it every bit there is in it. Miss Taylor, one of America's really fine actresses, is marvelous as the wife. Frank Conroy handles the difficult role of husband in a masterly manner and contributes, I thought, an excellent piece of work. Louis Calhern in a "Cobra" sort of part, avails himself of every opportunity and gives a very splendid performance.

It is to be hoped Miss Taylor's play will be a success, for it is entirely deserving of being one. Then, too, I am becoming somewhat alarmed at the number of plays the Plymouth theater has already housed this season. Here it is only December, and this is either the third or fourth play which has already made its rejected bid at this theater.

* * * *

"The City Chap" is another tuneful musical comedy which should please you. This offering chances to be a musicalized version of that old favorite, "The Fortune Hunter," a play stock companies had rather do than eat. It's quite the thing, you know, to take an old non-musical play, put a few jingly tunes to it, and in the general proceedings see how completely you can lose the original plot. However, "The City Chap" is unusual in that respect, for "The Fortune Hunter" makes itself evident at all times.

The music is by Jerome Kern, who did the score for "Sunny." While I don't like the music in the new show quite as well as I do the "Sunny" melodies, I've still no kick to make. "Walking Home With Josie" is, to say the least, catchy, and chances to be that number which everybody back-stage except the scene shifters come out and do a specialty, too.

"Sympathetic Someone" is another piece which is not to be overlooked.

Richard "Skeet" Gallagher is the featured player, and a more ideal person for the part could not have been located. No, he is not the Gallagher of Gallagher and Shean. He possesses a very magnetic way of putting over his songs, dances and comedy, and his very pleasing appearance would never be held against him. Mr. Gallagher appeared a few years ago with Elizabeth Hines in "Marjorie" and played the William Kent part in the Chicago company of "Rose Marie."

Like practically every star I have interviewed, Mr. Gallagher told me he once played an engagement at your Forsyth theater, in the days when you had seven acts of big-time vaudeville. At one time or another, it seems, they've all played either at the Forsyth or the Orpheum. Wasn't it fortunate your vaudeville had been removed from that latter theater before the embarrassing days of "Livery Stable Blues"?

* * * *

By the way, you may add to the list of music you should be fox-trotting to, a very pretty thing called "Castles In the Air." The intoxicating "Song of the Vagabonds" from "The Vagabond King" is being played everywhere, and only a passing (?) spell of lunacy could have prevented my mentioning it before. "A Cup of Coffee, a Sandwich and You-oo" is very popular with the whistlers and the hummers. People with or without voices seem unable to resist these "You-oo" songs. This particular one has the inane, silly sort of words which can be crooned with no little success during the deadlier moments of a dinner party.

ARE YOU A GOOD HUNTER?

The other day we went hunting, and our guide pointed to a flock of ducks in the air and remarked: "I can tell you exactly how many birds there are in that flock. There are just eighty-four. If you don't believe it, count 'em yourself." Unfortunately the ducks wouldn't wait to be counted, so we had to rely on the guide's word as to his uncanny accuracy of eye.

Here is a chance, though, for you to prove that you are better than our guide. Hang this page on the wall and look at it for about ten seconds; then write down your guess as to how many ducks there are in the air. Get your friends to try it and see which comes nearest to estimating the correct number. It will give you an accurate index on your power to estimate numbers in groups and at the same time make a fascinating game.

FROM THE NATIONAL PUZZLERS' LEAGUE

Below we present what the National Puzzlers' League calls a "Half Square." This is a word puzzle in the shape of a triangle, composed of words that read the same across as down. The words are defined below. The figures mean as follows: No. 1 is the top line; it reads across and down in a word of nine letters, as indicated by the diagram, in which each O represents a letter. No. 2 is the second line, a word of eight letters, which reads across on the second line and down on the second vertical column. No. 3 is the third line, and so on down to No. 9, which is simply defined as "a letter," it being the last letter of No. 1.

Here is the diagram, and below are the definitions:

O O O O O O O O O
O O O O O O O O
O O O O O O O
O O O O O O
O O O O O
O O O O
O O O
O O
O

DEFINITIONS:

1. Every night.
2. Colored like ochre.
3. One who alters.
4. Times, as expressed by the forms of verbs.
5. Forces onward.
6. Hinds or does.
7. A knot or knob in wood.
8. Similar to.
9. A letter.

THE JUNGLE HANDICAP

A Problem by Sam Loyd

If a giraffe can beat a rhinoceros by one-eighth of a mile in a two-mile race, and the rhinoceros could beat a hippopotamus by one-quarter of a mile in a two-mile race, then by what distance could the giraffe beat the hippopotamus in a two-mile race?

Now don't jump at conclusions in answering this little problem, for there is really more to it than would appear at first blush.

MORE CRYPTOGRAPHY

A member of our staff wrote us in reply to the letter of Mr. W. J., published last week, the following communication:

To the Editor of Red Magic:

Yours truly,

W. M. L.

We hasten to print it, hoping that our readers will enjoy it as much as we did. It is a trifle stiffer than last week's letter, but should yield to a little energy. By the way—we hope that our readers who like this most fascinating branch of puzzling will write us—in cryptography—and tell us about it. Remember the rules:

1. Each cryptogram must be straight letter substitution. The same letter must be used throughout for the same character.

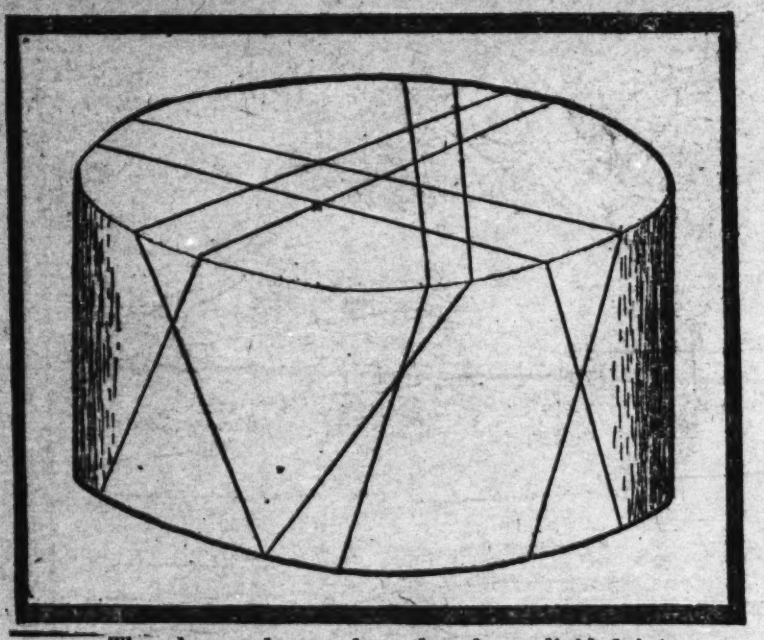

2. Punctuation must be clearly indicated.

3. No letter may represent itself. A, for instance, cannot equal A.

These are the rules of cryptography as laid down by the National Puzzlers' League, who are authorities on the subject.

If you like cryptograms, send 'em in.

SAM LOYD'S CHEESE PUZZLE

The cheese shown above has been divided into a number of pieces with six straight cuts of a knife. How many of you can tell just how many pieces there are? It is a nice little problem in visualization. See if you can imagine the cuts and count the pieces truly.

ANSWERS FROM LAST WEEK

THE CRYPTOGRAM

"Do you think it would be a good idea to publish code puzzles and cryptograms regularly? I, for one, find great pleasure in solving them and I believe many others among your readers would also appreciate them."

We decided, as we told you last week, that the single letters must be either I or A. We found one word MXQJ—which ended with J, which was one of the single letters. As it was very improbable that there would be a four-letter word ending in I, while there are comparatively many which end in A, we called the cryptic letter J as A. M, therefore, was I. Returning to MQXJ and substituting, we got I— —A. What could it be but IDEA? That gave us two more letters: Q equals D, and X equals E. We hunted for a word containing these symbols. The first word in the cryptogram was QN. As Q is D, that gave us D—. That could be nothing but DO, so we wrote N equals O. We now had the cipher equivalents of A, E, I, O and D. We looked and found the word OXJQ XOE. Putting our known letters for the symbols we had —EADE— —. We took a chance on READERS, and substituting showed that we were right. After that the rest of the cryptogram was easy.

We could have counted our letters and calculated their frequency, of course, but with two one-letter words staring us in the face that would have been a waste of time. As a matter of fact, X led the field with nineteen repetitions, which would have made us pretty sure that it was E; but the other process showed the same result in less time.

What were your clues? We want to receive letters in cryptography here, for our own pleasure and that of our readers.

Turn the picture upside down; you will see the master's head immediately to the right of the barn, while the dame's shoe is in the tree just to his right. Now turn the picture right side up again, and you will see the dame's head between the stovepipe and the barn.

WHAT IS WRONG?

Runner on indoor track with spiked shoes; boxing glove on wrong; boxer's shoes not mates; weights on dumbbell not equal size; Indian clubs should not be under basket; football used for basketball; basket off centre; lights should be covered; window should be screened; one dumbbell has no holder; window lock wrong; only one handle on vaulting horse; flying rings not mates; one ring higher than the other; "Bulletin" misspelled; "Director" misspelled; rope on punching bag too long; only one brace on horizontal bar; no turnbuckle on bar brace; pulley weights should be up instead of down; no rope on one pulley; basketball player's stockings not mates.

BARBER, BARBER, SHAVE A PIG

Barber, barber, shave a pig,
How many hairs to make a wig?
Four and twenty, that's enough—
Give the poor barber a pinch of snuff.

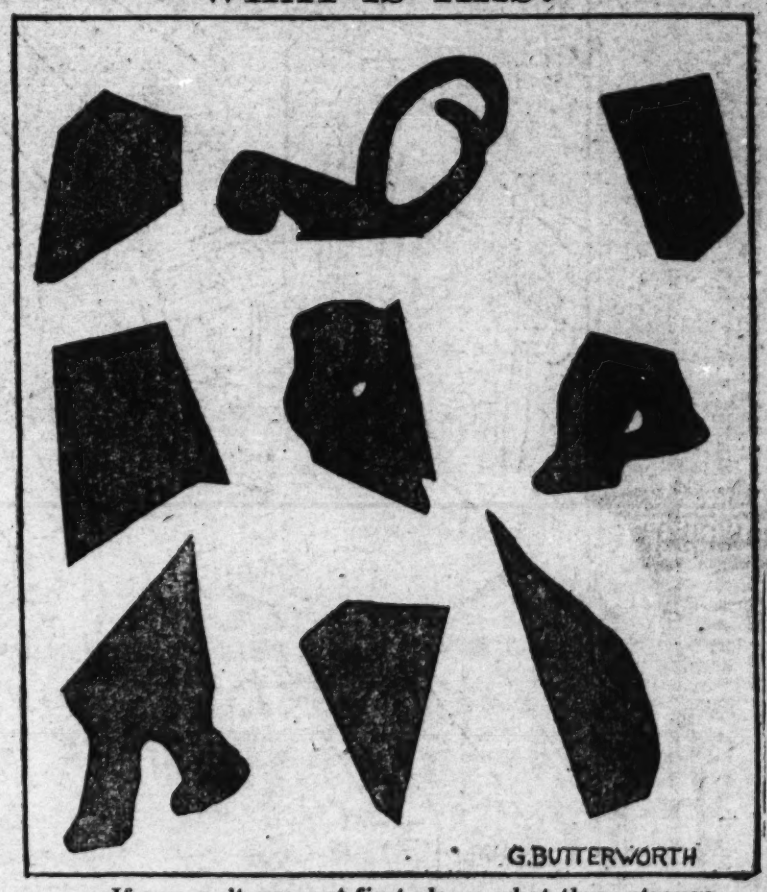

That's the way it was in the Mother Goose rhyme. Here we see the barber at his trade, working away to earn his pinch of snuff. There are three other pigs hidden in the picture. Can you find them?

CAN YOU DRAW THIS?

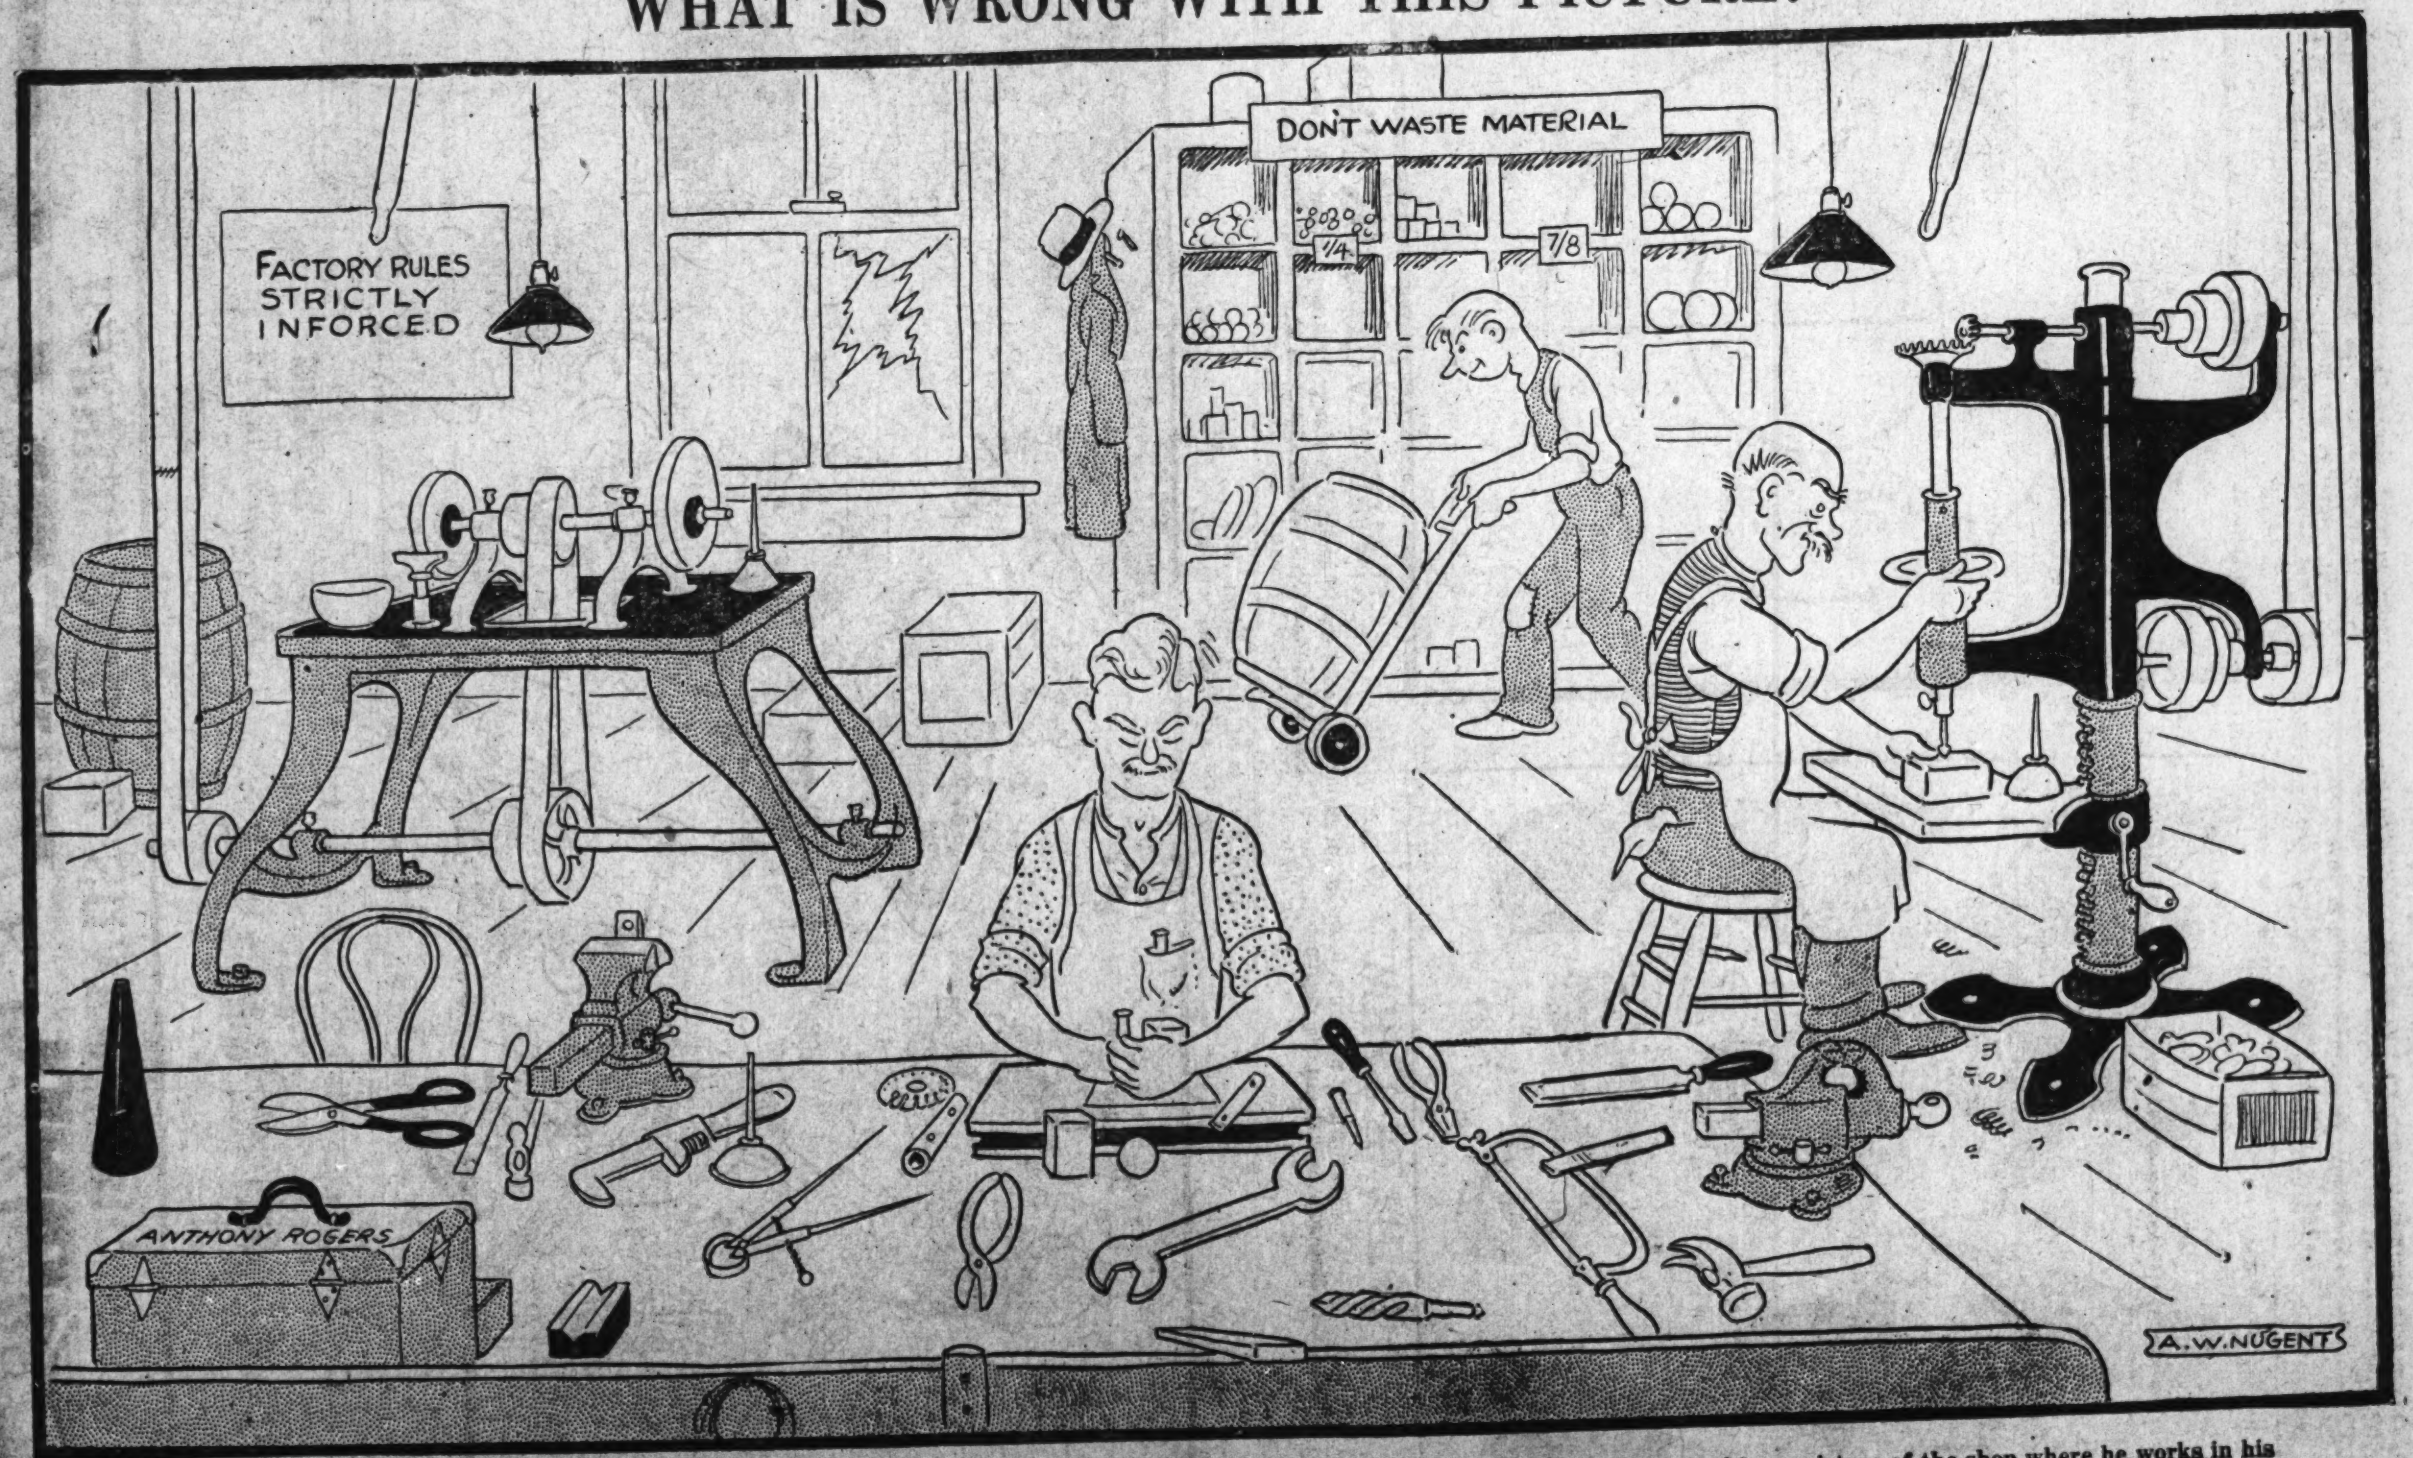

Get your pencil and your brains busy—here is a good puzzle for both of them. See if you can draw the figure shown above without taking your pencil off the paper, without crossing a line, and without retracing a line. There is no trick or folding to this puzzle—it can be done in one continuous line.

WHAT IS THIS?

If you can't guess at first glance what these strange looking pieces represent, there is an easy way to find out. Get your scissors and cut each piece out carefully and neatly, and see if you can put them together properly. If you succeed you will have made a picture of a very strange monster indeed.

WHAT IS WRONG WITH THIS PICTURE?

Our artist confessed to us the other day that he was a mechanic. We hope that he's a better mechanic than his drawing shows, for in making a picture of the shop where he works in his odd moments he made seventeen mistakes. For example, the vise on the right end of the work bench has no handle. Can you find the other sixteen errors?
